SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We have received our usual files of Bombay papers up to the 9th December, and from Calcutta to the 29th of the previous month. The news is decidedly satisfactory. On the 18th Nov. Colonel Brind, acting under Brigadier Troup's orders, came up with a strong body of rebels near Mithowlie, and, after two hours' struggle, drove them from the ground, killing a considerable number of them, and capturing nine guns. His own loss was no more than two Europeans and four natives killed, and double that number wounded. On the following day the Brigadier in person fell upon another band of insurgents near Jindorea, whom he utterly discomfited, and took eight guns. The British lost one Carabineer killed, and three artillerymen and four or five irregular horsemen wounded. On the 21st some 4,500 rebels attempted to dispute General Grant's passage of the Goomtee, but were soon forced to fly, leaving 100 dead bodies on the field and six guns. Three days later a still more signal success was achieved by the Commander in Chief himself. After a forced march of sixty-one miles in sixty hours the hardy veteran overtook the rabble army of Beni Mahdo Sing, estimated at 7,000 men, and speedily drove them out of the jungles into the open plain. The horse artillery and cavalry then galloped to the front and pursued the fugitives with unrelenting fury. At least 500 were slain, and eight guns captured, three of which were brass. This decisive action took place at Dhoondea Khara, opposite Futtehpore, and resulted in the complete overthrow of the only coherent mass of rebels remaining to the south of the Gogra. The two leaders sought safety in separate flight, Beni Mahdo keeping to the river, while Oomrao Sing struck off towards Cawnpore, though certainly with no intention of visiting that station. After this brilliant passage of arms, Lord Clyde proceeded to Lucknow without encountering further opposition.

Tantia Topee has escaped into Guzerat, baffling every effort of his pursuers to overtake him. On the 25th November, he stood at bay with 3,000 men, before 250 Europeans and 150 native sowars under Major Sutherland. Tantia chose a favourable post for his last stand, occupying the heights of Rajpore and commanding with his guns the narrow road by which alone he could be attacked. But a sudden and impetuous charge carried his guns almost without a casualty, and he himself fled across the Nerbudda and passed into Guzerat. He was not, however, permitted to wander at large unmolested. On the 1st December Brigadier Parke forced him to an engagement at Oodeypore, about fifty miles eastward of Baroda, and cut up three hundred of his followers with very trifling loss on his own part. Further pursuit for the moment was impossible, as his men had covered two hundred miles of jungle in eight days. A sort of panic is said to have been exhibited at Baroda in consequence of Tantia's near approach, though it was known that he had lost all his guns, and that his followers were a disheartened and disorganized rabble.

Brigadier Douglas on his part has been doing good yeoman service in the Patna district. On the 25th November he fell upon a party of 300 fugitive sepoys, of whom forty were left dead upon the ground, the survivors throwing away their arms to accelerate their flight. A few days previously fifty sepoys were put to the sword by a detachment from Mirzapore. The ex-King of Delhi is reported to have reached that station, on his way—says rumour.

The Indian Government appears to regard the rebellion as already extinct in the Benares, Allahabad, and Rohilkund divisions. Martial law, at least, no longer exists, and "arms give place to the toga."

—to Calcutta and Rangoon.

The tranquillity of our Burmese provinces has been disturbed by an oriental Masaniello. A fisherman named Shwe Hla having gathered together a band of ruffians, took possession of the small station of Twantay, after a skirmish in which Mr. Lewis, the British magistrate, was slightly wounded, and his nephew, or cousin, mortally so. The patriot, fanatic, or fool, has since been captured and is to be brought to trial.

In the Nizam's dominions the Rohillas have again been troublesome, and have plundered the city of Gundakheir, on the Godavery. Lord Harris was about to embark on board a steamer at Calicut, with the intention of proceeding to Ceylon for the restoration of his health. A prompt return to his native land seems more desirable, for these are no times to entrust important presidencies to valetudinary governors.

We regret to learn that Captain Shepherd has been compelled to resign his seat in the Council of India, in consequence of ill-health.

It is said that the Government purpose to transfer the library and museum at the East India House to the British Museum, though it is not stated what rooms are assignable for the reception of these treasures. We trust they will not be packed away in cases, and left to mould in a cellar.

In our next number will be given the Index to the Indian Mail for the year 1858.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 2nd and 17th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 9th and 24th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency, or the lower provinces of Bengal. Mails for Calcutta, Ceylon, Madras and China, leave Southampton on the 4th and 20th of the month, except when these dates fall on a Sunday: in that case they leave on Saturday. These mails are made up in London on the morning of the day of sailing.

Mails are despatched to Bombay via Southampton by the Australian steamers, which start on the 12th and 27th of each month. By this route Letters and Newspapers are conveyed direct to Alexandria, and thence forwarded to Bombay, together with the next mail from Marseilles.

Newspapers, not exceeding 4 oz., Three-pence each. Books under 1 lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional 1 lb. an additional 1s.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

From Allahabad, 27th Nov.
From G. F. Edmonstone to Lord Elphinstone.
The Nawab of Banda arrived in General Michel's camp on the evening of the 19th, and stated Tania Topee and the Rao Sahib have not gone to Scindwa, but crossed the Bombay Road towards Furranjee. The intelligence of the recent surrender of the Nawab of Banda has just been confirmed by a message, dated 20th November, from General Michel's camp.

From Indore, Sunday, 28th Nov.
From Sir R. Hamilton to Lord Elphinstone.
Tania and the rebels have recrossed the Nerbudda near Chikulda, and are moving towards Amjhare.

The following intelligence has been received from Lucknow:—On the 21st General Grant recrossed the river Goomtee without opposition from the enemy. The enemy, four thousand five hundred strong, fled, losing one hundred men and six guns, our loss two wounded.

We have just heard from Lucknow that Brigadier Troup's column on the 18th attacked and defeated the rebels under Ferozeshah and Bukail Khan, and took nine guns, our loss two Europeans and six Natives killed and wounded.

From Allahabad, 28th Nov.
From G. F. Edmonstone to Bombay, to Lord Elphinstone.

The following intelligence is supplied by Sir R. Hamilton:—

The names of places are not all traceable. Major Sutherland, with a company of the 92nd, and fifty men of the 71st, on camels, and Captain Helbert, with some Sowars of my escort, came on Tania Topee's force leaving Rajpore, killed forty of the enemy, and took two guns they had taken from Kundwa.

The pursuit was kept up when the information left, and the rebels were marching for Burwanee. Captain Keatinge, with Brigadier-Gen. Parke's column, arrived at Julwana and pushed on to reinforce Major Sutherland. General Michel at Daisgaum will reach Julwana to-morrow.

From Sir R. Shakespear, dated Baroda, 3rd Dec.

Brigadier Parke writes as follows from Chota Oodeypore on the 1st inst.:—

The force under my command attacked the rebels under Tania Topee and Rao Sahib at Oodeypore at daylight this morning. The enemy lost at least three hundred men, chiefly Irregular Cavalry and sepoys in British uniform. Our loss comparatively trifling, not yet ascertained. No European officer killed. The rebels dispersed into three bodies; pursuit was impossible; my troops having marched upwards of two hundred miles since 23rd Nov., the last twenty-two miles through the densest jungles.

From Indore, Wednesday, 1st Dec.
From Sir R. Hamilton to Matheran, to Lord Elphinstone.

The Banda Nawab reached Mhow to-day.

Mr. AINSLIE.—We understand that the salary of Mr. Ainslie, Collector of Bhagulpore, who has lately been appointed Commissioner of the Bengal Eastern Railway, has been fixed at Rs. 2,432 per mensem. He is to draw 1,932 rupees as collector of the above-mentioned district, and a deputation allowance of 500 rupees per mensem.

LAKHRAJ LANDS.—To remedy the complaints so frequently heard regarding the resumption of Lakhraj lands by the Native Talookdars and Izardars in the Mofussil, the titled deeds or sunnud of which have been lost by any mishap, or destroyed, or mislaid, some of the highest judicial officers have suggested to the Supreme Government the passing of an Act making the actual possession of twenty years or so as a sufficient claim of the owner to the Lakhraj property.

BENGAL.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE FROM OUDE.

The latest intelligence we have from Oude is dated the 1st Dec. On the 28th Nov. the Commander-in-Chief entered Lucknow, but what his future intentions are we have not been informed. It is probable he may remain in that city until some time next month, when he will proceed in the direction of the Gogra, to overlook the movements of the various columns now living its banks, and which are preparing to give a blow to the insurgents in the Byraitch districts. The movements, strength, and position of these will be found in the subjoined table, as well as in the letters of our Oude correspondent:—

Miscellaneous bodies of men under 3,000, not necessary to enumerate

The numbers in the Byraitch district are believed to be correct. Those in the Khyrabad less than 3,000 men are omitted, but the bodies now lining the river Gogra from Soorutgunj southwards in various bodies under that number, amount to some 18,000 cavalry and infantry, with fourteen guns. Mummoo Khan is at Nawabgunj, opposite Byram Ghat.

The following communications from Oude have just been received:—

Oude, Nov. 27th.—As I anticipated in my last, Beni Mahdo on the 24th received a good beating from the British forces under the personal command of Lord Clyde. The whole affair had been so planned, that success in the capture and destruction of that chief seemed on this occasion about to be realised. One cannot easily firmly grasp a shiny live eel, it can only be pinned to the ground. At present no very clear accounts of the action are generally known, but after the usual prelude of musketry and cannonading, the remainder of the work was completed with sword and the bayonet. About 1,800 were left dead on the field. The Rana was one of the first to fly, which example was of a necessity followed by his supporters. Infection is seldom confined to a single individual. All his guns, baggage, and ammunition fell into our hands, to be quickly replaced by more that the earth will be made to render up. All the fugitives retired to an island in the Ganges, or rather to a piece of land between the main stream and a branch or offshoot of it taking a course from below Cawnpore, and rejoining the parent after flowing under the walls of Doundea Khara, at Rampoor Fort. Here they concealed themselves in the Jhow groves, which abound in the low land, when Beni made for Doundea Khara, but finding his difficulties somewhat increased in that stronghold, he made for, and the last that was heard of him was at, Rudowlee. This is simply a change in position, not circumstances. I informed you a short while since that a body of rebels had crossed the main road between Durriabad and Fyzabad, a few miles west of Suddergunj, and that, notwithstanding the hot pursuit made after them by the Kupperthulla contingent, they succeeded in crossing into the Byraitch district. These men were a guard to Beni Mahdo's family, his elephants and his treasures. They are ere this all safe with the Begum at Bounree. In the pursuit I should not forget to say we disposed of fifty of our old sepoy stock.

Our forces yesterday attacked the rebels at Hydergurh, thirty-five miles south-east of the city, under Sooltan Hoosein and others. They numbered some 16,000 in all, with ten guns. As usual, they were utterly routed, with heavy loss, and fled in a southerly direction. We have now possession of Jugdespore and In-howna.

Mummoo Khan has positively started for Byram Ghat, where I suspect he now is in command of some 2,000 cavalry, 15,000 infantry, and nine guns. The insurgents along this bank of the Gogra in numbers appear truly formidable. This long word might induce preparations as qualified; but we are in no haste to anticipate the work. After a few shots they will all retire (!) across the Gogra, and on that ground must accounts be settled with them.

P. S.—Beni Mahdo Sing is now at Daleemow Ghat, on the Ganges. Omrao Sing at Kurdaha, 32 south.

Oude, 1st Dec.—From latest intelligence received, fighting was going on between one of our columns and Dabee Bux, of Gonda, in the direction of Luntee, opposite Fyzabad, across the river, result not known. Bala Rao, who had moved in the direction of Luntee to join Dabee Bux, had, it is stated, proceeded still further south in the direction of Goruckpore. The health of the troops is said to be excellent, and preparations are now being made, in the absence of permanent barracks, to house the troops during the ensuing hot season as comfortably as possible.—Bombay Gazette Supplement.

IRON IN INDIA.

Much has been said of the difficulty of obtaining freight from England to India for the immense quantity of railway materials necessary for the East Indian Railway Company's line. It is now very generally admitted that this trunk line is but a small, a very small portion of the railway system that must, from necessity, follow the construction of the great artery. Branch lines innumerable will be laid down to feed it, and we submit that, as India possesses all the requisites necessary for producing cheap and good iron, the proof of which is incontrovertible, it is of the highest importance to the Government, the Railway Company, and to the people of India generally, that the mineral resources of the country should be made available for the construction of her railways. Every man sees clearly enough that great and permanent advantages would follow the introduction of the iron trade upon a large scale, but no one seems to feel himself sufficiently concerned to move in the matter. The Government and the Railway Company, it might be supposed, are deeply interested, but neither of them have as yet made even a sign that they are so, except in the solitary instance of the call for information made upon residents in the Mofussil, by the father of Indian railways, Sir Macdonald Stephenson. That gentleman took a very lively personal interest in the iron question, and had he remained here up to this time, it is probable he would have been drawing his supply of rails, chairs, &c., from local sources. It has been stated in the report of the Select Committee, that "the most prominent of the difficulties connected with the construction of Indian railways are the cost and means of obtaining freight, which must always be regulated and, as some believe, actually limited by the home demand for Indian produce. With this truth before us, we ask why purchase iron at all in England, when it can be produced here, equal in quality, and at a less cost? It is almost useless to put such questions, but the continued neglect of our own resources is a matter for deep regret, for, with the stores of mineral wealth of Kumaon, Jubbulpore, and, par excellence, Beerbhoom, what might not be done? Of the latter place in particular we are told that ore, limestone, and coal are found in inexhaustible quantities, and that miners, and every other description of labour, excepting scientific, can be had in abundance. No one now doubts the truth of this, yet the same apathy prevails. We have heard it said that the influence of the great English iron-masters extends to India, and that they prevent the opening of the trade here. Whether there may be any truth in the statement we do not pretend to say, but it most certainly does appear strange that the development of the iron trade should be left to one or two private individuals.

It is not many years since America ceased to import the bulk of the iron she consumed. The moment the discovery was made that it was more profitable to make iron than to import it, the indefatigable Yankees determined to build their own furnaces. The work was undertaken by men determined to succeed, if that were possible. They argued that all the conditions being equal, the result must be the same, wherever the operations were carried on. America possessed all the essentials for making iron in an equal degree with England, and, consequently, her practical operations proved successful. She has gone on, with the assistance of the best practical men from Europe, improving, until we find that she now produces one million tons annually. All the States in Europe that possess the means, following her example, now make nearly all the iron they consume. It is not therefore too much for us to expect that India should do the same. We have it upon good authority that the best Indian iron can be manufactured into rails, and sold in Calcutta at £4 a ton, without loss; whilst the worst description of English, made into the same articles, cannot be sold there at a profit under £8 per ton. Here is a margin for speculation; but when we recollect that it has taken nearly half a century of research to implant the belief in the minds of people in India that it is possible to make iron here at all, we have our misgivings as to the future. Mr. Oldham, a great authority, has clearly shown that a splendid field for enterprise lies open within the reach of capitalists. This gives us some hope that the class of men known in England as iron-masters, many of whom being millionaires, may occupy the vacant field—capital is all that is wanted to ensure success, and when that is found, there will be an unlimited demand for the produce of their furnaces. We would direct the attention of all men to India as an iron-producing country, second to none in the world, and which only requires capital and skill to produce profits such as no other undertaking save the Burra Burra Copper Mines, can realise.—Indian Field.

Dacca Bank.—Mr. George Reilly, late manager of Khajeh Abdool Gunnya's Zemindaree, in the district of Backergunge, has been appointed Secretary to the Dacca Bank.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FLIGHT OF TANTIA TOPEE.—When, on the 12th of November, Tantia, having distanced his direct pursuers, appeared within twenty miles of Bhurrupore with 2,000 men, almost all mounted, he was turned from that place by the arrival of the 23rd B. N.I. and some of the Bheel corps under Major Travers, of the 23rd N.I., and the Collector of Kandeish, Mr. Mansfield. At Kurgoon, where he arrived on the 21st, he threatened Kandeish yet more nearly; for he did so from the two passes through the Satpoora Hills—the Sindwah Ghaut on the Mhow road, and Dowlut Barree pass, between Dowlut and Chopra. But, as at Bhurrupore, so at Kurgoon, Tantia was again turned by the movement of the force with Mr. Mansfield, which was pushed back to Chopra, where, in addition, 350 Europeans on their way to Asseerghur were halted, and where, ultimately, the Poona Horse, under Colonel Tapp, with a battery of artillery, came across from Ajunta. In combination with these movements, and in order to watch the Sindwah Ghaut and hold the Trunk Road, two companies of the 92nd Highlanders and the 26th N.I., from Dhoolia, were rapidly moved up to Seerpore. These concentrations took place on the 23rd and 24th ult. The rebels, who had picked up three or four small guns, and had been joined by a ressalah of Holkar's Horse, were still, it seems, at Kurgoon as late as the 24th, and had been reinforced there by parties of the Nimar Bheels. They sent out parties to reconnoitre the fords of the Nerbudda opposite Mundleisur, which was garrisoned by a party of the 92nd, commanded by Captain Holmes. This party withdrew on finding Mundleisur strongly held. At the same time Colonel Sutherland and Captain Helbert collected 100 of Holkar's Sowars, and joined to them 100 of the 92nd, and 100 of the 4th Rifles from Tekree. With this force they moved to Julwanna, on the Mhow road, to intercept any movement of the rebels from the eastward. On the 25th, Brigadier Parke entered Kurgoon, which was found plundered and burnt by the enemy. They had turned on the previous night westward, and crossed the Mhow road at Taun, four miles south of Julwanna, and having destroyed the telegraphic wire for about a mile, and looted the Agra dawk, were moving on to Rajpore, thus eluding Captain Helbert. The latter, on hearing of their descent on Taun, went there on the morning of the 25th, but found that the enemy had left it on the road to Rajpore a few hours previously. Captain Helbert pursued and overtook the rebels, as we already know, capturing two guns, and driving the entire followers of Tantia off, utterly disorganised. Sir Hugh Rose had assumed command at Seerpore on the 25th, and pushed the 26th N.I. up the Ghauts to Sindwah, and sent a party of Poona Horse and some Bheels to watch the passes into the west of Khandeish from Akranes. When intelligence reached Sir Hugh that Tantia had descended on Taun, he considered it likely that some of the rebels might yet remain in the neighbourhood of Kurgoon, and he called in the guns and cavalry from Chopra to Seerpore; and Abbott's Hyderabad Cavalry having arrived at Chopra, they, with the Poona Horse and artillery, accompanied by Mr. Mansfield, joined the Seerpore force on the morning of the 26th. Sir Hugh Rose moved on his head quarters the same night, to join the 26th N.I. at Sindwah, leaving orders for the cavalry and artillery to follow on the morning of the 27th. But by the time Sir Hugh Rose reached Sindwah it was known that the rebels had fled towards Burwannee, and the 26th N.I., under Major Powell, was accordingly sent on at once from Sindwah towards Burwannee. Doubtless Captain Keating and Brigadier Parke will also be thrown across the Nerbudda very shortly. They will have to contend with great difficulties, for even at Seerpore supplies are very scarce, and the country between Sindwah and Burwannee is a perfect desert. Troops continue to move up from Malligaum. The 30th N.I., with two guns, from thence arrived at Seerpore on the 27th. The telegraphic wire betwixt Taun and Bulsama has been repaired, as well as the telegraph at Khull on the Nerbudda. Adil Mahomed of Bhopaul has not followed Tantia Topee, but when last heard of was with some followers in the neighbourhood of Asseerghur.—Bombay Standard, Dec. 1.

PURSUIT OF TANTIA TOPEE.—The following is from Hyderabad, dated the 14th November:—"Colonel Davidson received a telegram some days ago, that Tantia Topee, in his flight after the action at Khurai, marched his horse fifty miles, and his infantry thirty, crossing the Nerbudda at two points. He was found, when a camp of his was taken, to have suffered severely. Four hundred men were in it dead and dying, many horses and bullocks and a large quantity of arms had been left behind. His flight, from its rapidity, shows he was panic-stricken. He has got into the Chinwara hills near Nagpore, and it is supposed that his purpose is to plunder Baitool and Oomrowatee, the last a large mart in the Nizam's dominions. His army is quite shattered, and he has no guns. The preparations that have been made, and such as we are able to make, he can have no hope of contending against. His movement then is to raise the country, in which he will succeed to a certain extent. Two thousand of the Hyderabad Contingent, with twelve guns, are posted at Oomrowatee. Colonel Hill is on his way to join them, with a small detachment of the Contingent from Bolaram. It is said that half a battery of Artillery, one squadron of the Lancers, one squadron of Native Cavalry, three Companies of the First Regulars, and a regiment of Infantry will move to reinforce the Contingent at Oomrowatee. I ought rather to have said to serve as a corps de reserve, for if Tantia Topee moves Oomrowatee-wards they will be too late to co-operate with the Contingent in action. I hear, what is quite unintelligible to me, that the movement of the subsidiary force has been delayed, waiting the result of a reference to the Madras Government. As the reference has delayed the march it is to be inferred that it has been made by post. A battery of Horse Artillery has moved from Ahmednugger to the support of the Contingent, and the 91st Highlanders, on their march from Poona to Nagpore, had reached Jaulnah two or three days ago. These, with such troops as Nagpore may be able to send out to intercept or drive away Tantia Topee, will surely cut him off from us. Colonel Davidson properly deferred giving publicity to the telegram, lest the marauding Rohillas, a rather strong body, being informed of the direction Tantia Topee was taking, should have thought proper to join him. A report is abroad that Ali Moossee Ruzza, the Nizam's commander, has come up to the Rohillas, who were retreating with their booty, and has killed five of them, recapturing some of the booty. This is a modest narration, but a circumstance is attached to the story which casts a doubt upon it. It is said that Ali Moossee Ruzza, his unwise friends have probably got up the story for him, marched one hundred and forty miles in three days, on the third day putting the Rohillas to the rout."—Englishman.

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.—The annual meeting of the subscribers took place on Monday, Nov. 15, at the Fund Office, at eleven o'clock, pursuant to public advertisement: Major T. D. Atkinson in the chair. The secretary having read the requisition calling the meeting, which had been convened for the purpose of taking into consideration the directors' report and the accidents for the year 1857, it was deemed unnecessary to have the latter read, as they had been for some time in circulation among members. The following propositions were then brought forward and passed:—Moved by Major T. D. Atkinson, and seconded by Capt. T. E. B. Lees. Proposed 1st.—"That the directors' report be received and adopted, and the accounts for the year 1857 be passed." Moved by Capt. T. E. B. Lees, and seconded by Lieut. G. B. Johnston. Proposed 2nd.—"That the thanks of the meeting be given to the directors for their services during the past year." After the usual vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

DARJEELING, Nov. 17. Here we are on the look out for settlers direct from Great Britain, and families from the plains of India, who have money enough to remove, purchase land, and commence farming and cattle rearing. What a pity Government does not hold out sufficient inducement to their steady useful European pensioners to remove to the Hill country. The beautiful and healthy climate would give them a new lease of life, and so increase their strength and activity that manual labour would be a pleasure instead of punishment: clearing land, planting potatoes, cabbage, &c., sowing corn and rearing cattle and pigs, &c. No description in writing or speaking properly explains the difference between these airy and invigorating lofty regions, and the burning lowlands of Hindostan. Here is existence with all that can make life pleasurable, health, appetite, sound refreshing sleep, with mental and bodily vigour; there, as I recollect, to live at all is a daily painful effort from bad appetite, sleepless nights, wasted energies, and a disinclination for work of any kind during the eight or nine months when the sun holds sway over all nature that comes within its influence. I am most thankful that I left the fervid plains to try my fortune in this land of health and plenty. In a pecuniary point of view I lost much by the change, but the loss has been repaid a thousand fold in health of body and mind, and I look for a certain independence, with the blessing of a kind and merciful Providence, at no very distant period. I have at the end of little more than a year a good house, newly built, several acres under wheat, barley, oats, carrots, potatoes, mangel wurzels, cabbages, tares, English grapes, &c., all promising well, fifty pigs in my sties, and lots coming; pigs' meat, from the good food available for them, is very firm and sweet; in the plains it is generally heavy, rich, and indigestible. Labour is reasonable in ordinary times, but at present the large barracks absorb all the artificers and labourers in the market. Food for the natives and Christian inhabitants is at moderate prices, considering those previously in the Bengal towns and villages; by-and-bye, the road will cause the cheapening of all articles of food, dress, luxury, &c. Within a square of fifty miles, thousands of British families could find a farm large enough for their comfortable support, and capable of yielding an independence in the course of years, in the hands of industrious and persevering settlers. Colonists of the Christian persuasion, located in the mountain slopes of India—which are to be found in every part of it, north, south, east, and west, including many portions of Central India—would, in time, raise an impassable barrier against invasion from without; they would strengthen the hands of Government at all times, and especially during mutinies, revolts, &c. The merchants, planters, and other independent Britons scattered throughout India have hitherto been of infinite service in preserving our liberties, promoting trade, commerce, agriculture, &c. When these noble adventurers are increased a hundred fold the country will derive benefit in proportion. The whole question of colonisation requires the serious attention of Government; settlers should be treated with the greatest liberality, especially those who are poor and accustomed to the climate and inhabitants of India. The proposed upset price for the waste lands of Darjeeling, viz. ten rupees per acre, is far above its value, unless where clear and cultivated. The real waste or jungle land will require money and time to clear and prepare for cultivation. Military settlers, and in fact all servants of Government, or those who have been in the service for any length of time, might with advantage get holdings of from twenty to fifty acres free for five years.—Phœnix.

DEFEAT OF BENI MADHO.—The affair of yesterday (Nov. 24th) may be considered as most successful, as it completely broke up the only force of rebels now south of the Gogra, and cleared the Ganges from its source to its mouth. Bennee Madho is now a hopeless outlaw, all his guns are taken, and he is flying for dear life. To come upon him we marched sixty-one miles in sixty hours. The attack, led by Lord Clyde in person, was so sharp and spirited, that in half an hour the enemy, fully 7,000 strong, were driven out of the dense jungle which covered their front and flanks, and were cleared for ten miles by Bruce's guns and the Native Cavalry, of which some are still in pursuit. We killed about 500 men. Our own casualties are ten killed and 18 wounded. Bennee Madho fled down the river; Oomrao Sing bolted towards the Cawnpore road. Many were drowned in the Ganges, the right bank of which was watched by patrols of our cavalry. Most of the dead are sepoys, some of the 8th, 50th, and 2nd Light Cavalry amongst others. We took eight guns, three of which are brass. The rabble rout in flight threw away their arms, and flew into the kates and steep ravines in which the country abounds.—Delhi Gazette.

BRIGADIER SMITH'S VICTORY.—Having marched a forced march of twenty miles from near Mongrowlie, on the Betwa, to within two miles of Attakaria, on the 13th Nov., we were obliged to halt in consequence of night setting in, having marched all day from 4 A.M., with only a half of an hour for breakfast. At 4 o'clock on the morning of the 14th we started again west, towards Rajpore, where we are now encamped, having heard that Maun Sing, Rajah of Pardone and Powrie, was encamped four miles from this, and came upon his camp just at daylight, and as the fellows were getting up—more than half were still asleep. Our brigadier soon ordered up the guns of Blake's troop at the gallop, which poured in rounds of grape and canister on the astonished multitude in front, the 95th advancing in line on the right of the guns also firing. Pandey saw it was all up with him, and turned tail at once, leaving bedding, matchlocks, Brown Besses, carbines, talwars, spears, tattoos, camels, and bullocks all over the ground. The cavalry—8th Hussars and 1st Lancers—were then let loose at them, and pursued for eight miles, through thick jungle. Between six and seven hundred have been accounted for, but I am sorry to say Maun Sing himself managed to escape—almost in a state of nudity I hear—on horseback; an elephant he had also dodged up the ravines. General Michel has behaved very badly to our brigade; he took away all the cavalry and four guns, and after diminishing their ranks by incapacitating them, owing to forced marching after Tantia, he sent them back to us with a great number of sore backs, after taking the shine out of them, and thus crippled our movements. In our troop alone we have upwards of ninety horses in the sick lines, and can only bring half the battery into regular fighting action in consequence. I forgot to tell you that our loss in this fight is very small, an officer, Lieut. Harris, H.A., is wounded, and the whole force does not number more than twenty men wounded and some fifteen horses. Some men of the 10th N.I. took two Enfield rifles from the rebels, both in good condition, of the year "1855"; on the butt of one the following letters are stamped:—"88th Regt." "Gr. Co." "38," most likely a memento of Windham's affair at Cawnpore. Brig. Smith intends to send all the sick horses of the troop, as well as those of the 8th Hussars and 1st Lancers, to Gooah for rest; it will be at least a month before they can be got into working condition. After they have gone we shall move to Mongrowlie, to hunt up Amberpawnywalla, who has 3,000 Bundeelas at Jaloun. The following is Brigadier Smith's order on the affair:—"Camp, Rajpore, 14th of November, 1858. The brigadier returns his best thanks to the officers and men composing his brigade for the assistance they have rendered him, and the readiness with which they have at all times, and particularly of late, undergone fatigue and privations, and which have at length been crowned with success."—Delhi Gazette.

THE PUNJAB RAILWAY—A FICTION.—Some two months ago the public were excited to a high pitch of hope that the long-talked-of Punjab Railway would really be commenced on the 1st October. Public expectation was not realised. The works were, however, actually commenced a short time ago, and continued for a few days, when lo—red-tape seized hold of the engineers; they were bound in the toils of Circumlocution Office and drivelling incompetency, and the work was suspended. We do not pretend to know on what grounds the Chief Commissioner was directed to suspend the work, but believe it was in consequence of the engineers requiring ground for a double line, in the event of its hereafter proving desirable to have a double set of rails. We have heard that the Government are not prepared to grant more than enough for a single line, without further reference, perhaps to England. We need scarcely say that the fault is not Sir John Lawrence's, no statesman in India is more firmly impressed with the importance of railways—no man is there in the country more anxious to dispense with all unnecessary and mischievous official delays. It is well known that the Chief Commissioner has done all in his power, has exerted all his influence to hasten on the construction of railroads.—Lahore Chronicle, Nov. 20.

JALOUN.—The force under the command of Captain McMahon was on the left bank of the Scinde river on the 22nd Nov., and has driven all the rebels into "the bush." Captain Ternan, Deputy Commissioner of Jaloun, was in the southern portion of his district on the same date, with a strong detachment of police and Sikh Horse, under Lieutenant Dick. Major Synge's field force, consisting of half of Ommaney's battery and detachments of H. M.'s 43rd and 19th Madras Infantry, with a troop of Sikh Horse, were in the neighbourhood of Nuddeegong on the same date, accompanied by Captain Corbett, Assistant Commissioner. All these forces have done excellent service during the last fortnight; the enemy has been twice discomfited with considerable loss, and, though sheltered by deep ravines and dense jungles, is kept constantly moving. The rebel Thakoor Birjour Sing has now only 800 followers, and Daulat Sing barely half that number, and all of them have forsaken the Gwalior side of the Scinde river. The troops under Major Synge, and with Captain Ternan, appear to have a fair prospect of surrounding them, and Captain McMahon is prepared to co-operate immediately the opportunity is offered.

THE CALCUTTA CLUB had a general meeting on Monday the 22nd November, at which it was voted that the entrance fee should be fixed at Rs. 100, and the annual subscription Rs. 80, payable quarterly in advance. For persons living beyond ten miles from Calcutta no entrance fee will be charged, and they will be allowed to join the club on the payment of a small subscription. A committee has been appointed to draw up the rules.

PUNJAB ITEMS.—Government have sanctioned an increase to the number of children hitherto maintained at the Lawrence Asylum; at present there are 350, and this number is to be increased to 500, viz., 300 boys and 200 girls. The local committee will also be retained. The filling up appointments in the establishment when vacancies occur, will rest with the principal, and all letters pertaining to the business of the institution will be franked by him on the public service. * * * The village of Seekree, in the Goorgaon district, valued at Rs. 2,182 per annum, has been granted to Purwurrish Ali (a pensioner of Government), and his heirs male in perpetuity, in recognition of his meritorious conduct during the recent insurrection. This rent free holding is in addition to the life pension of Rs. 300 per annum, which Purwurrish Ali now enjoys. * * * A khillut of Rs. 1,000, with a sword and a brace of pistols, has been sanctioned by Government, for presentation to Nubbee Buxsh Khan, Ressaldar of the Jeypore force, for services rendered by him during the siege of Delhi.

MAJOR W. C. ERSKINE.—We (Delhi Gazette) learn from Jubbulpore that Major Walter C. Erskine, agent for the Saugor and Nerbudda territory, left Jubbulpore on the 22nd November on leave to Europe. He was esteemed and liked by all, and those who know him will easily believe that every one in his district is sorry at his departure. The officials and the principal men of the town and division, waited on him on the part of the whole population on the 11th November, and presented him with an address in the vernacular, to which Major Erskine replied; we cannot find room for the address and reply in this issue, but hope to do so soon. Such favourable expressions of native opinion are valuable just now, and we believe that in the present instance they are genuine. Mr. A. S. Cocks, the indefatigable judge of Mynpoore, has set out to succeed Major Erskine. A better choice could scarcely be made. Major Erskine has been especially invited by the Governor General to proceed to Allahabad.

MYTHOWLEE, OUDH, 15th Nov.—On the 8th we left the camping ground, or rather the bivouac, at daybreak, and proceeded slowly through a country partially cultivated, where not covered with a dense, almost impenetrable jungle. We halted occasionally, and the high trees and thick foliage and vegetation were beautiful. After this the guns ahead used to fire as we halted, upon the enemy. They were evidently retiring from successive positions, until at about mid-day, some guns fired at the head of the column, showed that the enemy were ready to dispute our advance. We were all halted, and whilst the round shot of the enemy were falling with some effect towards the head of the column, and near us, we took up different positions more sheltered, as the firing on both sides continued, but still within the range of the enemy. Our heavy guns with shell and shot continued firing at their position, which could be seen chiefly from the density of the bamboo jungle behind the flash and report of their guns, whilst their shot could be seen and heard, and sometimes caused a casualty. The cannonading continued till dark, when we were exposed to nothing but a heavy dew. The fires were put out and preparations made for an assault in the morning, but at daybreak it was found that the enemy had evacuated the fort. The works were very strong, with thick earthen parapets, embrasures, well-made loopholes and parapet slopes, deep ditches, curtains and bastions. Brushwood with trees in some places had been allowed to grow in most parts of the exterior slopes of the works. Within was the Bajah's abode, and a large garden, which were encircled by a second range of interior works. Near the gates was a village. A tiger fell into our hands, but the enemy did not seem to have left much property or to have suffered very much.—Delhi Gazette.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 17.—The ex-King of Delhi arrived here on the morning of the 13th, Saturday, escorted by the 2nd Troop, 2nd Brigade of Horse Artillery, the 9th Royal Lancers, and a Sikh Police Battalion. The decrepid representative of departed greatness was deposited in a dooley, shamming illness; his grandsons and the ladies of his zenana were in three palkee garricks; and his attendants in some magazine carts. In the first carriage were the two grandsons, one of whom was, I believe, that intelligent youth Jumma Buxht, though I confess that I observed as much intelligence depicted in his countenance as you would expect to find in that of the son of a respectable khitmutgar. Of the ladies I was unable to catch a glimpse, the doors and blinds of the carriage being closed. The vile octogenarian wretch was well guarded. On each side of his dooley was an officer of the 9th Lancers with drawn swords, and two or three men of that regiment, with their lances out of their rests, being held by them in a horizontal position, the spearheads pointing to the dooley—the whole party were in the centre of that corps. Well to the front were three detached parties of the Lancera, acting as scouts or advanced guards, and immediately preceding the main body of that regiment were three guns of the troop of Horse Artillery, the remaining three bringing up the rear of the cortege. The party left this on the morning of Monday, the 15th. It is said the old reprobate had a strong desire to remain at Allahabad, with what view I know not, and pleaded illness and inability to proceed any further. A medical committee was assembled to report on his case, who discovered that he was suffering from a toothache, and on its being suggested that the delinquent peg should be withdrawn, he consented to go on in preference.—Hurkur.

TANTIA TOPPE, according to the Standard, has entered Guzerat—hence vigorous efforts to meet him. The head quarters of H. M.'s 33rd (the Duke of Wellington's) regiment, under the command of Colonel J. D. Johnstone, C.B., have received orders to proceed from Poona to Tankaria Bunder immediately, and they expected to leave on Thursday the 5th Dec. by rail for Bombay, en route to the northern division. A battery of artillery is also under orders to embark for Guzerat. The whole force will be embarked as rapidly as circumstances permit.

BARRACKS AT NYNRE TAL.—The committee is at last in orders for selecting a site for the erection of permanent barracks to accommodate a regiment. The convalescent depot, it is believed, will remain where it is, immediately above the lake, but the barracks will not be, perhaps, within some miles of the place. Colonel Herbert, 75th Foot, is appointed President of the Committee.

THE KUMAON BATTALION was at Bawnr on the 19th Nov., all well with the exception of Captain the Baron Von Andlau, second in command, who had been stabbed at Dadree, in the Boolundshur district, in the side, by a thief whom he discovered in his tent during the night. Luckily he was awake by the noise the man made when prowling about, and on seeing him, fired at him, when the villain made out of the tent, and Von Andlau immediately rushed after him. He found him sprawling on the ground close to the tent. Von Andlau was still standing over the rascal, covering him with his pistol, when he jumped up and made a dash at him; he twice pulled the trigger, but the pistol did not go off, and the villain had time to thrust a knife or some weapon into his left side, and took to his heels. All this happened in the space of a few seconds, and before assistance arrived. The wound was luckily only about an inch in depth, and although it caused a profusion of blood and acute pain, we are glad to learn no bad consequences are likely to ensue. The thief had been winged, as the blood on the ground where he had rolled, proved, and 200 rupees reward is offered for his apprehension. The caps on the pistol had not been changed for a long time.—Delhi Gazette.

CAMP HUNGONG, Nov. 26.—Having left all the baggage and heavy guns at Mithowlie, we marched thence on the 17th Nov. with the force as follows:—Head-quarters and 3rd Troop 3rd Brigade Horse Artillery, two guns No. 7 light field battery, two squadrons 6th Carabineers, 4th Irregular Cavalry, Curceton's Moolani Horse, the 60th Rifles (1st Battalion), 300 of the 93rd Highlanders, 400 of the 66th Goorkas and the Head-quarters, and all the Sappers except some twenty men. Brigadier Troup commanded, leaving Colonel Leith Hay in command at Mithowlie. The first day's march was to Aligunge, about twenty-five miles, and we wound up the day by firing a few rounds of shot into a retreating party of the rebels, but the darkness prevented anything further, and we bivouacked near a small village about a mile and a half to the rear. Next morning we moved into Aligunge, and were settling down quietly, when an order was received for a portion of the force to get ready again immediately, the rebels having been heard of about four miles off. The following troops moved off at once:—Head-quarters and 3rd Troop 3rd Brigade Horse Artillery, one Squadron Carabineers (eighty sabres), 300 4th Irregular Cavalry, 100 Moolani Horse; thirty-six riflemen were also seated on the artillery waggons. Colonel Brind, C.B., of the Horse Artillery, commanded the party. The four miles promised us lengthened considerably, as the rebels had no idea of waiting for us, and we went along a good five and twenty miles, getting intelligence as we could from the villages we passed through, though it was not given very willingly. Assisted, however, by the track of their gun wheels, we followed on, and at half-past three had the satisfaction of hearing we had caught them at last. We took them quite by surprise, as they could not believe in the reality of a British force attempting to do anything after so long a march, apparently not being accustomed to it. Two or three matchlockmen were shot in the village of Burragong, and that, I conceive, gave them the first intimation of our approach. They, however, had their guns in position in a tope of trees close to the village of Mehndie, and opened fire upon us at sixteen or seventeen hundred yards—knocking over with one of their first shots an irregular cavalry horse. The horse artillery got to the front at once through high grass and over bad ground at as fast a gallop as the horses could manage after their fifty-five miles in two days, and let into them at some 700 yards, supported by the Carabineers, with the native cavalry on the flanks. After firing for twenty minutes or so, three guns were detached to the right front, taking their position in flank, and half an hour's fighting saw their guns deserted. A gallop of a mile and a half brought us on the run-aways, a party of irregular cavalry being left to look after the captured pieces. Shot, shell, and grape were showered into them, as they tried to cross a ford over a rather deep branch of the Choukur which somewhat protected the left of their original position. From this ford a couple of mounted men, seeing, I suppose, that it was all up, galloped right into the three guns on the left, and passed through them without touching any one, going slap at the 4th Irregulars, three of whom they wounded before they were disposed of. Some eight or ten men lay concealed by the high bank of the nullah, and annoyed the guns on the right for some time, as they could not be got at. We continued firing on the flying mass till dusk, the ground not being such as to admit of a cavalry pursuit, which would also have been interrupted by the night. We moved back behind Mehndee, carrying the captured ordnance with us, and found we had made a good business of it, as we had in our hands nine of their guns besides some fifty bullocks, and a large quantity of ammunition of all sorts. The enemy were said to be about 4,000 strong, with ten guns. One of these they succeeded in getting away for the time, but were obliged to drop it in the jungle, and it has since been brought into camp, so that we now have them all. Forty-eight dead bodies were counted, and very many men, women, and children were drowned attempting to cross the stream. Our casualties were one Carabineer killed, one gunner slightly wounded, five natives wounded. Horses, five killed and six wounded. One of the natives, a compounder of the H.A., was wounded by a man of the 4th I.C., by mistake, when the sowars rode into the guns.—Delhi Gazette.

LANDOUR, Nov. 27.—A general parade of the troops was called here this morning to witness the presentation of the Victoria Cross to Captain George Forrest, of Delhi celebrity, who came up from Dehra to receive it. The men having fallen into line on the parade ground at Landour, Major Troup, who commands the depot, called Captain Forrest to the front, and addressed him as follows, in a loud firm voice. "At the command of her most Gracious Majesty the Queen, conveyed to me through his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, I have to present you, Captain Forrest, with the decoration of the Victoria Cross, which your brave and gallant conduct in the field has earned for you. I may regret that it was not in my power to make a greater display on the occasion, but I am sure that you will value it none the less for being received in the presence of but a few of your fellow soldiers. And as you have earned it nobly, so may you live to wear it long and happily." Major Troup having affixed the Cross to Captain Forrest's breast, the latter said:—"My humble thanks are due to her Gracious Majesty the Queen for the honour she has been pleased to bestow upon me. My thanks are due to his Hon. the Governor-General and his Excellency, for to their recommendations am I chiefly indebted for it. It is not easy to find words on an occasion like this; my best thanks are due to you, Colonel Troup, for your kindness on this occasion and for all your congratulations and good wishes." Major Troup then turned to the men and said: "Soldiers! you have here a good example set before you. You have witnessed the bestowal of a high reward for valour. To you, too, occasions will offer to render yourselves worthy of the same mark of her Majesty's favour, and I am sure that you will not fail to take advantage of them." The parade was then dismissed, and Major Troup shook Captain Forrest heartily by the hand.—Delhi Gazette.

THE 2ND BENGAL FUSILIERS.—It is with deep regret we publish the following disgraceful petition from a British Regiment, made in time of war, with the evident intention of extorting "bounty." It is to be hoped that their prayer will be accepted in its literal sense, as the services of such lukewarm soldiers can certainly be dispensed with. But what a contrast to the glorious antecedents of this distinguished corps!—"From the men of the 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers to Lord Clyde, C-in-C. of the Forces in India.—We, the men of the 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers, do humbly petition your lordship for our discharge, for according to our agreement we are no longer soldiers. Your lordship may not be acquainted with the form of our enlistment, but we, your humble petitioners, do pray of your lordship to examine the form of enlistment that the Company's army enlisted under, and if your lordship will examine the 8th Question, you will find these words: "Are you willing to be attested to serve in the H. E. I. Co.'s Infantry for the term of ten years, providing the said Company should so long require your services, and for a further term not exceeding two years on any foreign station, as the commanding officer may direct." Now your lordship can see that there is not an item concerning her Majesty in our agreement, and that we are being retained against our own free will and consent in a service we never agreed to, which is against the laws of Great Britain, and we are sure her Majesty will never sanction it. We, your humble petitioners, are well acquainted with the disturbed state of this country at present, and are well aware that we cannot be sent home until the country is in a more settled state, and none of the men of my regiment would wish to leave the country while there is any work to be done, but every man is very dissatisfied at the miserable way we are being kept hanging on. We should have sent this petition to your lordship some time since, only we have been waiting for the proclamation of her Majesty in this country, and we naturally supposed that the justice would be offered us to which we are so rightly entitled, but the day has been and passed, and we are as wise as ever. We, your humble petitioners, do wish your lordship to understand what we consider our rights. Our lawful rights are a free discharge immediately, but that we do not expect, but to be retained as soldiers we must have a re-enlistment. The men of the regiment know they cannot be detained, and we, your humble petitioners, do pray your lordship to inform us on what plea we are detained. We, your humble petitioners, do wish to inform your lordship that everything must be voluntary on the part of a British subject by the laws of Great Britain, and anything else would disgrace Britain among nations. We, your humble petitioners, do pray that your lordship will endeavour to see that we have that justice which we so rightly deserve, and have such good reason to expect. We, your humble petitioners, do pray that your lordship will attend to this our humble petition, and your humble servants of the 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers will ever pray, &c."

PROMOTION FROM THE RANKS.—The undermentioned non-commissioned officers, of the 1st and 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers and Artillery, having distinguished themselves in several actions, having been specially recommended by their commanding officers, and being considered by the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief to be eminently deserving of reward, the Right Hon. the Governor-General, concurring in that opinion, is pleased to confer upon them the rank of ensign unattached, subject to the approval of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India:—Colour-sergeant Thomas Hardy, 1st European Bengal Fusiliers; Quartermaster-sergeant Richard Richardson, 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers; Staff-sergeant Henry Murray, 3rd troop 3rd brigade Horse Artillery; Quartermaster Thompson, 2nd company Artillery, Hyderabad Contingent.

TIME BARGAINS.—The Englishman of the 25th Nov. says:—"We are informed that an attempt has been made to introduce a system of gambling in Government securities, by means of what is called in London stock-exchange parlance—time bargains. This means selling to deliver at some period more or less distant from the day of sale; allowing the sellers (if they can) to work the market for their own especial benefit. The decline which has taken place within the last day or two in 5 per cent. paper may be attributed, we have every reason to believe, to some such operation. Rumours have been set afloat that Government would require a large amount of silver for remittance to Bombay, and that the Bank of Bengal must then, of necessity, raise the rate of interest. If our readers will look to the present position of the bank they will see how little probability there is in such a rumour."

A "SPARK BAFFLER."—On the 24th Nov., Captain Sim, Deputy Consulting Engineer to Government in the Railway Department, Mr. Gower, Locomotive Superintendent, and Mr. Buist, Traffic Manager, tested an apparatus designed to prevent sparks escaping from the funnel of a locomotive. The train consisted of twelve open trucks laden with jute, wood shavings, gunny bags, and a small quantity of gunpowder (not enough to cause injury); and it is satisfactory to record, that in a twenty-four miles run, not a spark escaped from the chimney of sufficient magnitude to ignite these highly inflammable substances. All present expressed their congratulations to Mr. Gower, for the very successful results obtained by his spark baffler. It is to be hoped we shall hear no more of fires occurring on the railway, now that so simple a method is known to obviate them."

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—The changes in Lord Canning's Cabinet still continue to be matter for speculation. The latest rumour is as follows:—N. W. P. and Oude—Mr. Edmonstone; Punjab—Mr. Montgomery; Bengal—Mr. Grant; Foreign Secretary—Mr. G. Barnes. The latter gentleman was named for Peshawur, but whether correctly or not, seems now of no consequence, as Colonel Edwards does not go home after all. Rumour has it that the leave granted to this gallant and able officer has been rescinded by the Governor General's order. Of one thing there is not the slightest doubt, and that is that the Punjab is to be made a Lieutenant Governorship immediately.—Delhi Gazette.

ENSIGN JOHN HOPKINS was granted the commission of ensign unattached, in consideration of his gallant conduct at the storm and capture of Pegu, on the 21st November, 1853. He has since been employed as quartermaster to the regiment of Ferozepore, and latterly as adjutant with detachments of her Majesty's Service. In compliance with the recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, supported by the Governor General, the Court of Directors have authorised Ensign Hopkins' promotion to an unattached lieutenancy.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 29).—Less disposition has been shown by shippers to operate this week, owing to the expected arrival of the steamer, which is hourly looked for. The market has been slack, and a slight decline has taken place in the value of several principal articles of produce, consequent on the increased stocks.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Nov. 29).—The market this week has been very brisk, both as regards Tea and Grey Cottons, and full; last week's prices, and even slightly higher rates, have been realised. Bleached Cottons, such as Shirtings, Jacquets, and Mulls (the two latter of middling and low qualities), are in good demand at the advanced rates of last week. The Copper market has been quiet, with a slight reduction in prices. The Iron market has been rather favourable for only local requirement, at a small advance in price.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE OOTACAMUND ASYLUM.—The donations to this institution up to the 19th November amounted to Rs. 27,428, the annual subscriptions to Rs. 3,913, and the monthly ditto to Rs. 349. Among the donations first received is one of Rs. 5,000 from Lord Canning. This we learn from the Spectator, who has been "assured upon undeniable authority that the religious principles proposed for the Asylum were fully explained to his lordship when his support was asked; and that his reply is a warm expression of approval of the objects contemplated by the committee with a donation of the sum named."

RIOT AT COMBACONUM.—I hope you will think it worth while to give an insertion in your valuable journal to the circumstances connected with a terrible pillage committed in the town of Combacorum and its suburbs, on the 17th and 18th November, to which the lower classes of people were driven by want and starvation consequent on famine. The pillage that commenced with grain, terminated in open robbery of ready money, jewels, brass, utensils, &c. People were seen in several parcels attacking houses and shops and carrying away booty in broad day with impunity. The outrage was attended with loss of life, and, what is more shocking to nature, violation of chastity. Some of the vagrants took advantage of this opportunity to extort money from different individuals by threatening their houses with immediate robbery. The pillage was carried on with such violence that the local authorities were not able to suppress it by any means whatever. The acting sub-judge, Mr. Grenfell, who took an active part in quelling the disturbance, was closely pursued and about to be killed by the ravaging mob, for having shot one of the ravagers to death. Happily, Mr. Grenfell galloped his horse towards the Talook Cutchery, and there found his safety. The people, however, surrounded the Talook Cutchery, and were with great difficulty pacified by the civil judge, Mr. Beauchamp, with an offer of Rs. 1,000 to the heir of the deceased. The circumstance that irritated the public, was that certain great Merassadars having shut up large quantities of grain, increased the price of Paddy to Rs. two and odd per cullum. It was, however, exceedingly difficult to get any quantity of grain for this enhanced price. The famine rather originated in the avarice of Merassadars than the actual scarcity of grain.—Athenaeum.

AN ODD FISH.—Mangalore, Nov. 24.—It quite escaped my memory when last writing to you to give you an account of a very extraordinary occurrence which took place in this neighbourhood about the end of September, but acting on the old adage "better late than never," I now proceed to relate it to you. You may never have heard of a tiger being killed at sea, but the present will furnish you with an instance. Some fishermen of a village called "Hejamandy," some nineteen miles to the north of this, put out to sea long before daylight one morning, for the purpose of following their usual avocation. When they were some hundred yards from land they espied something like a huge fish a short distance from them. They naturally rowed up to it, and one of the men made a blow at it with his harpoon. At this the animal rushed at the boat, laid hold of the nearest man with his paws, and in dragging him overboard upset the boat. It was then that the men found out that it was a tiger, and not one of the finny tribe, and of course swam to the shore for their lives. The poor man who was in the clutches of the beast vainly struggled for some time, and then sank under the waves a corpse. The beast next got on the boat, which was floating bottom upwards, and took formal possession of it. In the meantime the men who had got to the shore raised a hue and cry, and collecting some more hands, put off in two or three boats to give the beast battle. Not having any firearms with them, this was a work of some danger, but one fellow more dextrous than the others at length struck his harpoon into the neck of the beast, and settled him. The body of the unfortunate man was recovered from the sea the following morning. I hear that the full reward of thirty-five rupees (!) was divided amongst the relatives of the unfortunate man who lost his life, and the man who put an end to the tiger. It is very probable that the beast had come down during the night to the sea shore to feed either on crabs or some carrion, and that overstepping himself might have been washed into the sea by the waves, and once in could not manage to make an exit through the surf.—Bangalore Herald.

SHIPPING IN THE ROADS.—The weather is now fair again, a decided change having set in about three o'clock on Sunday afternoon. Ten ships slipped and went out to sea on Saturday and Sunday, viz., the Eleanor, Gold-Digger, Defiance, Alberfoyle, Cleveland, Madras, Chieftain, Maida, General Havelock, and Sir T. Gresham. Of course many of these have left their anchors behind, and some of them, we believe, their commanders. At all events some of the captains were on shore, where they ought not to have been in suspicious weather, such as we have had lately. When too late, some of them offered, but in vain, as much as five hundred rupees for a boat to take them across. It is only an act of justice to say that the Commissioner of Police was unremitting in his attendance since Friday night on the beach, to be in readiness to afford any assistance that might be required from his department.—Spectator, Nov. 23.

THE KAMPTHEE MOVEABLE COLUMN, under Colonel G. W. Osborne, left Taklee, near Sectabuldee Nagpore, on the 13th of November, leaving a small portion of the force at Taklee to follow up, if necessary, and arrived at Natchingaon, on the Wurdah, eighty miles from Kamptee, on the 17th, to assist in preventing Tantia Topce from invading Berar, and to act as a wholesome restraint on the Rohillas, who may feel inclined to cross the Wurdah, and pillage the villages in this part of the Nagpore territory. The camp was at the same place on the 21st.

THE ROHILLAS plundered the important town of Gunga-Kheir, on the Godavery, within the Nizam's territories, in the early part of the present month, and carried off property to the value of three or four lakhs of rupees without molestation, after doing great mischief otherwise. The Contingent Cavalry at Mominabad were sent in pursuit of these lawless depredators, but we understand failed to overtake them before they got away into the jungles.

THE CEYLON TELEGRAPH.—The following telegram, dated 21st November, has been received from Sir William O'Shaughnessy, Chief Superintendent Electric Telegraphs in India:—"The Ceylon line has been much injured by the late violent gales, and cannot be brought into good working order for a month or six weeks. Until reported fit for use, it is recommended that private messages shall not be sent for transmission by that line."

MORUSSIL EXHIBITION.—In consequence of the very discouraging reports received from the district officers, and the adverse circumstances of the year, the Board of Revenue have authorised the postponement of the district exhibitions proposed for this year until the early part of 1859, when it was trusted that a successful result might be obtained. The only exhibition remaining to be held in the present year is the cattle show in the sub-division of Nellore, authorised by Government to be held in November. The arrangement has been confirmed by Government.

DEATH OF A MISSIONARY.—We deeply regret to learn that the Rev. Edward J. Hardey, of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, has been suddenly called away from among us. He arrived in India in July 1842, remained in Bangalore till the beginning of 1843, when he was appointed to Goobbee. Here he laboured for five or six years. Thence he returned to Bangalore, and in 1851 proceeded to Mysore. On Saturday before last he met the Rev. T. Hodson, our excellent and venerable chairman of the Wesleyan Society, at Muddoor, whence both of them set out on the first of a series of tours which, as a mission, the Wesleyan missionaries here had projected, for preaching the Gospel and circulating portions of the Word of God. They had reached Sevensamoodrum on Wednesday last—the waterfalls at which place are well known to the majority of European travellers in these parts—and were in good health. On Saturday a telegram was received from Mysore announcing the melancholy intelligence of Mr. Hardey's death on the previous day by cholera. The particulars of his last moments have not reached us as yet.—Bangalore Herald.

LORD HARRIS, whose health has greatly improved, left the Hills on the evening of the 15th Nov. for Calicut, where a steamer from Bombay was to be in readiness to take him on from place to place on the coast, and then to Ceylon. We believe his lordship will not return to the Presidency until about the 20th December.

THE KNAPSACK.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has been pleased to abolish the Native Infantry knapsack as an article of equipment.

NEILGHERRY LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—We have been requested to announce it as a gratifying fact that Lord Canning has given a donation of Rupees 5,000 to the Neilgherry Lawrence Asylum; and that his lordship was pleased to forward the same with a most kind expression of his sympathy in the project of the committee, after having heard from the Rev. J. V. Bull of the full particulars of their proceedings.

THE POST-OFFICE.—Several changes amongst the inspecting Postmasters of this presidency are in contemplation. It is said that Mr. Lodwick, formerly attached to this province, and who has recently returned from sick leave, is to be placed in charge of the Belgaum division. Our present inspecting Postmaster is to be transferred to Guzerat, and Mr. Bowie, who previously belonged to the Bengal presidency, is to be sent to Sind.—Sind Kossid.

THE "LADY HODGKINSON."—H. M.'s steamer Victoria arrived at Bombay on the 26th Nov. from Quilon, with the troops brought out by the wrecked ship Lady Hodgkinson. The Victoria reports that the Lady Hodgkinson is on a reef about a mile from the shore, in water up to her main deck. All the troops were safely landed, with the whole of their baggage. She had on board a large quantity of railway stores, which it is expected will be saved. Mr. Nichol, second mate of the wrecked vessel, came up in the Victoria.

G. I. P. RAILWAY EXTENSION.—We are informed that the extension of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to Decksal, sixty-five miles from Poonah, on the Bleema river, will be opened for public traffic almost immediately.

A HINDOO CONVERT.—A Hindoo of the Bhattia caste was baptised on the 14th Nov. at the American Mission Chapel, by the Rev. Mr. Harding. This is the first instance of a Bhattia having embraced Christianity, so far as we are aware. Another native was received into the church on the same occasion, on profession of his faith.

PROGRESS OF THE TELEGRAPH.—The English cable for the submarine telegraph between Kotree and Hyderabad has at last arrived, and Mr. Smith, the active superintendent of electric telegraphs in Sind and the Punjab, has proceeded to Kotree to lay it down. We may, in a very short time, hope to receive our messages from Bombay in half the time it now occupies. The communication between Roree and Sukkur is to be carried on by means of posts, from Roree to Bukkur, and from Bukkur to Sukkur. It will, however, require very strong posts and wire to effect this, as it will have to be a very great height from the water, to admit of boats and steamers passing under. Active exertions are also being made to complete the line between Hyderabad and Mooltan. The greater portion of the wire has been laid down at different places; and no less than eight inspectors, with their staff of artificers, &c., are about to be despatched immediately to carry out the work. We would advise those young men who are now about to proceed into the districts to carry on their work, to be careful how they conduct themselves towards the natives of the country. They have had painful experience from the recent trials at Hyderabad, with what facility the microscope can be applied to the most trifling errors, and with what vindictiveness they can be pursued if they are caught tripping. Let this be a warning beacon to them.—Sindian.

DEATH OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL JOHN JACOB.—It is with the deepest regret we announce that intelligence has been this morning received of the death, on the 6th Dec., from an attack of brain fever, of Brigadier General John Jacob, C.B., political superintendent and commandant on the frontier of Upper Scinde, and commandant of the Scinde Irregular Horse, the corps in connection with which his name has been rendered so famous. We need hardly say that the loss of such a man at this time especially cannot be too deeply deplored.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—At a meeting of the directors, held on the 25th Nov., the Bank of Bombay raised its rates of discount and interest on all private bills, loans, and cash credits. An annual general meeting of the bank was held at the Bank office, on Monday, the 13th December, for the purpose of electing two directors in the room of H. D. Cartwright and Framjee Nasserwanjee, Esqrs., who go out by rotation.

THE PINJRAPOLE NUISANCE.—At a Court of Petty Sessions held on the 2nd Dec., it was unanimously decided to reject the appeal submitted by Spencer Compton, Esq., praying for an exemption of taxes on a pair of horses on the plea that they were very aged, never used, and merely kept in food and shelter from their having been old and faithful servants. The Chairman observed that this was no ground for exemption, as in the new Act the word "kept" is distinctly specified, without reference to use, and that under that construction the cattle in the Pinjrapole is even not exempt. Mr. Ryrie hinted that were the tax levied on the last-mentioned animals, it would materially add to the Municipal Fund, on which Mr. Fellows, the Collector, stated that it was most unquestionably his intention to levy the tax on the cattle kept in that pestiferous institution. It is to be hoped, however, that the benefit to the Municipal Fund from this source will not be a continuous one, but that we shall ere long have the pleasure of announcing the much-desired abolition of such a disgrace to Bombay.

LIEUTENANT HARDING.—We regret to announce the death of Lieutenant and Adjutant Harding, of H. M.'s 8th Hussars. This officer was wounded by a matchlock ball at the battle of Sindwaha, on the 19th of Oct., in a single-handed encounter with a group of desperate sepoys. Owing to the unsettled state of the country, he could not be left to rest anywhere, and the constant marching of his brigade caused his wound to take an unfavourable turn, and end fatally near Seronge on the 23rd November. He was much beloved and esteemed by all around him. He served in the 8th Hussars throughout the Crimean war, and also distinguished himself at Gwalior in the charge made by a squadron of his regiment into the enemy's camp, under the guns of the fort itself on the occasion when the Rane of Jhansi lost her life in the mêlée and confusion of the enemy's flight. He was thirty-eight years of age, and leaves a widow in England to deplore his loss.

DEATH OF THREE MISSIONARIES.—We very much regret to learn that the German Evangelical Mission on the Malabar Coast has sustained a great loss in the death of three young missionaries, the Rev. Messrs. Keuler, Hauser, and Camerer. They died of typhus fever within six weeks of each other. Messrs. Keuler and Hauser had been two years in the field, Mr. Camerer four years. Just as they had become fitted for usefulness they were removed. Mr. Camerer caught the fever from one of his brethren, at whose bedside he had devotedly watched. There were circumstances investing his death with a particularly melancholy character; but his relatives (some of whom reside in Bombay) have great consolation in the abundant evidence given during his nine days' illness of his entire readiness to depart, and his meetness for the inheritance of the saints in light. He died at Udapy, a station where the missionaries have encountered a great deal of opposition during several years past.—Bombay Guardian.

"SAVE YOUR BACON!"—In consequence of the number of private pigs which are allowed by their owners to become nocturnal rambles, an order has been issued by the Deputy Commissioner of Police to kill all pigs found trespassing on the public roads. Hence every morning Messrs. Bell, Frankland, Roddle, Gahagan, and other European constables, may be seen with implements of pig-sticking, enjoying their pastime. Each victor must present the tail of each pig butchered before Mr. Forjett ere he can obtain the price of his gallant victory—eight annas.

MR. EDWARD MACREADY, son of the eminent tragedian, William Charles Macready, purposes giving a short series of poetical and dramatic readings, and also of including in his list of entertainments the five Christmas stories by Charles Dickens, entitled the "Christmas Carol," "The Chimes," "The Cricket on the Hearth," "The Battle of Life," and the "Haunted Man." Mr. Macready has not yet fixed the date for his first appearance, but the commencement of the series is to take place during the course of the second week in December.

DEPARTMENT OF ACCOUNTS.—We hear that Mr. Erskine, of the Bombay Civil Service, and Mr. Clark, of the Bengal Civil Service, who have been engaged for some months in drawing up a uniform system of accounts for the three presidencies, will shortly pay a visit to the head-quarters of the three Collectors in Sind for the purpose of inspecting the working of the new system.

KURRAOCHER MAIL SERVICE.—Government have invited tenders for the performance of the mail service between Bombay and Karmarce Bunder, Kurraochee, by efficient steamers, for the term of five years from the 1st January, 1860.

BENEVOLENCE OF SIR JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHAY.—A vernacular paper has learned on good authority that Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., has determined upon allotting a sum of Rs. 50,000 or 75,000 for the foundation of an hospital in the town of Nowasaree, near Surat, where the people and those of the surrounding villages suffer very much from the want of such an institution.

WRECK OF THE BRIG "ARROW."—We hear that the brig Arrow, belonging to the Parsee merchants of our town, Messrs. P. and D. Camajee and Co., has been totally wrecked in the Chinese seas. The crew and passengers, with a portion of the cargo, were fortunately saved.

ANOTHER BATCH OF MUTINEERS ARRIVED AT KURRACHEE ON SATURDAY MORNING. They are 501 in number, besides 5 women who have been transported for life: 10 died on the passage down the river, and many others are now in a sickly state and not likely ever to live to reach the Andamans. The whole of these prisoners are now lodged in the jail, and will be despatched as soon as the vessels chartered for their conveyance arrive from Bombay, where they have been taken up for this service.—Sind Kossid, Nov. 23.

WESTERN MISSIONS.—We have much satisfaction in announcing the arrival of a reinforcement for the Missions of Western India. The Rev. Messrs. Galbraith and Hofer, and Mrs. Hofer, in connection with the Church Missionary Society, arrived by the Windsor Castle. We believe that Mr. Galbraith will, after the lapse of some months devoted to the study of the language, assume charge of the Money Institution, and that Mr. Hofer is destined to the Jooneer station. We cordially welcome these brethren to the shores of India, and commend them and their work to the prayers of the people of God. The Rev. S. Hislop, of the Nagpore Mission of the Free Church of Scotland, left with his family in the last steamer for England. We regret very much that failing health should have required the departure of this servant of the Lord, whose privilege it has been for nearly fourteen years to proclaim Christ and Him crucified in the very heart of India, far removed from every other mission station. It devolves upon Bombay to make good, from her scanty resources, the deficiency caused by the departure of Mr. Hislop. The Rev. A. White is to proceed to Nagpore for the purpose of occupying that post (in conjunction with the Rev. Mr. Cooper now there) during the absence of Mr. Hislop, who may soon, we hope, be permitted to return to this country. The Sattara station of the free church mission has, we understand, been given up, and the Rev. Mr. Aitken will in consequence come to Bombay.—Bombay Times.

BURIED ALIVE.—One Mahomed Chunda, a Mahomedan milkman, about forty years of age, was missed by his brothers from their house in Bungalpora on the evening of the 25th of November. One of the brothers was unsuccessful in his search, but the other, after a search of a whole day elsewhere, entered a godown in the neighbourhood, and discovered that a bamboo-wall inside had given way, and that a disagreeable smell issued therefrom. This wall supported a very large quantity of charcoal, which had been heaped up as high as fifteen or sixteen feet, from the ground to the roof, and which was now strewn about the floor. After removing some of the charcoal, he found the dead body of his brother under it, in a high state of decomposition. There were, however, no marks of violence on the person, and no suspicion was entertained of foul play. The godown did not belong to the deceased, and none could assign a reason why the deceased entered it.

THE SILKEN NOOSE.—Mrs. Levison, who was married on the 4th of October to one of the Naval Brigade doing duty in Fort George, and forcibly carried away from her mother's residence by her husband and about forty of his associates, because she peremptorily refused to live with him, appeared on the 12th November before Mr. Crawford and applied for a divorce. His worship, however, having satisfied the woman that he had no power to cut the gordian-knot, she then asked for a summons of assault. Mrs. Levison voluntarily stated to the magistrate that she had been partly enjoyed and partly coerced to accept Mr. Levison for "better or for worse," and that her forebodings that it would be "for worse" were realised before a month had elapsed, inasmuch as she had to fly in disguise from her home about three days ago, being in dread of her life at the hands of him who had vowed to cherish and protect her. A summons has been granted for an assault.

LIEUT. COLONEL HOLDEN ROSE, of H.M.'s 17th Lancers, commanding the Remount depot at Kirkee, is compelled from ill health to apply for leave to go to Europe on medical certificate.

THE SHIP "PEDESTRIAN."—Considerable anxiety is beginning to be felt in Bombay regarding the fate of the ship Pedestrian, bound from London to this port. From what we have learned, it appears that she left the Thames on the 22nd of May last; that after being a fortnight at sea she sprung a leak, and that the crew refusing to proceed further in her, she put back into Plymouth for repairs; that she started again on her course from that port on the 21st of June, and has not since been heard of. Indeed, her consignees in Bombay, Messrs. Macindoe, Rogers, and Co., have had no advices regarding her since she sailed from London. The Pedestrian was heavily laden with iron and a miscellaneous freight, and was so deep in the water that an experienced officer, now in this harbour, refused to take the first officership in her, having more regard for his own life than the owners seemed to have for their ship. She was built in North America, and had a letter for six years, a period which had nearly expired. The deep solicitude felt here regarding her destiny is enhanced by the fact that she had on board the Rev. Mr. Forster, the head master of the Byculla Schools, Mrs. Forster, and child. Mr. Forster had been in England on leave of absence, for the benefit of his health, and was returning—we still hope, is returning—to resume his official duties.

KURRACHEE.—A most awful occurrence took place at this station on the morning of Saturday, the 27th of November, which has unfortunately ended in the death of one person and the serious mutilation of another. The parties in this unfortunate affair are well known amongst us, and one of them, at least, highly respected. Mr. George Bease, managing proprietor of the Scindian, it would appear, retired to rest at about eleven o'clock on Friday night, having made all preparation for the production of the paper the following morning. His wife also retired to rest; Mr. Bease, however, sleeping in the verandah. At about one o'clock in the morning, Mr. Bease was awakened by the cries of his infant child, sleeping in the mother's room. Mr. Bease got up and to his astonishment found the mother absent; he, however, pacified the child and himself fell asleep in his wife's bed; after a considerable time had elapsed he was again awakened by the clock striking two, and found his wife still absent; he searched the house, and at last came to the verandah, where to his horror he saw Mrs. Bease (since deceased) issuing from the house of Mr. Foster, the latter's arm around her neck. A gun was by in the verandah, and it is alleged that in the frenzy of the moment Mr. Bease discharged the weapon, and the sad result is known. Mr. Bease is in close custody.—Scinde Kossid.

IMPARTIAL JUSTICE.—Captain Gillett, Superintendent of the Bombay Preventive Service, appeared yesterday, Nov. 15, to answer a charge preferred against him by a Bamboo Cooly or Nowgunnee, employed about the Custom-house premises, for having tied him up on Friday last, and flogged him a la man-of-war with a rope's end. The flagellation was not denied by the defendant, who, however, urged in his defence, that it was very slightly inflicted, and not with the view of actually inflicting pain, but merely to inspire a wholesome dread into the numerous Nowgunnees employed about the Custom-house, who invariably are guilty of trespassing upon the vacant spaces marked out for footpaths, with their packages and boxes, to the great confusion and impediment of public business, and as repeated warnings both by himself and subordinates apparently had no effect, he had adopted the method admitted, but in which there was neither cruelty nor pain inflicted, though he was only doing a public good, by endeavouring to obviate a public nuisance. His worship in disposing of the case, observed that the plaintiff's statement, although it showed that no degree of harshness or cruelty was apparent, nevertheless as the law did not permit any one to become his own magistrate, he was constrained to inflict a penalty of fifteen rupees, to be paid to the plaintiff as compensation.

CONJUGAL BLISS.—The lady of the present Nabob of Mazagon, yesterday, Nov. 15, by letter, made an application to Mr. Crawford for a summons against her husband, for refusing to maintain her. His worship informed the bearer of the letter, for the information of her ladyship, that the commissioner of police had received a letter from the secretary to Government, in reply to a memorial upon the subject from the applicant to Government. Mr. Crawford said that Government, in referring her ladyship to the magistrate, was apparently unaware that the magistrate's award in such cases was limited to Rs. 50;—an amount inadequate to the station and dignity of her ladyship. Under these circumstances, the applicant was instructed to bring an action either in the Small Cause Court, or the Supreme Court, as advised by her counsellor.—Bombay Telegraph.

FEMALE EDUCATION.—We (Bombay Times) are glad to learn that great success has attended the appeal made to the wealthy Hindus of this place—to contribute a fund for the permanent support of the girls' schools. One of the wealthiest of the Hindu merchants has formally announced his desire to bestow a grant of Rs. 1,000 per annum to be applied for the present to the support of two of the schools, which he has specified; a third school to be included, in the event of Government giving a grant-in-aid. Another Hindu gentleman, Dr. Bhao Dajee, has offered to contribute Rs. 40 a month for the support of one school, until some rich native comes forward to endow it permanently. Mr. Juggonath Sunkersett has expressed his readiness to contribute a handsome allowance for the maintenance of the school of the society in his own compound, where it has been rented free since its foundation nine years ago. We further understand from a respectable authority that a Parsee gentleman has also signified his intention of heading the general subscription list with a sum of Rs. 500. Under such a promising state of matters, we hope that in a few months the Hindu schools will be placed upon a permanent footing as well as the Parsee schools.

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE.—We deeply regret to state that Lieut. Ashmead John Billamore, of the artillery, quartered at Fort George, committed suicide on Friday night, December 3rd, under the following circumstances:—He had been under medical care owing to an attack of delirium tremens, and suddenly stabbed himself with a penknife in the region of the heart. Dr. H. V. Carter and an European gunner were in the room with the unhappy man at the time, but the blow was too rapid and unexpected to prevent the fatal consequences which immediately ensued. The unfortunate deceased was attached to the 5th company of the 3rd battalion of Native Foot Artillery, having entered the service in 1850, and obtained his lieutenantcy on the 5th of June, 1855.

ADEN, Nov. 3.—I regret extremely to inform you of the total loss of the ship Dundonald, of 1,300 tons, on the afternoon of the 1st instant, 90 miles east of Aden. It appears that the vessel belonged to Liverpool, but she was bound from London to Aden with coals for the P. and O. Company, and that she had been on fire four days previous to the day she was seen, the 1st instant, when a general explosion took place, the coals having spontaneously ignited. The crew of the vessel have just arrived per ship Tippoo Sahib. This vessel was on her way to Aden, from Shields with coal, and fortunately for the crew of the Dundonald the master of the Tippoo Sahib saw the signals of distress, and bore down upon the unfortunate ship just in time to get all hands and the boats safe, when the Dundonald blew up, with a fearful crash, and down she went. The mail closes in one hour; so I have no more time to say further, and indeed I know no more of the particulars. At present our fine weather has just set in, and our worthy and much esteemed political resident (Brigadier Coghlan), the friend of everybody, returned to Camp from the Point. This is our general resort in this season; we now look forward to fine cool weather, and lots of fun.—Bombay Telegraph.

IMPORTS.—(Bombay, Dec. 9.)—Cotton Piece Goods.—The import market continues in an improved and active state, the market for Grey Goods having been particularly very brisk during the fortnight, and the prices of several descriptions of Grey Goods have further advanced. Grey Shirtings are scarce, and have advanced; T. Cloths, red ends, are much inquired for; Grey Jacons, low, are in favour, at advanced rates; and Grey Manopolians have also shared in the improvement of prices. Bleached and Fancy Goods.—The prices of Bleached Goods are maintained, and this description of goods are in demand. Bleached Jacons, low to medium, are very scarce; Bleached Shirtings continue in active demand; while in Bleached Madapolams there have been few or no transactions.

Yarns.—Both Mule and Water, especially of the lower counts, have improved in price, and are in demand. Coloured Yarns have undergone no alteration in value. Metals.—The state of the market has undergone no material alteration. Tin Plates and Nail Rod have given way in prices; but Copper, English Bar Iron, and Spelter have advanced.

EXPORTS.—(Bombay, Dec. 9.)—Cotton.—Since the last unfavourable advices from Liverpool, there has been a decline in the prices of this staple, and the market appears to be dull. Oil Seeds.—These also have been affected by the latest home advices, and Linseed has declined as well as Rape. Teelseed is scarce, and the prices are unaltered.

BURMAH.

RANGOON.—DISTURBANCE AT TWANTAY.—We are indebted to the courtesy of Major Phayre for the subjoined sketch of the disturbance at Twantay and its originator:—

"Early on the morning of the 9th November the station of Twantay was entered by an armed band of men, consisting of about one hundred, of whom probably thirty had muskets. They were headed or under the direction of a man named Shwe Hla, formerly a fisherman, and believed to be Talaing by race. The gang attacked the house of Mr. H. W. Lewis, the Assistant Commissioner, made him and his family prisoners, and got possession of several Government muskets and about three hundred ball cartridges. Having gained possession of the village of Twantay, companies were sent out into the surrounding country, announcing that the quondam Shwe Hla, now called Boodha Radza, had commenced his reign over Talaing countries. Mr. Lewis and his family were subsequently released. Mr. Lewis was severely beaten, and his cousin was unfortunately wounded by a musket shot. (Since dead.) Shwe Hla some three or four years ago, in plying his trade of a fisherman brought up in his net an image of Boodh,—though some say he got possession of it from other fishermen. However this may be, being a man of a devout turn of mind, not to say disobedient, he paid great respect to the image, abandoned his family, and became a hermit or devotee in this jungle. According to Boodhist notions, any man may rise by the force of merit of good works, and dashing to the highest state of being either in this world or in other worlds. According to these notions Shwe Hla believed he was destined to become a king in this world, as a preparatory to something greater hereafter. He soon found some bad characters ready to resort to him, and appears to have been for some time past in the thick forests of Dilla, ready to commence his career. The appearance of the comet during September is believed to have been regarded by him as a visible signal that the hour of his triumph had come. He appears to have no support, except from bad characters, who soon congregate round a man of the kind. Intelligence has been received that a steamer with fifty armed Burmese, which left Rangoon for Twantay on the 10th, arrived there on the morning of the 11th. Boodha Radza fled into the jungle, where he is being followed up. But the jungles are so thick and extensive that some time may elapse before he is captured. In the meantime precautions have been taken to prevent any alarm from spreading through the country. Since the receipt of the above the steamer has returned to Rangoon, with some twenty-seven prisoners, but without the King."—Bombay Times.

CAPTURE OF SHWE HLA.—Nga Shwe Hla, alias the "Boodha Radza," who raised the disturbance in Twantay, has been delivered up by the villagers of his own native place. They brought him to Capt. Ardagh at Twantay at midnight of the 12th Nov. Now that we have caught this gentleman, the question is—what is to be done with him? Not a moment should be unnecessarily lost, for there are many and unmistakable signs abroad, that the spirit which instigated Shwe Hla to his work of treason and murder is busy with others beside him; and if any untimely leniency—or delay, which is as bad as leniency—should encourage another explosion, a far more serious amount of mischief might be perpetrated. This has to be guarded against; and this can be done by the fullest and promptest vengeance on the offender. It is rumoured—we should be sorry and surprised to hear truly—that Shwe Hla is to be tried as one charged with an ordinary breach of the laws, getting the benefit of all the delays and all the uncertainties inseparably attendant upon legal proceedings in our courts—indeed, in any courts. Shwe Hla was a traitor, taken literally in flagrante delicto—in arms against the State, and his hands, moreover, red with the blood of British subjects.—Bombay Times.

CENTRAL ASIA.

OUR CABUL ADVICES ARE DOWN TO THE 1ST NOV. Our Correspondent says:—"From an Israelitish merchant, who had just arrived from Bokhara, the following information was obtained. That the chief men of Kokan had petitioned the King of Bokhara, complaining loudly against the violence and extortion practised by the Khan of Kokan, and soliciting his interference to deliver them from the oppression of their ruler. In consequence of these representations, the King had resolved to undertake an expedition against the Khan, in which the people of Kokan offered to co-operate. An agent of Russia, who had just arrived at Bokhara, agreed to accompany the expedition, the result of which was, the Khan of Kokan being unable to oppose his adversary in battle, consented to comply with the demands of the King of Bokhara, and in order to pacify the King offered large and valuable presents to him. The King, before leaving Kokan on his return to Bokhara, appointed a representative of his own to overrule the Khan in the event of his again oppressing the people. This arrangement had been brought about through the instrumentality of the Russian agent.

"The people of Chaikar and Istaliff being unable any longer to support the oppressions of Sirdar Ismael Khan, Governor of Kohistan, determined to evacuate those provinces and to emigrate towards Toorkistan. About 2,000 families had already abandoned their homes and were making their way to Toorkistan when the Governor advanced with a powerful force, overtook them, and brought them back. The people now collected to the number of 12,000, and resolved to resist the tyranny and violence of the Governor. The Governor finding it impossible to overcome such an overwhelming body by force, solicited reinforcements from the Dost, who responded to the call by despatching a force under the command of Sirdar Mudad Khan, with orders to conciliate the people. But in the event of his failing, to adopt coercive measures.

"On October 25th, the Ameer deputed Ismael Khan, governor of Bamean, to demand from Meer Mohubut Ally the revenue due by him, and also his daughter in marriage. The demands of the Dost were refused, in consequence of which the governor of Bamean has applied for succour to enforce compliance with the Ameer's demands.

"On the 29th October, a letter was received from the ruler of Herat, Sooltan Jan, announcing the arrival at Herat of a Russian agent, who intended to visit Candahar and Cabool."—Lahore Chronicle.

THE A'RYAS in the times of the Vedas were principally a pastoral, though to a certain extent an agricultural, people. Their flocks and herds, and their sheep, goats, cows, buffaloes, horses, camels, and teams of oxen, with the hump on their shoulders, are frequently mentioned, and made the subjects of supplication and thanksgiving both to gods and men. A daughter among them in the earliest times was designated duhitri or milk-maid; and a Gopa and Gopal, or keeper of cattle, among them, came to mean a protector in general, no doubt from the owners or keepers of cows having great importance in the community. Many expressions formed from a pastoral life, have got an extended generic meaning in their language.—Dr. Wilson's India.

STUDY OF NATIVE LANGUAGES.—I know, from my Indian experience, that a knowledge of the native languages is an indispensable preliminary to understanding and taking an interest in native races, as well as to acquiring their good-will and gaining influence over them. Without it, officers charged with important public affairs, feeling themselves at the mercy of a class of interpreters whose moral character is of a very questionable kind, live in a state of chronic irritation with the natives, which is extremely adverse both to the satisfactory transaction of business and to the still more important object of giving to the people of the country a just impression of the character and intentions of our nation.—Sir Chas. Trevelyan.

THE COCHIN CHINESE.—The people of Cochin China seldom make use of chairs. They use tables instead, on which they seat themselves cross-legged, or recline on cushions. These tables are made of polished wood, and over them are placed handsome mats. In the houses of the great mandarins the tables are placed at different heights, that destined for the highest mandarin being in the centre, elevated above two other tiers lying outside them. The mandarins always know where they should place themselves. On the tables are placed small stands for refreshments, consisting generally of tea and betelnut.

Col. Rowcroft's Victory at Belwa.

To Col. Birch, C.B., secy. to Govt. of India in the Mil. dept., with the Gov. Gen., Allahabad.
 Camp Amarah, Goruckpore dist. April 19, 1858.
 SIR,—I have the honour to acquaint you, for the information of the Rt. Hon. the G. G., that about half past seven o'clock on the morning of the 17th inst. several villagers came into camp, stating that parties of the rebels from Belwa, horse and foot, were out plundering the villages between this place and Belwa. I ordered out detachments of cavalry and infantry, to drive them back and cut them off, and afterwards reinforced them with fresh detachments and two guns. From other reports received, that the enemy were getting up reinforcements from Belwa, and hearing our own guns and those of the enemy, and it appearing as if the insurgents were holding their ground, I moved out of camp with the hd. qrs. of the field force between ten and eleven o'clock A.M. Near the village of Jahmoolie, about three miles from camp, on the Belwa road, I found the troops first sent out, with Maj. Cox, H.M.'s 13th L.I., and Capt. Sotheby, R.N., of H.M.'s ship Pearl, judiciously drawn up with their centre and guns in a small wood, to which they had retired, in hopes of bringing the enemy into the plain from the woods and villages, but the rebels would not venture into the open. Maj. Cox joined me with a portion of the 13th L.I.; and hearing from him how matters stood, and that a large body of the enemy was also on our extreme right, it was determined to make a move round to the right, and leaving Capt. Sotheby on the left, I moved with the remaining troops which I had brought up, and the two small mountain train howitzrs., and with Maj. Cox and a portion of the 13th L.I., well to the right, and advanced. The sowars and rebels on our right soon retired, with a gun, which they only fired two or three times, and, bringing up our right shoulders, the enemy on the left, in front of Capt. Sotheby, finding we had turned their left and rear ceased firing and soon gave way and retired, getting a few shells from the small howitzrs., assisted by the skirmishers with their Enfields and Minies. We continued to advance and press the enemy till near Belwa, when a favourable opportunity appearing to charge a body of the insurgents retreating, as I suspected, with one or two of their guns, after giving them four rounds of shell, I ordered Maj. Richardson, in comm. of the 2nd tr. right squad. Ben. yeo. cav., with my portion of the force to move from my right flank and charge this body of the enemy. The 2nd troop under its gallant leader made a noble home charge; and though they came upon a larger body of the enemy behind a village, and the Sepoys made a desperate resistance, nothing stopped this brave cavalry, and they cut down and killed full sixty of the rebels, and captured a 6-pr. gun with limber, and the enemy were completely dispersed.

The day unfortunately was very unfavourable, the hot wind blowing half a gale, with a blinding dust, or the enemy would have suffered more severely in this action. Maj. Cox, and Capt. Sotheby on the left with his two guns, the Naval rifle, and the Enfields of H.M.'s 13th L.I., early in the day did good execution among the enemy. From all the reports I have received, the enemy must have lost, killed and wounded, between 200 and 300, and one of the Gonda Rajah's chief pundits was killed. Although the enemy had removed several of the killed from the ground where the cavalry charged, 46 dead bodies were counted there yesterday by one of our best spies. The enemy were reported to be about 2,000 sepoy, some golundauze, 1,000 irreg., 100 sowars, with four guns. The Rajah of Gonda was not present; but his karinda, or head agent, was on the ground, on an elephant. When the cav. charged, as soon as I could get a party of cav. from the rear or the left, I moved them up in support under Capt. Chapman, and some inf., to assist also in bringing away the gun. As soon as the wounded had been cared for and the gun brought away, we returned to camp, reaching it at four p.m.

My best thanks are due to Capt. Morgan, 22nd regt. N.I., f.f. staff, and my acting a. de c., the Hon. V. A. Montague, R.N., for their zealous readiness and activity in carrying my orders; to Maj. Cox, comdg. left wing H.M.'s 13th L.I., who was ever active and ready for any duty required of him; to Capt. Sotheby, R.N., of H.M.S. Pearl, comdg. the nav. brig.; to Maj. Richardson, comd. Ben. yeo. cav.; to Capt. Barclay, 68th N.I., in mil. charge of Gorucknath Goorkha regt.; to Capt. Brooks, 1st regt. L.C., attached to Goorkhas, which active and zealous officer I sent forward with the 2nd detach. of H.M.'s 13th L.I. as a guide and interpreter; to the Goorka commandant, Col. Byroop Sing Koor, and Maj. capt. Sawukram Thappa, and to Lieut. Burton, 40th regt. N.I., in charge of the detach. of Sikhs. Also to Drs. Shone and Dickinson, nav. brig.; Dr. Kurwan, H.M.'s 13th L.I.; and Dr. Eteson, attached to Goorkhas—all ready, active, and present in the field. Maj. Richardson brings to my notice the prompt, ready, and careful aid afforded by Dr. J. W. R. Amesbury, Beng. yeo. cav., to those who fell in the charge of the 2nd troop, ably and readily assisted by Dr. Dickinson, doing duty with the nav. brig. Also my thanks are due to the troops of all arms engaged, for the zealous cheerful manner they went through a fatiguing day under a burning sun. My best thanks are especially due to the officers and men of the 2nd tr. Ben. yeo. cav., and their gallant leader, Maj. Richardson, who himself, in the charge, killed six of the enemy. Supernumerary cornet Copland killed three, Cornet and qr. mr. Kloor killed three, Cornet Scott killed several. Maj. Richardson also brings to my notice that Lieuts. Davis, 2nd tr., and Percival, 1st tr., distinguished themselves, as also Serj. Bulmore, Corporal Craven, his orderly, Riding mr. serj. W. Curran, troopers G. Smith and Williams, and trumpeter O'Donnell. Trooper Kindred, 3rd tr., defended Cornet Troop while on the ground wounded, shooting four of the rebels. Lieut. de Hoxar, 3rd tr., wounded early in the action, and Capt. Chapman, severely hurt by his horse falling, remained in the field till the close of the action.

I was obliged to leave our camp standing, and could afford to leave but small detachments to guard it, under the charge of Capt. Macgregor, 9th L.C., attached to the Goorkha force. I felt somewhat anxious about it, receiving a report, as I joined the force in advance, that there was a body of the rebels in our rear on the left. Nearly all the sick were left in the small fort and entrenchment.

My best thanks are due to Mr. Wingfield, commissioner, who accompanied me to the field, and for his obliging readiness to convey any orders; and to Deputy magistrate Skeikh Kairodeen, for his ready attention in the field.

I beg to recommend to the most favourable notice of the Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen. all the officers and men of the different arms engaged in the action.

F. ROWCROFT, Colonel, comdg. Sarun f. f.

A SHAVE.—We are daily looking out for the English post of the 10th July. Somebody in camp, in anticipation of the news, has set about a story that a mob pulled down the Leadenhall-street office, and hung the East India directors on the lamp posts. I do not suppose it will come quite to that, but I think the days of the India House are numbered.—Great-hed's Letters.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TESTIMONIAL TO MR J. S. MILL.

WE have had an opportunity of inspecting a very handsome testimonial, executed in silver by Messrs. Elkington for presentation to Mr. John Stuart Mill by the gentlemen of the office over which he lately presided. It is a casket of oblong form and of remarkably elegant design, having on the lid a copy in bas-relief of Raphael's picture of the "School of Athens," flanked by medallion heads of Apollo and Minerva, on the ends medallions of Aristotle and Plato, and on the front and back portions of the Panatheniac frieze all in bas-relief. The interior is fitted up as an inkstand, and on the inside of the lid is the following inscription:—

on his retirement from the office of "Examiner of Indian Correspondence," in token of high admiration and esteem, and warm personal regard by his associates in that department of the East India House.

Altogether, we may safely pronounce it to be the handsomest inkstand we have ever seen.

It was sent to Mr. Mill with the following address:—

East India House,
September, 1858.

DEAR MR. MILL.—Accept this slight token of the affection and the respect of all the officers of the Examiner's Department of the India House, of which you have from early youth been a member, and for some time the honoured chief.

We have served under you with diligence, because we have served under you with pride. And whatever under the new administrative system may be our several conditions, it will ever be among our most cherished recollections that we were once your associates in office.

That in the voluntary retirement which we so much deplore, you may enjoy many years of health and happiness, and may continue to enrich the literature of the country with those fruits of your genius which have already placed you in the front rank of the philosophers of the age, is the earnest hope and the heart-felt prayer of

Your affectionate friends,

F. W. PRIDEAUX.	G. A. F. SHADWELL.
J. A. F. HAWKINS.	S. HUNT.
E. D. BOURDILLON.	J. H. WILLOCK.
W. T. THORNTON.	T. A. RIDDELL.
J. W. KAYE.	W. PETERS.
E. G. PEACOCK.	W. FIDLER.
J. R. MELVILLE.	F. MANGLES.
T. RUNDALL.	T. P. WILLIAMS.
J. D. CLOSE.	C. WAUD.
S. DRYSDALE.	R. UPTON.
M. NAPIER.	A. ATKINS.
J. F. SHILLITO.	C. BELL.
A. SCOTT.	F. C. DANVERS.
W. H. BATTEN.	J. DOWNTON.
P. A. DANIEL.

To this graceful expression of good feeling Mr. Mill returned the following reply:—

DEAR SIRS,—I thank you heartily for your unsought and only too complimentary expression of the friendly feelings of which I had already received from you individually so many proofs. I have not long had the honour of presiding over you; but during that time, if it had been the sole object of all of you to make my situation agreeable to me, you could not have more effectually exerted yourselves for that purpose.

It is no mere reciprocation of politeness when I say that I have been proud of my associates; and my feelings on my retirement would have been very different from what they are, were it not for the conviction that I leave behind me an office surpassed by none, and equalled by few, in the high qualities of the chiefs of departments, and the general efficiency of the establishment.

Believe me to be, gentlemen, with sincere regard, yours faithfully and obliged,
J. S. MILL.
To the Members of the Examiner's-office,

RETROSPECT OF 1858.

THE year 1857 closed triumphantly for the British arms. After withdrawing the heroic garrison of Lucknow from the scene of their undying glory, Sir Colin Campbell had reached Cawnpore just in time to redeem the disasters caused by General Windham's overweening carelessness. Having provided for the safety of the gallant little band he had rescued from destruction by such a tremendous sacrifice of life, the Commander-in-Chief proceeded to chastise the insolent fury of the Gwalior Contingent, and drove the discomfited rebels, with terrible slaughter, as far as Calpee. Before the termination of the year, he effected a junction with the victorious column under Colonel Seaton; and on the 3rd of January, 1858, marched into the town of Furruckabad, after having signally defeated the forces of the usurping Nawab. It was thought that Sir Colin would then have pushed on to Bareilly, and cleared the province of Rohilcund; but the Governor-General decided, for political reasons, that Lucknow should first be reduced to submission. Sir Colin, therefore, halted at Futtelghur, and on the 4th February had returned to Cawnpore. Four days afterwards he was at Allahabad, in close conference with Lord Canning, but soon hurried back to superintend the great strategic movements which were to result in the final reduction of the capital of Oude. The advanced post, indeed, of Alumbagh, almost within sight of that great city, had never been abandoned. A small but efficient force, under Sir James Outram, held their ground unsupported, until the flower of the British army in India could again be concentrated on that point. On the 1st of March the Commander-in-Chief arrived at Alumbagh, and operations at once commenced. So determined, however, was the resistance offered by the enemy, that it was only on the 19th that Lucknow again became a British possession. From that time it has been maintained without opposition; and great sanitary improvements have likewise been introduced into the modern Gomorrah. Unhappily, the Begum and other principal leaders of the rebels contrived to escape, with the bulk of their followers; and thus the magnificent province of Oude has never ceased to be the scene of strife and bloodshed.

In the meanwhile, Sir Colin's lieutenants had not been idle or unsuccessful. Colonel McCausland constantly harassed the enemy in Rohilcund; Colonel Franks had swept the country from Fyzabad to Lucknow; Brigadier Walpole enforced tranquillity in the Doab; while the Naval Brigade overawed the disaffected in the district around Azimghur. But still more prominent were the services of the generals commanding in Central India. The strong fort of Chandairee fell to Brigadier Stuart; General Whitlock, ever on the move, gave the foe but little breathing time; and Kotah was taken by General Roberts. Brilliant as were all these various operations, they were far surpassed by the exploits of Sir Hugh Rose.

After relieving Saugor, that distinguished officer captured the important fortress of Gurra-kota, then forced the Mudinapore Pass, and sat down before Jhansi. Here he was boldly attacked by the insurgents, whom he repulsed with heavy loss, and Jhansi became the prize of the victor. Still pushing onward, he next appeared before Calpee, which submitted after another pitched battle near Koonch.

With the reduction of Calpee Sir Hugh had imagined that his labours were at an end, but in this he was grievously mistaken. The fugitive sepoys of the Gwalior and Kotah Contingents still hung together, and in desperation made a dash at Gwalior itself. They were met by the Maharajah in person at the head of his new levies, who betrayed his fortunes, and either fled from the field or fraternised with the enemy. Scindiah was only saved by the devoted courage of his body guard, who carried him off in safety to Agra. The triumph of the rebels was but of brief duration. On the 1st of June they entered the city in all the pride of success, and on the 19th they fled from it in terror and confusion. Sir Hugh Rose was again the avenger, and on the 20th the Maharajah was restored to the throne with much pomp and parade. The fugitives were pursued by General Napier and cut up with great slaughter. Here terminated for a time the splendid career of General Rose, who then proceeded to Poona after breaking up the Central India Field Force into moveable columns.

It is now time to return to the Commander in Chief. After a long and tedious interval of inaction, it became evident that a hot-weather campaign must be undertaken for the recovery of Rohilcund. Accordingly in the latter part of the month of April, Brigadier Walpole commenced operations by a serious repulse before the walls of an insignificant fortress, which cost the life of that brilliant officer Colonel Adrian Hope. This disaster, however, was quickly repaired by a series of successes, and on the 6th of May the cantonments at Bareilly were once more occupied by British troops. The pacification of Rohilcund was then gradually effected, and on the 25th of May the Commander in Chief had returned to Futtelghur on his way to Cawnpore and Allahabad, arriving at the latter station on the 9th of June. Here he remained until the 2nd of November, on which day he again entered the province of Oude, but now as Lord Clyde of Clydesdale.

But it must not be supposed that Brigadier Walpole was the only British officer who sustained a reverse during the hot season of 1857. Colonel Milman, in command at Azimghur, after being roughly handled in the field by Koer Sing, the chief of Jugdespore, found himself compelled to take refuge within the walls of that town. Reinforcements rapidly marched to his aid from Benares, under Lord Mark Kerr, and on the 15th April Sir Edward Lugard finally relieved him after twice defeating the enemy, who ventured to oppose his progress. Koer Sing fled towards Arrah, but was mortally wounded in an action with the pursuing column under Brigadier Douglas. His place, however, was ably filled by his brother, Ummer Sing, who defeated a small force of Sikhs and Europeans under Captain Le Grand, that rashly endeavoured to intercept him. This rebel chieftain long continued to hold his ground in the midst of the Jugdespore jungles, and baffled every attempt to bring him to action. By the latest accounts, however, his place of retreat was no longer secure, as certain railway contractors had undertaken to clear away forest and copse-wood.

In Central India military operations have never ceased. The retirement of Sir Hugh Rose from the command afforded many opportunities of distinction to junior officers, who did not fail to turn them to good account. The Rane of Jhansi having been slain in the pursuit after the battle of Koonch, the rebels were led by the Nawab of Banda, the Nana's nephew Rao Sahib, and Tantia Topee. These chiefs were no sooner defeated in one place than they appeared in another. Their guns were taken and their followers slain, and yet they were ever to be heard of, now in one flank, now in the other—to-day on front, to-morrow on the rear. However, their pursuers were as ubiquitous as themselves. Brigadier Smith and Colonels Robertson and Michell added victory to victory, and gave their disheartened foes no time to rally or recruit their forces. The Nawab of Banda has at length thrown himself on the mercy of the British Government, and Tantia Topee is wandering without hope in the wild mountainous district around Asseerghur, where his prototype Chetoo, the last of the Pindarries, in fleeing from his pursuers, was slain and mangled by a tiger. Rao Sahib is also hemmed in, but of his infamous uncle, the Nana Sahib, nothing very certain seems to be known.

The Madras Presidency has remained faithful and tranquil throughout the year, and the Madras army has done excellent service in Rajpootana. An equally good account cannot be given of the sister presidency of Bombay, though that army, also, has covered itself with glory in the field. In Kolapore, Nargoond,—where Mr. Manson was foully murdered—Belgaum and Goozerat, disturbances have occasionally broken out, though promptly suppressed, and in one or two instances the fidelity of native regiments proved worse than doubtful.

The Punjab has, for the most part, formed a striking contrast to the rest of the Upper Provinces. Two disarmed native regiments, indeed, as if moved by uncontrollable madness, rose upon a European regiment at Mooltan, but atoned for their folly with their lives. At one time, also, some apprehensions were entertained of the loyalty of the Malwa Sikhs, but, under the vigorous administration of Sir John Lawrence, treason is no sooner suspected than rendered impossible. The districts of Meerut and Delhi have, likewise, been placed under his strong hand; while the last of the Moguls, having been tried by court-martial and found guilty of stirring up rebellion against the paramount power, has been sent to Allahabad, as a prisoner, to be dealt with as to the Governor-General may seem befitting. Delhi has fallen from its high estate, though it is still to remain a great arsenal, but garrisoned by European troops. Agra, too, is shorn of its former greatness, for the head-quarters of the civil government of the North West Provinces have been removed to Allahabad.

Sir James Outram having accepted a seat in the Calcutta Council was succeeded by Mr. Montgomery as Chief Commissioner of Oude. In the hope of forwarding the pacification of that province, Lord Canning issued a proclamation in the month of March, enjoining all landholders of every degree to lay down their arms on pain of confiscation of their estates and privileges. The spirit of this document was fully understood by the persons to whom it was addressed, but in England its apparent harshness was seized by ministers as a pretext to attack the Whig party through their nominee, the Governor-General. An insolent and professedly secret despatch was accordingly penned by Lord Ellenborough, and sent to India. But unless the rebuke was made public, the object really desired could not be attained. By a species of Parliamentary legerdemain it was accordingly brought to light, though the result proved far other than had been intended, or anticipated. The blow recoiled on the ministry, who were only saved by the self-sacrifice of the real delinquent, the President of the Board of Control. On the resignation of Lord Ellenborough, that high and responsible post was confided to Lord Stanley, a statesman young in years, but endowed with the wisdom and gravity of a far greater age.

But the great event of the past year, so far as India is concerned, yet remains to be told. After three different Bills had been brought in, each miserably defective, and after many nights spent in discussing Resolutions, the British Parliament decreed that on the 1st of August, 1858, the government of India by the East India Company should for ever terminate, and that India should from that day be ruled directly by the Crown through the medium of a Secretary of State aided by a Council of Fifteen. The first secretary has at least been well selected, and India is fortunate in commencing its new career under the honest guidance of Lord Stanley. The proclamation of the new order of things was postponed to the 1st day of November, when it was announced to the princes and people of Hindostan, that Queen Victoria had taken the government of their country into her own hands. Great rejoicings were simulated on this occasion, public and private buildings were brilliantly illuminated, and large quantities of gunpowder expended in royal salutes. On the following morning the Commander-in-Chief marched out of Allahabad, crossed the Ganges by the new bridge of boats, and opened the winter campaign. Since then several forts have been surrendered, and a victory has been gained over the rabble army of Beni Madho.

The obituary of the past year is less heavy than that of its predecessor. Still, there are only too many names that recall the sense of public loss as well as of private sorrow. The death of Sir William Peel was lamented by an entire nation; nor much less universal was the regret for the brave and chivalrous Hodson. Colonel Adrian Hope, too, could ill be spared; nor was the venerable Dr. Wilson, Bishop of Calcutta, gathered to his fathers, without grief to all good men; and now we learn that Col. John Jacob, the renowned leader of the Scinde Irregular Horse, has also been taken from us.

In China the British arms have proved signally successful during the year that has passed away. The allied squadrons of England and France having seized Canton and entered the Peiho, the Emperor wisely conceded whatever was demanded of him, and henceforth the "Central Flowery Land" is open to all barbarians for the purposes of trade or travel.

The hitherto inhospitable island of Japan has likewise been induced to throw open certain ports to the commerce of the world; and thus closes the unjust monopoly so long enjoyed, or rather possessed, by the Dutch. To Lord Elgin is mainly due the credit of having accomplished these great objects; and, as a slight recognition of his services, the first embassy to Peking has been confided to his brother, the Hon. F. Bruce.

Having thus hastily glanced at the chief events that have occurred in connection with the East during the twelve months that have just completed their annual cycle, it only remains for us to tender our sincere thanks to our numerous friends and subscribers for past kindnesses, and to offer them our hearty good wishes for their health and happiness throughout the year that is now opening before them.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HINDUSTANI v. OORDOO.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—There is but little doubt in the minds of most men who have been any time in India, and have done their duty there, that the remarks on passing events made by the special correspondent of the Times are generally unfair, and show a very one-sided view. Often his taste has been most questionable in giving to the British public the result of wanderings in the Simla bazaar under the protection of the lordly civilian ruling there; and in many other instances, before committing to paper the poisonous tales picked up here and there, it would have been well had he considered how far they were true and his tattler trustworthy. However, as regards the high-flown language used in the late Proclamation he is perfectly right, and whether the idea is his own, or, as is most probably the case, borrowed, it is worthy of more than passing comment. Papers connected with India, such as yourself, Home News, &c., &c., have a certain power, and it is through such as these that the ruling powers should know one of the great, aye, and chief causes of our being hated and misunderstood in India.

It has been the custom from almost our first having power in India to use this Oordoo language both in our proclamations and civil courts, and as it is only understood by a few educated Mussulmans and the Mahomedans attached to the courts, I cannot be far wrong in surmising that our proclamations have been misunderstood and our justice doubtful. The mass talk Hindustani, using few if any Persian words and use the Hindee character, so I leave your readers to judge how much of a proclamation, written in Arabic character and full of high-sounding Persian words, is likely to be understood, or how far the ignorant Ryot, talking nearly pure Hindee, is likely to find justice in courts so composed. It has appeared sometimes as if the Government wished to be misunderstood, and only issued proclamations to satisfy outside grumblers, or to show their leaning towards the language and manners of the conquered Mussulman; were it not so, there could be no excuse for their carrying their predilection for an unknown tongue to such a length in the proclamation regarding our conclusion of the war with Russia and the fall of Sebastopol, the annexation of Oude, and, lastly, in her Majesty's proclamation.

Under the new régime these things should not be; let the gracious language of our Sovereign be in a tongue understood by the mass, and not that confined to a very small portion of her Indian subjects. In the kutcherry or courts of justice let the Government insist on plain Hindustani, ungarbled and un-Persianised, being used in reports and spoken: then perhaps witnesses and prisoners may understand the proceedings, which hitherto they have not; and let her Majesty's orders on whatever subject be written and printed in the language and character of the larger proportion of her subjects, and not leave the composition or distribution to the whims and vagaries of Persian-loving civil authorities.—Yours obediently, INTERPRETER.

APPOINTMENT, CEYLON.—Downing-street, Dec. 29.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint T. M. Rennards, Esq., to be a Stipendiary Magistrate for the Island of Mauritius.

THE LONDON AND EASTERN BANK.

The following letter has been addressed by Colonel Auchmuty Tucker to the solvent and paying shareholders in this gigantic swindle:—

GENTLEMEN,—On the 8th of October I forwarded from Gibraltar, for publication, "A Letter and Appendix," containing tabular statements, showing as nearly as might be, the real state of our affairs.

The letter and appendix were necessarily hurriedly written and compiled, and I have since seen that many trifling omissions and additions would have added considerably to their utility. Still, to save time was the great object. If the proposed "compromises" were allowed to take place, our ruin was certain, and I trust my letter may have reached you in time to avert that calamity, or, at least, at once to put a stop to such proceedings as those pointed out in it.

I have now addressed letters to Mr. Thynne and Colonel Tait, direct, urging them to see what arrangements can be come to with the creditors of this unfortunate bank, by which, on any of the shareholders tendering the present call in full, with say, £20 per cent. additional (£10 per share), the said creditors shall give him a release in full, as against all future demands on their part.

The solvent shareholders who have already paid in full, but who have received no release from future demands, would probably, in almost every instance, gladly pay the £20 per cent. additional to the call, and thus be quit of the affair for ever.

Again, such large shareholders as Sir Patrick Grant, Col. Baldwin, Hon. Mr. Erskine, Col. Yates, Col. Bond, Col. Thomson, Col. Oldfield, Capt. Morrison, and many others would probably be immediately aided by their friends and relatives, if the latter saw that by one sacrifice, however large, all future responsibility could be got rid of. At present we are positively forcing honourable men to have recourse to all sorts of devices, to make the worst of their affairs, in order to be in a position to affect a "compromise," and get a "release in full." No friends will at present come forward to assist in paying the "call in full," because by so doing they would actually inflict an injury, and place their relatives in the same unenviable position we now occupy.

By the plan proposed, I feel assured the greater portion of our largest shareholders, and all the smaller ones, including all those in India, would at once find the means of payment. It is the future uncertainty and responsibility which now weighs as a millstone around our necks.

Our present creditors are chiefly three or four joint-stock banks, and it is fully as much to their interest as it is to ours to get a speedy settlement, even at a nominal sacrifice; for, in truth, they are now sacrificing immense sums in loss of interest alone, and would probably gladly come to terms, seeing the prospect of immediate payment appeared so good. The lesser creditors, of whom there are very few indeed, might be settled with at once.

There are difficulties in the way; but none, I trust, which a strong and determined pull of the shareholders may not reasonably hope to overcome, if made in concert, aided, as they now could be, by those gentlemen through whose strenuous exertions Major-General Brooke and Major Corfield were enabled to throw us into chancery. They are now our paid solicitors, and will, no doubt, display equal energy in releasing us from our difficulties, as they evinced in behalf of their late clients, when they succeeded in placing us in our present unhappy position, against the determined opposition of the solvent and paying shareholders. But for this false move our affairs, under the management of Messrs. Stuart, Oliver, and Coleman, aided by the exertions of the committee appointed by ourselves, would probably ere this have been so far wound up that our debts would have been paid, and our future responsibility chiefly got rid of. The enormous law charges would have been avoided, and the cases against G. H. Smith, and the trustees of Stephens' marriage settlement, &c., &c., would have been going on simultaneously with the realisation of our assets.

The present plan, if acted upon promptly, will doubtless cause considerable sums to be paid in at once, and will, in every respect, be advantageous to all concerned, and a portion of the £20 per cent., now tendered, ought eventually to be refunded.

I am fully aware that difficulties may lie in the way, and I am told that a rule of law exists, by which a release to one or two, or more, joint debtors operates as a release to all. And this, it may be contended, will deter creditors from coming into the arrangement, however otherwise willing to do so; but the ingenuity of lawyers has, I am also informed, found a way of surmounting this difficulty, by getting the creditor to enter into covenant not to sue, claim against, or further molest the individual debtor; which agreement may be pleaded in bar to any action or proceeding, and so have the effect of a release, without prejudice to the rights of the creditor, as against the other parties jointly liable.

Again, further difficulties may possibly be found, arising from our being in bankruptcy, and being tied down by the provisions of an Act of Parliament; but I am willing to hope that these and all other difficulties may be surmounted.

Trusting you will severally at once take steps to bring this proposal forward, by organising a meeting of shareholders and creditors, I remain, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed) AUCHMUTY TUCKER,
Colonel, Bengal Cavalry,
Holder of 120 Shares.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE HON. MRS. ANSON, widow of General the Hon. Sir George Anson, late Commander-in-Chief in India, died on the 30th Dec., from taking laudanum by mistake.

DEATH OF LORD CLYDE'S FATHER.—The venerable parent of our Indian commander-in-chief died at Granton on the 22nd Dec., at a very advanced age, and was interred on the 27th in Warriston Cemetery. The funeral was strictly private.

GOSSIP ABOUT JOHN M'LIVER, LORD CLYDE'S FATHER.—"Senex" writes to the Glasgow Herald:—"John M'Liver was an apprentice to an eminent cabinetmaker in Argyle-street of Glasgow towards the end of last century. The gentleman to whom he was bound as an apprentice having died in 1800, John M'Liver became a journeyman cabinetmaker to his master's brother and successor, whose extensive warehouses in Argyle-street were destroyed by fire. A gentleman informed me that he remembered Colin M'Liver perfectly well as being a black-headed boy and very lively. He used to run about the workshops of the above-mentioned cabinetmakers. John M'Liver was a steady, well-behaved workman, and in point of intelligence was rather superior to the general run of workmen. There is a gentleman in the city who was getting instructions in cabinetmaking, and is still alive, who told me that he worked at the same bench as John M'Liver. This gentleman lately wrote to the Isle of Mull to make inquiry regarding his old shopmate, and received a letter from John himself, expressing many thanks for his kindness in inquiring after him. The same gentleman was in Gibson's class in the Glasgow Grammar School with Lord Clyde, then standing simply 'Colin M'Liver' upon the roll of the class. His schoolfellows, as is well known, invited Lord Clyde to a class dinner when he was in Glasgow, and his Lordship attended, and spent a happy evening with them. It is rather singular, but it has never been explained, how Lord Clyde did not visit his father in Mull, when he was so near his aged parent's place of residence. It is said that Lord Clyde had been in the practice for many years of allowing his father an annuity of £30, which the old man said was quite sufficient to keep him comfortable, and more than he had been accustomed to spend. Lord Clyde entered the army by the advice of his mother's relations, who assisted him at that time. Mrs. M'Liver's maiden name was 'Campbell,' and Lord Clyde assumed that name as being a more dignified military name than 'M'Liver.'"

EGYPT AND INDIA.—The line of railway is now open in its entire length from Alexandria on the Mediterranean Sea to Suez on the Red Sea. The distance between the two seas is about the same as from London to Manchester. The London and North Western Railway Company charge £3 per ton for conveyance of goods from the Metropolis to Lancashire, and bearing in view the difference in the cost of construction, the value of land being so high in England and so cheap in Egypt, the carriage of goods along the Isthmus, by rail, to Suez, ought not to exceed £3 per ton. At this rate there would be a wonderful expansion of trade by the overland route. Already the traffic with Egypt has received an impetus. First-class steamships now depart every few weeks from the Thames to Alexandria, and they act as feeders to the Indian trade. But the Mersey people ship largely to the Mediterranean, and steamers leave that port for Alexandria every few days. Messrs. Vianna, Chapple, and Co., Messrs. Bibby, and Burns and M'Ivor, are the principal owners of the Alexandrian lines of steam ships. As great quantities of fancy goods are forwarded from the manufacturing districts to the East, a project is on foot to place screw steamers to connect at Suez with the Liverpool vessels for Bombay, Madras, and Calcutta. The rate charged from Liverpool to Alexandria is 45s. per ton, and if the Pacha reduces the rate through Egypt before the expiration of 1859, we may have the through rates from England to India reduced one-half.

PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.—It is stated that the Council of India have in a general sense resolved not to grant any more guarantees on Indian undertakings for some time to come.

PERSIA.—A letter from Teheran states that the Shah of Persia has appointed M. Houry, the French Orientalist whom Feruk Kaha brought from Paris with him, professor of the French language to his son, the hereditary Prince. M. Houry is, at the same time, charged by the Shah to translate the works of the Emperor Napoleon III. into Persian.

The Indian Church during the Great Rebellion. By the Rev. M. A. Sherring,
 A.M., L.L.B. London: James Nisbet and Co.

The church in India has received that baptism of blood, which in all times and in all countries has proved so efficacious in strengthening the weak and confirming the steadfast. The native Christians have certainly come forth from the fiery ordeal to which they have been subjected, in a far more satisfactory manner than was generally expected. Many of them made open profession of their belief in the Redeemer, in the midst of dangers and persecutions that might have appalled the most resolute, and not a few of them nobly laid down their lives rather than abjure the truth. Mr. Sherring, therefore, has only done them an act of justice in collecting the various narratives of the disasters that befell the church in India during the recent convulsion, and in recording the sufferings and endurance of its first martyrs. The most interesting are decidedly those which describe the exemplary conduct of native missionaries, and among these the story of the Rev. Gopinath Nundy stands pre-eminent for its simple pathos. We can easily believe that Mr. Sherring's labours will be duly appreciated by a large class of readers.

*The Koran in India: a Comparison of the
 zebe.* By Lunley Smith, B.A. Macmillan and Co.

To this well-written and clever essay has been awarded the Le Bas prize for 1858. The materials have been selected carefully and conscientiously, and put together with considerable skill and ingenuity. The language may possibly be thought too ambitious, but that is a common and venial fault with young writers, naturally anxious to display the copiousness of their vocabulary. We observe, however, at least two errors in matters of fact, and which are generally current in this country. It is stated that no Hindoo could "embark upon the black water, as the ocean was termed, without loss of caste." Undoubtedly there is a great risk of incurring contamination on board an English ship, but the mere act of sailing over the deep was never held to interfere with the prejudices of caste, or how could there have been any coasting trade in the olden times, or any communication with Ceylon? The other mistake committed by the essayist is more serious, because it implies an unjust attack upon an honoured and glorious, though now powerless, corporation. In offering some sufficiently vague observations on the future conversion of the natives, Mr. Smith absurdly remarks—"The supineness of a hundred years has resulted in the convulsion of our whole Indian empire." Has the "empire" existed a hundred years? What was the extent of the British "empire" in the East in 1758? Or is it true that the late mutinies were caused by the supineness of the Government with regard to missionary labours? What say you, Mr. Smith?

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine. No.
 DXIX. London: Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

The January number of Maga contains three papers on eastern subjects, and all evincing the ability and artistic experience for which that deservedly popular periodical has so long been distinguished. The first on the list is an excellent review of Captain Yule's valuable contribution to our knowledge of the Burman empire. An abridged and cheap edition of the Mission to the Court of Ava would be really a boon to the public, nor would it in any way diminish the sale of the more costly work.

The "Cruise in Japanese Waters" is both amusing and instructive. The following extract, however, will probably be more to the taste of our readers, than any remarks from our own pen. The writer is illustrating the extraordinary aptitude for imitation displayed by the Japanese:—

"At one stall we found microscopes, telescopes, sun-dials, rules, scales, clocks, knives, spoons, glass, beads, trinkets, and mirrors—all of native make upon European models—and the prices were so ridiculously small, that even at the lowest estimate of the value of labour it was a puzzle how any profit could be realised upon the articles. The microscopes were very neat, and intended to be carried in the pocket; an imitation morocco case opened, and contained within it a small and not very powerful lens, fixed in a metal frame at a short distance from an upright pin, on which the object for examination was to be stuck, and the entire workmanship was highly creditable. The telescopes were framed in stiff paper-cases, sufficiently thick and ingeniously lacerated to resemble leather over wood. The glasses, though small, were clear; the magnifying power was not great, but it was a marvel to see such an instrument sold for a shilling! We saw another superior description of Japanese telescope, six feet long when pulled out; it was quite as powerful and as genuine as those real Dollands which our naval outfiters are in the habit of procuring for credulous parents when equipping their sailor children at seaports. The price at Nagasaki is a dollar or five shillings, but at Portsmouth it is five pounds sterling! The Japanese clocks exhibited for sale were beautiful specimens of mechanism, and proved what we had heard, that the people of this country are most cunning in the fashioning of metals. One we saw was like those neat table-clocks at home under square glass-covers, all the works being open to scrutiny; it was six or eight inches high and about as broad, and it would have been difficult to know it from Mr. Dent's best of a like description. The Japanese day being divided into twelve hours of unequal duration—dependent, so far as we could understand, upon the amount of daylight or darkness in each day—the dial of their clocks was therefore different from ours; in some it was changed every month, and in others the motion of the hands was regulated by an ingenious adaptation of weights, and increased or decreased length of pendulum. A good clock of this description, which, from its elegance and the beautiful workmanship and chasing of the exterior, would have been an ornament anywhere, was only priced at about £8."

The historical notices of Japan from the seventh century before the Christian era are also equally opportune and interesting.

The last paper to which we need allude is a calm and critical examination of the Royal Proclamation to India. The ungracious and ungrateful omission of all mention of the great Company who founded and established our eastern empire is justly rebuked, and not less honest is the acknowledgment that the policy hinted at, rather than expressed, in this important document is in fact nothing more than an avowed and public recognition of what is called the "traditionary policy" of the East India House.

INDIA! what bright-hued pictures lie rolled up
 All in one word! white costumed, dark-hued men,
 Palms, spices, jewels, tigers, elephants,
 Hell-brooded superstitions, hideous gods.
 A fifth of all the men that walk upon
 The grassy rind which domes the central fires,
 Dwell on that patch which we call India.

Cecil and Mary.

STOOPING TO CONQUER.—You would be amused with Sir Edward Campbell's (Captain, 60th Rifles) costume; it is all flannel, of different colours, and put on without the slightest regard to appearance. He carries a number of pouches about him, and a Sikh had been examining them, in their cool, off hand manner; a gunner, resenting such familiarity towards an officer, said to Campbell, with a proper appreciation of the times, "We are obliged to bend to circumstances now; at any other time I would have knocked that fellow's — head off."—Gravelled's Letters.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.—There is a great laugh against Hodson, certainly the most wide-awake soldier in the camp, for having been thoroughly taken in, on the 9th July, by the cavalry who dashed through the camp. He went in pursuit with the Guides, and rode for three miles parallel to the enemy, taking them for our own people, and supposing they were on the same errand. He was at last undeceived by their crossing a bridge and galloping off to Delhi.—Gravelled's Letters.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA
in COUNCIL publishes for the information of the Holders of INDIAN GOVERNMENT PROMISSORY NOTES, and of Proprietors of TRANSFER LOAN PROPERTY, who may not be resident in India, the following Notifications which have been issued by the Government of India, and published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on the 12th and 19th November, 1858, respectively.

NOTIFICATIONS.

"FORT WILLIAM, FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT, the 12th November, 1858.
"No. 61.

"The Holders of Indian Government Promissory Notes are hereby informed that, from and after the 1st of December, 1858, interest on their Promissory Notes will be made payable, if desired, at the East-India House in London, by Bills on demand on the General Treasuries of Calcutta and Madras, subject to the Rules and Regulations at present in force, or that may hereafter be issued by the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, or by this Government.

"2. When Holders of Notes in Calcutta desire that the Interest thereon should be made payable by Bills issued in London, they must present their Notes at the Office of the Accountant-General to the Government of India, where an endorsement will be made on each of the Notes in question as follows:—

"Interest payable in London by Draft on Calcutta (or Madras, as the case may be)."

"3. Notes presented for endorsement at Bombay and Madras will be forwarded to the Accountant-General to the Government of India at this Presidency, by whom the Notes, after endorsement and registry, will be returned to the Presidency whence they were sent, for delivery to the Holders.

"4. Notes presented for endorsement in India will be double numbered, for transmission, if desired, by halves, in order to facilitate the issue of a Duplicate in case of loss in transit. A fee of One Rupee will be levied for the transference and double-numbering.

"5. On presentation of the transferred Notes at the East India House, on or after the dates* on which the Interest falls due on the different Loans, Drafts for the Interest then payable will be granted on the General Treasury of Calcutta or Madras, after due examination and check of the Notes.

"6. Whenever Holders of such Notes may require Interest to be made again payable in India, the Notes must be presented at the East-India House, with an application to that effect to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State, who will cause the previous endorsements to be cancelled, and a fresh endorsement entry to be made on each Note as follows:—

"Interest payable in India."

"7. Holders of Promissory Notes in London on which Interest is payable by Draft on Calcutta may require Drafts on Madras in lieu, or vice versa. This object will be effected by a cancellation of the previous endorsement on the Notes, and by a fresh endorsement entry to be made in London.

"8. Every Applicant, upon sending in a Note for endorsement, must in his application state that he agrees to be bound by the Rules which for the time being may be in force relative to Notes endorsed for payment of Interest in England.

"9. Whenever application is made by the Endorsee of a Note for the payment of Interest in England by Drafts on the General Treasury at Calcutta or Madras, the Applicant must have his Note previously renewed in his own name. Any endorsement made in India of an endorsed Note will not be recognised in England.

"10. Interest payable in Sica Rupees will be paid in England by Bills for the equivalent amount in Company's Rupees, at the rate of Company's Rupees 100-10-8 for every 100 Sica Rupees.

"11. Any charge incurred in England on account of Stamps must be borne by the Holders of the Promissory Notes, and must be paid at the India House on application for Drafts.

"12. Endorsed Notes will be received at the East-India House, for renewal or consolidation or sub-division, and will be sent out thence to Calcutta, a receipt being given to the Holder of the Notes. The new Notes when received from India will not be delivered (except upon the production of the receipt, and payment of a fee of Two Shillings for each new Note, and the amount of Postage levied on the Notes in transmission to and from India.

"13. No Duplicate of a lost Note, endorsed for payment of Interest in England, will be issued until notice of such loss, and of an application having been made for a duplicate has been advertised in three successive issues of the London Gazette, and also of the Times, or such other newspaper as the Right Honourable the Secretary of State may direct, in addition to the Advertisements in India required by the Rules for the time being in force in India; and such duplicate will not be granted except at the Loan Office in Calcutta, and to the person nominated by the Home Authorities to receive the Duplicate.

"14. In all other respects the Rules for the time being in force in India relating to the issue of Duplicates of lost Notes will be applicable to endorsed Notes.

"15. Interest will be payable only to the legal Holder of a Note, and no trust will be recognised.

"By Order of the Honourable the President in Council, (Signed) "C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,
"Secretary to the Government of India."

"FORT WILLIAM, FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT, the 19th November, 1858.

"No. 63.

"With reference to the Notification from this department, No. 61, dated the 12th instant, it is hereby notified that the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India has determined to extend to Proprietors of Transfer Loan Property, registered on the books in India, the advantage which is enjoyed by the Holders of Notes of the Four per cent. Loans of subscribing to the Five per cent. Loan, half in Cash and half in Transfer Loan Security. By this arrangement, Holders of Transfer Loan Property registered on the London books, will have the option, by Transfer to the India Books, and by then subscribing to the Five per cent. Loan, of availing themselves of the grant, in England, of Bills for Interest on Indian Loan Securities, in common with other Creditors of the Indian Government.

"No. 64.

"Whereas doubts have been entertained as to the construction of paragraph 9 of the Notification, No. 61, issued from this department on the 12th instant, relative to the payment of Interest on Indian Government Promissory Notes at the East-India House in London, by Bills on the Treasuries of Calcutta and Madras, it is hereby notified that the application mentioned in paragraph 9 of that Notification, is the Application for Endorsement referred to in paragraphs 2 and 3, and that Endorsements made in England of endorsed Notes will be recognised in England.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a

Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocqueler's former works, and his well known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocqueler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information for almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundel's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALING, New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygienic agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygienic system of medicine introduced by James Morison. The Hygienist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

Messrs. MAPPIN'S Table Knives still maintain their unrivalled Superiority; all their blades, being their own Sheffield manufacture, are of the very first quality, with secure Ivory Handles, which do not come loose in hot water; and the difference in price is occasioned solely by the superior quality and thickness of the Ivory Handles.

WITHOUT SPRINGS.

110, REGENT-STREET, and 33, LUDGATE-HILL,
Are the Dental Establishments of

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established
DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.
In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE
GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, denies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804; and at 134, Duke-street, Liverpool.

GABRIEL'S TREATISE fully explains the system, and may be had gratis, for stamped envelope.
The Patent White Enamel, which effectually restores de-cayed front teeth, can only be obtained as above.—OSBORN

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 8th Dec. has brought us news a day older than that received by the last mail from Bombay. It reached Suez on the first day of the year, as did the Bombay mail of the 24th Dec. on the 4th instant. With ordinary despatch the mails may be delivered in London on the eleventh day after their arrival at Suez. Had there been a steamer, therefore, at Alexandria ready to go to sea, the present mails might have been distributed at least three days ago, and those from Bombay might have been expected this evening. Any delay on this side of the Isthmus is quite inexcusable. There is no reason why a steam-vessel of some kind—an Admiralty steamer, rather than none—should not always be in attendance on the Indian mails, and at once proceed to Marseilles as soon as they can be put on board. It is impossible for any man to divine how soon, or how late, tidings of vast importance may be brought from our eastern dominions to the shores of the Mediterranean. Are they to remain there till a P. and O. steamer finds it convenient to call for them? or until an Admiralty steamer will condescend to take charge of them? We had thought that Government steamers were the property of the nation, and as such could not be more advantageously employed than in protecting and advancing the public interests. But it seems that we are mistaken. Officers of her Majesty's navy object to be treated as letter carriers, just as they objected to carry troops for their country's service. The P. and O. Company, on the other hand, are overweighted. Like the dog in the manger, they are determined to keep all intruders at a respectful distance, and thus pledge themselves to perform impossibilities. We have hitherto forbore to raise our voice against our neighbours, whose invariable courtesy demands our thanks, but we cannot any longer preserve silence on a matter of such general importance. The health of invalids, too, is often seriously affected by the wearisome delay in the abominable hotels of Alexandria, and in many cases the expenditure thus incurred is a serious inconvenience. We trust, therefore, that better arrangements will henceforth be made both for the transport of mails and the conveyance of passengers, with their boxes unbroken; otherwise, we shall certainly not flinch from the ungrateful task of exposing a system of neglect and carelessness that is disgraceful to a great company like that which monopolises the transit to the East.

From Oude the latest intelligence merely repeats what was already known with respect to Lord Clyde's victory over Beni Madho. The Shahabad district appears to be again settling down, though a few small gangs of marauders are still at large. These, however, are being hunted down by Brigadier Douglas and Colonel Walter, while their former coverts in the Jugdespore jungle are daily being laid open, through the labours of three thousand hired peasants.

The display of fireworks at Calcutta on the 26th November, which was expected to have been something very grand, turned out a miserable failure. The spectacle, we are told, was divided into three parts, the principal feature in part the first being the crown and regalia of Great Britain and her Majesty the Queen on horseback; in part the second, the siege and capture of Delhi and the eruption of Mount Etna; and in part the third, a triumphal arch over her Majesty, behind the arch being a fan shaped bouquet, consisting of sixteen thousand rockets, bursting and sparkling shells, Roman candles, &c. Unfortunately the explosive materials could not be induced to explode, and thus rather less effect was produced than is sometimes obtained by a Guy Fawkes bonfire. The outlay for this blank affair is variously estimated at from £2,500 to £6,000, but as Government pays for all, it is, of course, nobody's business, and of no consequence whatever.

Lord Harris had returned to Madras, after a pleasant trip down the Malabar coast, and across to Ceylon. His lordship's health, we rejoice to learn, has much benefited by the sea voyage and his release from the cares of office. The regret for his early departure from the Presidency is not likely, however, to counterbalance the satisfaction that will be experienced on learning that Sir Charles Trevelyan has been selected his successor.

A painful rumour has reached us, by way of St. Petersburg. It is the announcement of Lady Canning's death. But, while mentioning the report, we would not be supposed to give it entire credence, and our incredulity is increased by the circumstance that the sad intelligence has not been confirmed by any telegram from Suez, so that it could not have been known at Bombay on Christmas-eve.

The ex-King of Delhi, accompanied by two wives, a son, and a grandson, left Calcutta on the 4th December, on board the Megara, bound for the Cape—though not to him one—of Good Hope. And so passes away from Hindostan the last of the Great Moguls!

The China news is devoid of general interest, the local papers being almost entirely taken up with the trial of William Manuel Robinet, the fraudulent insolvent. The sentence of the Court was as follows:—"With regard to the Mercedes shipment, I cannot look upon it as more than one of suspicion, the fraud is not clearly proved; but with respect to the other two cases, viz., the transaction of the rice per Ozenbridge, and the affair of Torico and Zulaga, the adjudication of the court is, that the insolvent be conditionally discharged at the end of twelve calendar months; and for general misconduct with respect to other creditors, and also while under examination, to be further imprisoned for six calendar months, to commence on the expiration of the first sentence." The creditors, according to the present practice, have the power of releasing the insolvent, if they take a different view of the case.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of Captain Shepherd, whose resignation of his seat in the Council for India was mentioned in our last issue. The appointment of a successor will probably take place on Tuesday next, and it is said that Sir J. D. H. Elphinstone, Bart., M.P. for Plymouth, is likely to be chosen. It has been decided that the sum of £1,800 be annually set apart from the revenues of India as an acknowledgment of the services of the Directors of the East India Company. If this allowance be continued on the same scale, the last Directors will rejoice in the receipt of salaries three times better than the pittance allotted to the present holders of that honorary office.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

PATNA, Nov. 30th.

The rebels under Hurlkissen Sing have been moving along the banks of the river, their numbers being reduced to about 200 infantry and 150 cavalry. The mounted police and cavalry hung on them, and Colonel Seymour marched parallel to him with his guns along the Trunk Road. At one o'clock yesterday the enemy were at the extremity of a large dearah, and could go no further. Information was despatched to Colonel Seymour, but from some cause unexplained he did not arrive, and night coming on the cavalry were obliged to retire. A party of rebels under Meghur Sing, about 300 strong, was thirteen miles west of Judgepore yesterday morning. They were making for the Ganges, and will doubtless join the party under Hurlkissen Sing.

PATNA, Dec. 2.

The Shahabad rebels are now thoroughly dispersed. Colonel Seymour marched on the morning of the 30th to Oodhora, and found that, after throwing their muskets into the river, that part under Hurlkissen Sing had dispersed in twos and threes. Hurlkissen Sing, with five others, was said to have gone south, having failed to procure a boat in which to cross the river. Meghur Sing, with about 200 men, is still in the west thanah; but Brigadier Douglas has gone in that direction, and his band will also no doubt soon disperse. Three Madras Sowars have been murdered by a party of about twenty rebels near Mohoucah, and we hear that Ummer Sing, and Seedha Sing, and about 200 sepoys, are in the Majentah Pergunna of Zillah, Behar, near Palamow.

PATNA, Dec. 3.

Mr. Money reports that the bands of Hurlkissen Sing and Meghur Sing are now both completely dispersed, and that the rebels may be considered at an end in Shahabad. The only quarter from which a renewal of disturbance may be feared is Palamow, where a body of sepoys under Seeda Sing and Ram Bahadur Sing have taken refuge; they will probably be joined by Hurlkissen Sing, Meghur Sing, and the rest of the leaders, who are now hiding in Shahabad.

VONET PRÆTORIA NIHIL.—Mr. Theobald has resumed his duties as Secretary to the Indigo Planters' Association. At a meeting of the Association he described the effect of his labours in England. The Black Act he thought was postponed sine die. Three guarantees, he considered, had been secured, "viz., the extensive sympathy which our petitions and representations have secured in the mercantile classes in England, Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham, London and many other great seats of commerce would have given me a powerful support, if I had had occasion to call upon them. They are greatly interested in the welfare of British people in India, and would have used their influence on our behalf through their representatives in the House of Commons. (2.) The conversion to our views of some of the most prominent supporters of the Black Acts; even such men as Mr. Marshman, Mr. Hawkins, and Mr. Bailey, think that by circumstances they have become inexpedient. (3.) The altered opinion of large numbers of persons respecting the natives; it is now seen that their feelings towards us as people of a different religion and social system are hostile." Those guarantees are useful, but none of them are permanent. No Englishman should relax his efforts until Parliament has inserted a clause in the next India Bill providing that "The Legislative Council shall have no power to pass any Act depriving British born subjects of trial by jury of their Peers, before English judges, and according to the common law of England."

EXPRESS OF THE INDUS.—The Lahore Chronicle states that a steam ferry is to be immediately established by the Indus at Attock. These ferries will be more numerous as soon as the flotillas now building are placed upon the river. At present the difficulty of carrying the engines when they get out of order checks all enterprise in this direction.

ECONOMY v. NEW TAXES.

Liberality is sometimes the economy of States, but we view the extravagance so universal in the North West with unfeigned alarm. The Government of India seems to have changed its character. Hitherto careful to the verge of penuriousness, jealous of the addition of a rupee to a melter's wages without discussion and official sanction, it has begun to fling out money with both hands. We say nothing of the extraordinary expenditure rendered necessary by an exceptional and temporary danger. Two lakhs a day for commissariat, a lakh and a-half a day for means of transport may be justifiable, or at least unavoidable, outlays. The immense cost of our European force, a cost which every reform tends only to increase, is, like anything else inevitable, beyond the pale of discussion. Even the profusion with which lands, and jaghires, and exemptions are granted to all except Englishmen may be defended by valid arguments of general policy. We have a reputation to recover for generosity as well as justice, and as yet the recipients of these favours seem to have deserved their fortune. But we would call attention to the enormous and daily increasing expense of the native army.

Not only is the pay of our new levies as high as that of the old sepoys, their allowances as ample as before 1857, but the expenditure on the officers is infinitely greater than of old. Dozens of new regiments are arming every month. The entire Bengal army is being placed on staff employ. Districts which before the mutinies were well defended by a company, now require, it is said, 1,000 foot police on Rs. 7, and 250 sowars on Rs. 25 a month. Each such regiment has three staff officers, and in the police they are paid,—

Divisional Commandant ..	Rs. 1,000
2nd in Command ..	650
District Commandant ..	600

Sufficient pay, it will be allowed, for men who before the mutinies were entitled to Rs. 350, and who have not lost by the mutinies any single chance of ordinary staff employ. But this is only half the question. The old allowance for companies has been revived, and increased. Instead of receiving it for one company, officers receive it for every company in an entire regiment, so that frequently divisional commands are worth from Rs. 1,200 to Rs. 1,300, and district commands from Rs. 600 to Rs. 900. In Oude the second in command also draws the extra allowance, while in Oude also we have to pay the native commandants. If this were going on for three or four years, it might well be borne in silence. A million or two would be added to the debt, but that might be bearable, while the officers would fairly receive in this form the compensation withheld in any other. The rates of pay, too, are a reaction from allowances which to subalterns were too small. But all these appointments are permanent, and their multiplication is creating rapidly a body of vested interests against which all powers, save the House of Commons, will strive in vain. There seems to be a positive mania for these levies, a passion for embodying new regiments, as if the Government believed the rebellion needed to be stifled rather than suppressed. The North-West is becoming a vast cantonment, and the process, however pleasant to those who believe in native troops, is driving us fast on that financial rock on which Lord Canning's successors will yet founder.

We believe that if the expenditure of the old and the new native armies could be placed side by side, the balance of cost would be heavily against the levies.

In protesting against the continuance of such a system, we are we believe contending on behalf of the officers themselves. Nothing could be more injurious to their best and permanent interests than a brief reign of extravagance followed by twenty years of "colonial allowances." And this is what we shall certainly come to if the incessant welling out of money is suffered to proceed. We are drifting fast, if not upon bankruptcy, at least upon that appeal to England for aid which will produce an equal shock, and as far as the services are concerned still more disastrous effects. The permanent deficit, even without fresh calamities, will, after 1860, be from five to six millions a year. The fact is patent even from the Parliamentary returns, not to speak of some private calculations we have seen, which make the deficit nearer seven millions. Nations who borrow money can, of course, tide over deficits for a time. But no nation ever yet succeeded in tiding over a deficit equal to nearly a third of its net revenue without new taxes or immense retrenchments. The House of Commons, our friends may rest assured, will try the second expedient first, and if they once interfere to touch salaries, as they have occasionally touched salaries in England, woe to the prospects of that quiet mass which looks to the "service" for a decent competence. The civilians will be cut first? Very likely. We would not guarantee civil salaries for another three years at any premium whatever. But supposing the civilians reduced even fifty per cent. at a stroke, the saving will be only £375,000 a year, or one-fourteenth of the deficit. The army will be the next object, the cry will be raised that the allowances sufficient for the West Indies and Ceylon are sufficient for India, and the majority will be, in plain English, ruined. The House, we may rely on it, will suppress everything and cut everybody sooner than pay our taxes, and the only way to escape the scissors is to keep allowances at that level which even men afraid of an Indian income-tax will acknowledge to be just and equitable.

The enormous additions now made to the burdens of the Empire illustrate strongly one defect in our Indian constitution. The administration which incurs the obligation has never to discharge it. It is for Lord Canning to suppress the rebellion, for his successor to meet the charges incurred in its suppression. By 1862 every member of Government now responsible for its expenditure will have returned to England, exempt from the discredit of the deficit, unappalled by the storm of unpopularity which will follow the first great effort at retrenchment. Under such circumstances the only hope is to enlist the calmer judgment of those who for the moment benefit by extravagance, in favour of a decent but well considered economy.—Friend of India.

THE CIVIL SERVICE AND ITS POSITION.

The papers have published a list of the successful applicants for the Annuities of 1858-59. The unsuccessful applicants were just fifty per cent. more numerous:—

Mr. W. De H. Routh.	Mr. R. H. Snell.
" W. H. Elliott.	" G. G. Macintosh.
" A. S. Annand.	" R. Hampton.
" W. Bell.	" I. H. Young.
" I. G. Campbell.	" I. J. Ward.
" H. C. Tucker.	" H. S. Ravenshaw.
" H. Atherton.	" C. Chester.
" E. H. C. Monckton.

"Why," says one of them, "should we be thus kept in India by force? Why not let us have our pensions when we have earned them, like officers, and doctors, and chaplains?" To reply we must go back to a period when the Civil Service was in fact the State, when the average of emoluments was Rs. 3,900 a month, and it was thought impossible for a civilian to live on less than £1,000 a-year. Since that period the rule has been maintained, partly from the absence of practical inconvenience, partly from a vague dislike of accelerating pensions, each of which increases the dead weight. Both reasons will at present be acknowledged to be inoperative. The inconvenience increases every year. Civilians now hang on two, three, and even four years beyond their time, discontented, because deprived of the pension promised, useless, because hungering for home. The dead weight can be shown to be a bugbear. The pension is, we firmly believe, a colossal delusion, the sums cut being sufficient to buy in any great office annuity and pension together. To show the kind of calculation on which the half value is founded, we have only to mention that no allowance is made for men who though paying an ever increasing percentage year by year, for perhaps twenty years, die without claiming pension or annuity. In the last few years the profit from this source must have been enormous. The deaths have been lamentably frequent, and the rate of promotion so rapid that men of thirty are paying their percentage on incomes they were expected to obtain at forty-five. Moreover, the figures given for the half value are higher than English Government annuities, which are calculated with interest at three per cent. If the service really wish to quicken promotion, let them attack this abuse, employ an actuary to calculate the real value of their payments, and demand their pensions irrespective of their annuities. By-and-bye when the inevitable reduction of salaries renders payment of the half value nearly impossible, they will find the point one of some practical importance.

There is another, arising in some degree out of this, and connecting itself intimately with the whole question of salaries which may yet be re-opened. It is considered just now a finally settled question that no civilian shall hold estates. He may invest in house property to any extent. He may hold shares in any number of rotten speculations. He may put his nephew or his brother into an estate at Wynad or in Cachar. But land in his own name he may not hold. So thoroughly has this become a principle of the service, that most of our readers will pronounce an attempt to re-open the question an impractical waste of time. We venture, nevertheless, to believe that within five years it will be re-opened, and that by the civilians themselves in a way of which they do not at present dream.

Let us see—waste of time or none,—whether the arguments for this practice are really so irrefragable as they are assumed to be. It is not founded on precedent, for in all European countries officials may hold as much land as they can obtain, and are, very improperly, respected in the ratio of their possessions. Mr. Beadon, magistrate in Southwark, may hold as much land as he likes. Mr. Beadon, magistrate in Rajshahye, must not have an inch. Why? Because, it is said, in the first place, he is bound to give his whole time for his money. No man can manage an estate without thought, and attention, and labour, all of which are subtracted from the official duty. Even allowing that the pursuit of gain under all circumstances is not injurious, still Indian officers are arranged on the presumption that private gain shall not be pursued. Besides, the tendency of a civilian allowed to have estates would be to have them in his own district. In his own district the practice would be liable to infinite abuse. If he did not stretch his power on his own behalf, his agents unquestionably would. Who could refuse access to the magistrate, or bring up the magistrate's gomashtha for assault? Even if by the union of a strong will with a real determination to do justice the magistrate could suppress these abuses, could the peasantry believe the purity of his decisions? And if they did not, would not justice be poisoned at its source, and the dislike of British rule become greater than ever?

There is force in those arguments, and yet—! Do not the whole of them rest on the old blot in our system, the sleepless distrust of our own officers—the distrust which produces appeals, and the consequent inefficiency of our civil administration? We dare not trust the official with an estate for fear he should use official power to swindle claimants and grind his tenantry. The very men who in India sit down placidly under that imputation would in England resent it as a libellous personality. As for the argument about popularity, it is simply an assumption. A zemindar residing on his estate exercises power infinitely greater than that of a magistrate, but it is not the zemindar's power which makes him unpopular. Europeans thought it did, and in the North West nearly abolished him, but the natives, the moment law had ceased, restored their oppressors to their authority. Our own belief is, ryots would seek the civilian's estate for protection. As for the argument about salary and time, it is, to say the least, a little inconsistent. John Smith, of Dinajunge, is allowed to attend a Court two hours a day, and hunt for the remainder of his existence. Nobody quarrels with Mr. Brown, though he always begins billiards at two o'clock. As to devotion to French chansonettes, Sanscrit poetry, or the flute, it is considered rather creditable than otherwise, and the devotee is lucky if he escapes being quoted as "that accomplished member of the Bengal Civil Service." The only occupation in which a man may not waste, or amuse, or improve his leisure, is in increasing the resources of the country.

But what do we lose by the restriction? We lose the most valuable of all qualities in an administrator, personal interest in and sympathy with the country he administers. Our rule is always too much from above. We never know how far a law when in operation will press upon the people. Even the collector has seldom more than a faint impression how far the people of his district are content or not. If he had himself an estate, he would know, if only by that instinct which self-interest creates. Nobody could blind him then as to the effect of a new sale law or of the practice of onster. It would be useless to assure him that his ryots preferred an increased assessment, and that a tenancy at will was as valuable as a freehold. He would in fact be of the people, comprehending them, and in part trusted by them, instead of a mere outsider.

We are not putting forward this view as conclusive, or the question as one easy of solution. But we contend that it is one fairly open to argument, and one which, when the approaching struggle is a little closer at hand, will be treated with less than the contempt we expect to-day.—Friend of India.

THE AMLAH EXAMINATIONS.

The demon of examinations has invaded the State, and must, we suppose, like most other devils, run his course for a season. All that men with heads left on their shoulders can do, is to proclaim from the house-top that he is a demon, and not the angel of light he would willingly be believed. The Administrative Service is now selected by literary examination, though with, perhaps, two exceptions, the great administrators of earth have been innocent of literature. The greatest general England ever saw, Cromwell, could not write ten sentences intelligibly. The next, Marlborough, could not even spell. Leopold of Anhalt Dessau, the founder of modern discipline, probably never opened a book in his life. Yet reading is declared the one qualification for the army, and the Indian line has escaped competitive examination almost by a miracle. The land will soon be overrun by men who in answer to every charge and every failure will point to their college certificates. We ruin provinces, but we know Greek. We cannot ride, but we can remember "the names of the Hohenstauffen emperors." We know nothing of men, but we can answer any number of questions in the Eleventh Book.

We had hoped India might escape the nuisance in the minor grades of administration. Here at least we know the full value of scholarship. If all our ruling men were put into the competitive crucible it is a certainty that Lord Canning, a double first class, would come out first, and Sir John Lawrence somewhere about a bad eighteenth. But no, the demon is not to be withstood, and it is in Sir John's own kingdom that all native Amlah are first whipped up for examination.

It is Mr. Cust's fault, and Mr. Cust ought to have known better, if only because he really is competent to direct an examination. It is men who know nothing who usually head a mania of this kind, just as in China the great grievance of coolies without an alphabet is the neglect of the examination degrees. Mr. Cust, however, in 1854 being magistrate of Banda, bethought himself that his Amlah was excessively ignorant. His Sherishtadar, too, used to sell appointments, and native officialism generally had grown a little rank. As a remedy, everybody was to be examined. Amlah, Canoongoes, Naib Tehsildars, all the infinite degrees and classes of the lower official world were sent to school. They were told their promotion depended on their schooling, and they studied, as they would have practiced standing on their heads with the same inducement. As a matter of course everybody acquired pretty much what his bread depended on his acquiring, and knowledge of the "directions for a Revenue Collector" spread far and wide. Only two unfortunate Siaha Nuvees, both "above sixty," failed, despaired, and were ordered to quit the service in one year more. Banda was examined,—and we could almost excuse its revolt. Mr. Cust, however, is satisfied with the result of his experiment, and the system by a circular before us is extended all over the Punjab.

It is very useless to go over the arguments against this innovation. It will run its course in spite of us, though we see already some symptoms of a reaction. Everybody knows within the circle of his acquaintance a dozen men who would pass any examination, and are cumberers of the earth notwithstanding. And most men, in India at least, know a few to whom any book examination would be torture, but who can govern men. Yet the very men who know and confess this will applaud examinations in every department of exertion, except their own businesses. There, they admit with a shrug, they want efficiency. Fortunately it is more difficult to addle men's instincts than their brains, and the absurdity, as opposed to English life as English history, must end at latest with this generation. Meanwhile we must just endure a system which if true would prove that the heads of Oxford colleges are fitter to govern England than the House of Commons.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A CRY FROM THE UNCOVENANTED.—The Phoenix calls attention to an order prohibiting any uncovenanted servant of Government from leaving one position for another without the consent of his official superior. The order is declared to be unjust, as the uncovenanted officer has no claim to promotion, and must seek it consequently where he can. The order was passed, we believe, to prevent the offices bidding against one another for particular men, a practice which had grown to an inconvenient height. It should have been accompanied by another restraining the exercise of the power, except in cases where palpable injury must result to the public service.

PILOT COURTS.—The Government of Bengal propose to reform the Pilot Courts by creating a Court with one judge and three assessors or jurymen. The latter are to comprise two merchants and one shipmaster. The Englishman proposes instead a paid judge, with a jury of professional men, whom the accused might challenge. The introduction of merchants certainly appears useless, nor will men in business serve on such juries voluntarily.

MILD COERCION.—Captain Sherwill in a lecture on Surveying, given in Calcutta, tells the following story of Sir Henry Lawrence. He was then Lieutenant Lawrence, employed in the survey. "A native surveyor who refused to go back some ten miles to revise a serious error that had been discovered in his work, was laid upon a native bed by order of Henry Lawrence, and carried by bearers to the spot, where he was turned out to rectify his error. The man was obstinate, refused to reobserve his angles, and returned to camp. Henry Lawrence ordered him up into a Mango tree, where he kept the recusant, guarded by two Burkundazes with drawn swords, until hunger changed the mind and temper of the surveyor." The man ultimately proved an excellent worker.

CALCUTTA MINT.—The value of bullion received into the Calcutta Mint during the last five years is as follows:—

	Gold.	Silver.
1853-4	Rs. 10,11,901	1,43,66,179
1854-5	" 1,08,852	12,78,622
1855-6	" 20,32,059	4,53,63,144
1856-7	" 11,80,666	5,47,82,573
1857-8	" 4,86,577	6,05,49,693

A LEGAL LOOP-HOLE.—The Phoenix quotes a circular said to have been issued by Lord Canning to explain the amnesty. The most important clause refers to a point wholly neglected in the Proclamation. "The amnesty, it is to be observed, does not cover acts of private wrong and injury. But prosecutions on this account should be discouraged by district officers, especially where the cause of complaint occurred during a season of anarchy. And in all cases relating to the period in question (excepting where the defendant may be charged with direct participation in willful and deliberate murder), compromise between the parties should not only be freely admitted, but recommended and encouraged." It is curious that the Proclamation, so carefully considered, should have left a loop hole which, had Lord Canning read it differently, might have entirely nullified the amnesty.

CALCUTTA U. S. CLUB.—The Hurkaru says of the United Service Club, Calcutta, "In 1857 the Indian Revolt reduced the frequenting members of the club from upwards of twenty-one thousand to fifteen thousand. That the club is a powerful and flourishing institution is sufficiently attested by that one fact. Strong, indeed, must be an establishment of this nature whose nearest approach to ruin was that it had fallen to the rather respectable figure of fifteen thousand and thirty-eight frequenting members." Surely there must be some mistake here. There are not a third of the number of officers in India.

GOVERNMENT CIRCULAR.—The Phoenix publishes the following important circular. "After this has been done, and after it has become certain that the leaders have knowledge of the offer of pardon, if they shall continue to commit acts of rebellion, and to oppose the authority of the Government, force may be used against them. The Lieutenant-Governor will inform the civil and military authorities that they are not to consider that, in such a case, they are debarred from using force by the fact that the terms of grace and amnesty are extended to all who comply with the conditions before the 1st of January next." Undoubtedly we may use force, but under the proclamation, if a man throws down his arms on 30th December he is still entitled to protection.

RAILWAY BRIDGE.—The Engineers' Journal gives the following as the dimensions of the stone and iron railway bridge which is one day to be built over the Jumna:—

Length of bridge between faces of abutments	3224	0
Number of openings	15	0
Distance from centre to centre of piers	219	9
Spans of openings in the clear	205	0
Height of railway above low water level	81	0

The bridge must stand on foundations driven into sand, resting on nodules of kunkur at a depth of 40 feet. The iron work is being made at Newcastle.

SHAHABAD.—Mr. Money, Collector-Magistrate of Shahabad, in a report on the operations in that district, states that the people showed everywhere a sullen dislike to render any assistance. In the north the villagers are tired of a contest which has nearly ruined them, but in the south the feudal attachment to Koer Singh and his race has still full play. Even the low caste men to whom Rajpoot domination brings insult and oppression exhibit this feeling. They will not supply intelligence, partly, no doubt, from fear, but partly also from hatred to the British.

NEW RAILWAY TERMINUS.—The Hurkaru notices that the Calcutta station of the Eastern Bengal line will be just beyond Lall Bazaar, a central situation. The station at Barrackpore will be behind the elephant sheds, rather far, we fear, from the river. It is, however, at Titaghur and not at Barrackpore that the new town of citizen's villas ought to arise. There is no land in Barrackpore, and cantonment rules are not pleasant.

THE PUNJAB.—The Lahore Chronicle states that the Punjab is to be formed into a separate Presidency. The statement is repeated in the Mofussili, and is, we believe, correct. The change has not yet been accomplished, but it will be scarcely postponed beyond the meeting of Parliament. We regard it as certain that large separate powers, if not a practical independence, will be given to the Presidencies.

THE 2ND BENGAL FUSILIERS.—Colonel Sherwill, of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, has denied the report that his men petitioned for their discharge. Some individual of the Regiment with more brains than are good for him did draw up a petition, announcing that the men had enlisted to serve the Company and not the Queen, &c., but the Regiment had no share in the proceeding, and repudiates it altogether. The lawyer if discovered will not be popular.

CALCUTTA FIREWORKS.—The exhibition of fireworks in Calcutta on the 26th November was a complete and very discreditable failure. A few very ordinary sparkling shells were let off, followed by a grand, and, we suspect, unintended flight of rockets, and then the whole arrangements took fire. Her Majesty on horseback, the triumphal arch, the City of Delhi, and Mount Etna all burnt together, making a bonfire such as any other collection of beer boxes would have made. The failure is of course attributed to this accident; but what became of the fireworks? They did not explode, or manifest their presence in any way. Mount Etna, which ought to have been full of combustibles, burnt itself out as tranquilly as if it had been lighted to roast chickens. Our little show at Serampore, which cost just a fiftieth of the sum granted for the Calcutta fireworks, was infinitely better. We suppose all due pains were taken, and the vexation of failure is a punishment in itself; but a contractor who had made such a muddle would have been taken into court. The native crowd present bore the disappointment more good humouredly than an English one would have done, but there was more ridicule than was either pleasant or advisable.

LORD MARK KERR AT JUDGESPORE.—“Our force consisted of about 200 of the 13th, 40 Sikhs, 40 of the 27th M. N. I., 30 Marines, 2 small howitzers, 12-pounders, with their crew, 1 Troop, and part of the 3rd Troop B. Y. C., 1 Troop Madras Cavalry, and a rocket with crew. We left Hurryah about 1 o'clock in the morning to attack the place, which we were led to believe by the spies to be an entrenched village, defended by about 800 men. We had marched about 12 miles, and then came upon one of their piquet asleep in his post, who was made prisoner. About this time we heard two shots fired, and on advancing, we found one of the bildars who had been sent ahead to smooth the road for the guns, dying from a bullet through his body, and a Peon, in charge of the party, grazed by a shot on the shoulder. He stated that the rest of the bildars had been made prisoners by the enemy. Shortly after this we found ourselves in the presence of an assemblage of brick-built houses, and mud huts strongly defended by loop-holed earthworks and bastions and a deep ditch twelve feet wide, with water in it, and this again defended by thorns, bamboos and jungle. On the left of the enemy was a Mangoe tope, partly entrenched, and at the rear of the tope was a river about thirty yards broad, fordable close to the tope. Over the river, a little to the rear, was one gun, 3-pounder, a battery, and to the left were more Mangoe topes. The infantry and guns advanced on the fort, and were met by a very heavy fire, but the enemy was seen escaping from it, and rushing to the various topes described. The cavalry went in pursuit of them, but were brought up ostensibly at the river, but in reality the officer in command had instructions from Lord M. Kerr not to go too far away from the main body. The cavalry, on being stopped by the river, were counter-marched back to our main body. In the meantime, while the guns were playing on the fort, numbers of the enemy had, on retiring, cut off our rear, and occupied the road by which we had come from Hurryah. Some of their cavalry, of which there were about 200 present, actually captured some baggage belonging to some of the B. Y. C. who had unconsciously desired their things to be sent on after the column. The order was light marching order, consequently there was no rear-guard. Three men of ours lost part of their baggage, and a trumpeter of our corps, who must needs bring the heaviest baggage he could select, with his fat native woman, a Cashmere girl. The Syce in charge of them was killed, the cart and a horse were looted. The woman escaped by throwing off her clothes and jewellery, putting on a dirty chudder, and running into a high rahur or dholl field. For a time the attack on the fort was suspended, and our force changed front to the left, to repel the apparent advance of the enemy on their right; but as they would not come on, a strong party of skirmishers, 13th Queen's, were left to keep them in check, and they with their Enfields knocked over many of the enemy, principally sowars, who ventured within sight and range. The attack on the fort was renewed by the infantry, guns and rocket; a storming party was even told off, and they had advanced to within 100 yards of the main building, and remained in some low ground for two hours waiting the order to charge, and take the place by storm, although we had neither plank nor scaling ladders. The main body of the cavalry was kept to watch either flank of the fort, and to cut up the rebels as soon as they attempted to evacuate it, which they were too wise to do. A party of 20 B. Y. C. and 20 Madrasese, who were under the command of Lieut. MacDonald, M. C., was told off to cover our elephants, camels, provisions, &c. After pounding away at the place for two hours or more, and our supply of ammunition getting low, we found that the enemy had been reinforced by 3000 men, under Mahomet Hossein, with a 9-pounder flying artillery, which opened on us again from their right. Our last rocket being expended, and only a few rounds of shell left, the Rifles being fouled by constant firing, the men knocked up, not having eaten anything, Lord Mark Kerr called us off, and assembled us in the tope on their left which they had evacuated. A gun was crossed over the river to keep the enemy in check, and the order for retreat was announced. All this time the enemy were playing on us with round shot from two guns. Lord Mark Kerr very deliberately, and in splendid order, moved his men, guns, and ammunition over the river, and the baggage had gone on ahead under a strong guard of cavalry and infantry. We moved off over the river, and continued our retreat in the most regular manner, our rear covered by a party of infantry, and our flanks by cavalry; in fact our retreat was conducted as coolly as if on the line of march. The enemy, seeing we were retiring, came out of the fort and the topes, and kept a heavy fire on our rear; their sowars occasionally, when an opportunity offered, trying to make a dash on our baggage, but the Enfields kept them off, and I saw several of them bowled over in splendid style. The enemy, emboldened by our apparent defeat, closed upon our rear in great numbers, but the steady conduct of the 15th, who protected us, kept them off. There must have been, in my opinion, numbers of the enemy killed on the retreat, besides those killed in the fort and on the right of it. Our casualties were about thirty men, three horses wounded, nine of the B. Y. C. hurt, one horse only badly wounded. Dr. Hilsten, of the naval brigade, received a ball right through his jaw, so that he cannot speak. I believe one or two of the 13th have died of their wounds. We fell back on Hurryah by making a détour. The enemy followed for about two miles, but when the firing of the 13th began to tell on them, they went back over the river as hard as they could. We lost a cart containing a cask of rum belonging to the 13th, two carts containing officers' baggage, and pie boxes. A camel wounded in the leg broke down with some ammunition, which was rescued, and brought up to the head of the column. The cask of rum was broached by a couple of bullets. Lord Mark Kerr acted perfectly right in retiring, he had no siege guns, and had he attempted to scale the place, his loss would have been heavy, and no advantage gained. The enemy, even when beaten, might have gone to Hurryah, where our camp was, and then marched on Bustee, which was protected only by a weak force.”—Hurkaru.

THE NORTH-WESTERN BANK.—The special general meeting of the shareholders of the North-Western Bank “to take into consideration the condition of the bank's affairs, and determine what course shall be adopted with reference thereto,” will be held at the bank premises in Council-house Street, at three this afternoon (December 4). We should think that but one resolution consistent with common sense could be come to, and that is, to wind up the affairs of the bank. A considerable body of shareholders are anxious that this should be done, while another party, we believe, wish still to carry on the bank, reducing the nominal value of the shares from 400 rupees each, at which they now stand by a former reduction below their original value of 500 rupees, to 300 rupees each. If the latter party should carry the day at the meeting, the probable result will be proceedings taken in the Supreme Court, under a clause in the deed of incorporation of the bank, which renders it the duty of the directors to take steps for winding it up in case of the loss of one-fifth of the original capital. With such proceedings pending, and with an admitted loss of a large portion of its capital, rendering advisable a second reduction of the nominal value of the shares, we can hardly conceive that the bank could possess that credit with the public which would be essential to the continuance of active operations with success. On the other hand, there is no doubt that if the bank be wound up under judicious arrangements, and without the intervention of a court (always most pernicious in such cases), a considerable return of capital will be made to the shareholders, as, in spite of heavy losses, the bank has still large assets. Those of the shareholders who may still wish to continue banking operations might then start afresh, with an ascertained capital, and without any slur upon their credit.—Hurkaru.

THE PROCLAMATION.—Government are now endeavouring to circulate translations of the Proclamation in Oordoo and Hindee through the interior of every district. There may be a lurking suspicion in his lordship's mind that ignorance of the amnesty has been the cause of more rebels not having come forward to lay down their arms than have actually done so. This may be the case. At any rate, let the thing be as widely known as possible, so that none may be excusable for delaying their submission till after the expiry of the notified term.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—We are exceedingly sorry to learn from the last report made by the directors of the East Indian Railway Company that the application made by the directors, in accordance with a resolution of the shareholders, to the directors of the East India Company to sanction a payment in advance of one-third of the annuity granted to Sir R. M. Stephenson by deed in 1853, has been refused. The annuity, as we understand, is secured to Sir R. M. Stephenson only in the event of the line yielding a certain percentage of profit. The late mutinies have much retarded the completion of the line, and consequently the day of commencement of the annuity, which may probably not arrive until after the annuitant has ceased to have the ability to reap any earthly reward for his labours. Such treatment of a man whose exertions in the cause of Indian railways have ruined his health and energies, and who retired penniless from an appointment in which a less scrupulous man might have amassed a large fortune, seems to us very hard.—Hurkaru.

WUSEERABAD, Nov. 25.—I arrived here yesterday evening. The Chief Commissioner and his camp came in here this morning; he is going to pay a flying visit to-morrow morning to Ramnugger, some 18 miles from this, to inspect it, for what purpose I am not aware; that was the old route to Peshawur; but if I may hazard a conjecture, it is to ascertain the practicability to connect a railway from the salt mines at Pindadun Khan, Ramnugger, and Wuseerabad, with the main line; some such scheme is on the tapis. The Chief returns to Wuseerabad, and proceeds to Seelkote to meet the Maharaja Runbeer Sing. The meeting, I believe, is to take place at Sookateghur, on the boundaries of the Jummo Raj. The Dewan Joallah Suhye, the Maharaja's minister, is with the camp of the Chief Commissioner.

A "SKEL."—The following colloquy is said to have taken place inside the mud walls of the fort of Shunkerpore.

Enter, riding, Lord C.—de, (General M.—naf—d, and Colonel M.—p—re—n.

Lord C. dismounts, and proceeds to examine the interior of the place. He comes upon a large mass of something carefully concealed in the ground, stoops down to examine.

General M. and Colonel M. also dismount and grope into the hidden mystery.

Lord C.—What can this be?—Powder, I think.

General M.—Treasure, I hope.

Colonel M.—Gram, by jingo. [Eseunt, disgusted.]

BRAWAH, Nov. 15.—On the 12th Rajah Tej Sing, of Mynpoorie (who, notwithstanding the reduction of his allowance from 1,500 per mensem to 150, contrives to keep continually drunk), met with a fall from his horse, which broke his thigh-bone. It is feared (perhaps hoped) that the accident may terminate fatally. I omitted mentioning before that Jotee Pershad had extended his dak to the road between this and Mynpoorie, at present, though I think the line barely pays its expenses. Have you heard that the journal, to be called the "New Times," is to be established on the 1st of January, 1859, at either Cawnpore or Allahabad. Rumour says that it is to be the special organ of the civil service.

STATUE OF LORD HARDINGE.—The statue of Lord Hardinge has, for some days, been opened and placed on one side of its pedestal. We are informed that the preparations for hoisting it are not yet completed. It would have been as well, in our opinion, to have allowed the statue to remain in the case until everything was ready for fixing it in its place. Should it be much longer on the ground it would not be surprising if, some fine morning, one of the spurs should be missing, or, perhaps, the graceful tail of the noble steed. The sword is already somewhat shaky, and that, too, may be abstracted by one of the "heavy-fingered" fraternity. We hear that there is to be no inaugural ceremony. Possibly our rulers think we have had enough turnisha of late; or, they may not have thought of it at all. We would therefore remind them that it would be "right and proper" to open the statue to the public in due form. It should also be borne in mind that this is the first equestrian statue in the metropolis, and, for aught we know to the contrary, in India. Moreover, it is the first memorial erected under the Royal Administration, and it would, we think, be a mark of respect on the part of Government to one of the Honorable Company's former rulers to observe some formula on the occasion.—Hurkaru.

JAGHIRE TO MR. BOYLE.—Nothing can afford a journalist greater pleasure than to bring prominently before the public the judicious and munificent acts of the "powers that be;" all our readers are aware of the memorable defence of Arrah, and the prominent part acted in it by Mr. Boyle, one of the engineers of the East India Railway. The Government of India have now come forward and rewarded Mr. Boyle in a most liberal manner. Mr. Boyle is to have his choice from the confiscated estates of Shahabad of a Jaghire of Rs. 10,000 (ten thousand) annually. This Jaghire is to be settled on Mr. Boyle and his heirs for ever, under the following conditions: Mr. Boyle, during his lifetime, is to draw the full amount of the annual sum of Rs. 10,000; at his death, Rs. 5000, will be continued to his heirs, the remaining Rs. 5000 to be paid to the Government as a tax on the property. We feel assured that our subscribers and the public will rejoice at this really munificent act of the Indian Government.—Engineers' Journal.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN MARTABAN.—From the report on cotton cultivation in the Martaban Province we make the following extracts:—"The sites selected for the cultivation of this plant are generally in the vicinity of rivers, which, flowing and flooding the surrounding country during the monsoon, enrich the soil with a valuable deposit. The depth of this soil may be generally given as about three to ten feet, and there is always a considerable amount of moisture, six inches, or even less, below the surface during the growth of the plant. It is hardly necessary to add that it is entirely fertile. The heights above the level of the sea are from ten to seventy or eighty feet, natural drainage pretty good. The chief feature which makes the climate of this province alike with Burmah generally is its extreme humidity. During the months of June, July, August, and beginning of September the fall of rain is very great. The plains are in consequence inundated till about the end of September, irrigation is therefore neither resorted to nor necessary. The plant whence the fibre is obtained is of an annual and herbaceous kind, though the tree cotton is abundant and used by the Burmese for stuffing beds and pillows. The height of the plant is from four to six feet. The spread of the branches is from about two to three feet. The distance between the plants is such, that these branches are frequently in conjunction. The spread of the roots of the plant laterally is from one to two feet, depth about the same. At the close of the rains the ground selected for the cultivation of the plant is thoroughly dug up and carefully freed from all weeds. The ground is planted about the end of September and commencement of October, the plants being placed at a distance of about three or four feet from each other. During the growth of the plant but little or no labour is bestowed upon clearing the ground from weeds. The plant flowers during the months of December and January, and is picked during the months of March and April. The weight of fibre produced per acre is from about 100 to 150 viss. Market value at present 20 rupees per 100 viss, and the number of hands employed per acre is one.—Englishman.

BURIED ALIVE.—On Tuesday evening, Nov. 23rd, a young Hindu female met her death under the following extraordinary circumstances. In a compound opposite to the Calcutta Mint are three large wells, from which the people in the neighbourhood were accustomed to supply themselves with water. They are of long standing, and are in bad repair. About four o'clock on the evening mentioned, the poor woman went to one of these wells as usual, and filled her pitcher. She had just left the parapet, and was raising the pot to her waist, one foot resting on a large stone near her, when she was observed to sink suddenly into the ground, and soon disappeared altogether. A gap, two or three feet deep, was all that was seen to tell the tale. Tank diggers were at once set to work to look for the woman, but their labours were fruitless. The earth was excavated till the bottom of the well was reached, but, strange to say, not the smallest trace of her was obtained, and the diggers gave up their task in despair, as the water rushed in and checked further efforts. The spot was visited by Col. Boulderson on Wednesday evening, and the Commissioner, it is said, gave orders for filling up the hollow, which has since been done. The unfortunate woman was the wife of a respectable native, and the mother of several children.

DOUBTFUL PHILANTHROPY.—It is gratifying to find that our kind magistrate has not only liberated eleven life-convicts, but has also bestowed on them the appointments of Ticca Burkundazes at a monthly salary of 5 rs. each, their conduct being very satisfactory for the whole length of time they were in jail. They are to lodge in the jail guard-room, outside the jail walls, and to enjoy the same rights and privileges as the free Burkundazes and Duffadars of the jail. The civil assistant surgeon has further proposed to give such rewards only to those few who do not, like most of them, voluntarily invite sickness, in order to lie lazy in the jail hospital. Certainly, these acts of clemency and benevolence throw great credit on our worthy magistrate and the civil surgeon, for their zeal in the welfare of this miserable portion of our fellow-creatures. This also gives hopes of the commencement of a prosperous era under the Government of our good Queen.—Allypore Rising Star.

INDIAN EXPORTS.—By the Nile, which proceeded down the river yesterday morning, Dec. 7, we hear that the celebrated huge tiger "Jungla," the largest and most beautiful of the famous fighting tigers of Lucknow, is shipped for sale in England. This splendid animal is not only remarkable for his size, which far surpasses that of any tiger or lion yet seen in Europe, but for the extraordinary beauty of his colouring and markings—having all his body-stripes double. He is moreover extremely tame and gentle to those he knows; but many a big buffalo has been felled by his tremendous sledge-hammer of a paw. There is in fact no sport at all about his method of procedure: he went most systematically to work, and the business was done in no time. In a civilized country he will of course have to forego the pleasure of such feats; but we doubt not that he will become an object of great admiration for his size and beauty. By the same vessel is likewise forwarded for sale in England a fine healthy yearling bull-calf of that very rare animal to obtain alive, the gigantic gaour, or Bos gaurus, which sportsmen in India persist in miscalling the bison. It is the largest of existing bovine animals, the finest bulls even exceeding 20½ hands high, measuring from the summit of the singularly elevated dorsal ridge. This, indeed, is one of the most remarkable features of the species, the spines of some of the dorsal vertebrae measuring sixteen inches in length. Another characteristic of the adult animal consists in its very broad concave forehead, surmounted by a high transverse arched bony ridge between the horns. The skull is extraordinarily massive. We have seen one of which, with the horns attached, but minus the lower jaw, weighed exactly 30 lbs. The peculiar form of the head is scarcely even indicated in the yearling calf, and the animal is a very slow grower. We have heard of one which lived for three years in the possession of an officer in the Madras Presidency, and was still, at all appearance, a mere calf. This is, doubtless, the first gaour (Bos gaurus) ever shipped for Europe; and the species must not be confounded either with the Gayal (B. frontalis), or with the Banteng (B. sondaicus). Though only generally known as a wild animal, we have been assured that the gaour, in addition to the gyal, is domesticated in the interior of the Tippera hills. The calf at present on board the Nile retains not a vestige of wildness, but is as quiet and tractable as any ordinary domestic animal.—Hurkaru.

MR. TAYLER, C. S.—In noticing, a short time ago, the Court of Directors' despatch replying to Mr. W. Tayler's appeal against his removal from the commission of the Patna division, we (Englishman) thought it likely, considering the favourable nature of the despatch, that Mr. Tayler might have another appeal, and we now learn that this gentleman has petitioned the Secretary of State for India, and we trust the result will be satisfactory to him.

THE ACT for forcibly obtaining workmen recently passed by the Legislative Council has been disapproved of by the Home Government, and the practice ordered to be discontinued. Mr. Halliday, it will be remembered, refused, under any circumstances, to avail himself of the provisions of the Act.

REGISTRARS OF THE UNIVERSITIES.—The Government of India on the 18th October passed the following resolution:—"Read a letter from the Registrar of the Calcutta University, No. 270, dated the 16th ultimo, and its enclosed resolution recorded by the Senate, bringing to the notice of Government the expediency of throwing open the office to all persons practically engaged in education, whether they be in the service of Government or not. The Honourable the President in Council agrees with the Senate that the office of Registrar of the University, and the salary attached to it, should be thrown open to all persons practically engaged in education, whether they be in the service of Government or not, and is pleased to modify paragraph 24 of the resolution of the 12th December, 1856, accordingly. Ordered that the necessary communication be made to the Senate of the Calcutta University. Ordered, that a copy of this resolution be furnished to each of the local Governments for information."

A NARROW ESCAPE.—About nine o'clock this morning (November 18) Mrs. Dawson and Mrs. Cruchley had a very narrow escape. Their carriage had just passed over the Skew Bridge, on the Norris road, when the traces gave way, the horse became frightened and dashed off, overturning the carriage down the steep bank into the lake. Fortunately there were several persons near the spot, who ran to their assistance, and extricated the ladies from their perilous position. Mr. Andree, the police inspector, happening to be on the spot, placed them both in a passing carriage, and sent them off. Mrs. Dawson suffered seriously from the fright and the shock. It is surprising more accidents have not happened at this place. Cannot a railing be put up? The cost would not be very great, and it might be the means of saving life.

A RUMOUR.—According to the Englishman the Commander-in-Chief positively leaves India in February, and reports says that he is to be succeeded by Sir Hugh Rose.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Dec. 8).—During the fortnight a moderate business has been done in produce. Indigo not so brisk as at the commencement of the season. Rice Silk quiet and value dropping. Sugar in no demand for Great Britain. Salt-petre dull and declining. Corals only in demand at lower prices. Rice a dead letter for the home markets. Oil Seeds quiet. Jute out of favour and little doing. Catch lower in value, but in demand for America. Suppleneer, good qualities wanted. Lac Dye dull of sale. Shell Lac in less demand.

IMPORTS. (Calcutta, Dec. 8.)—We have to report an active market in Piece Goods, caused by the favourable accounts received from the up-country marts, and the light arrivals and stocks here during the past month, which have led to a further advance of one to two annas upon our last quotations. Mule Twist continues to engage great attention, and the demand is almost for all counts. There are no stocks in first hands, and not more than about a thousand bales are in second hands. Nearly 4,000 bales have been sold to arrive at a shade of improvement in prices. Coloured

Yarns.—The market has been easy for all colours. Turkey Red German and British Dyed are selling to a limited extent at rather lower prices. Orange, is scarcely wanted. Green is saleable to a limited extent at slightly lower rates. Chints and Prints—The markets at Furruckabad and Mirzapore have much improved, this being the height of the season for operations in the Upper Provinces; but as despatches hence are not likely to reach those places in time, the dealers are rather cautious in their operations. Madder Cambric Chints continue in good demand for local requirement, and higher prices are obtainable for choice patterns. Turkey Red and other Colour Cottons—The market continues favourable, and there is a good inquiry for Twills, Cambrics, and Mulls at improving prices. Stocks are light. Shirtings—Grey 39 and 40 inches, about ten days or a fortnight back, the market was rather easy; but since last week it has again revived on receipt of favourable advices from Mirzapore and Furruckabad, and large sales, principally of goods to arrive, have been reported at a further advance in price. Loppets and Spots are in active demand, the season for operation for the Upper Provinces have set in, and sales are being effected at advance prices. Mull Mulls—Grey 20 yards by 40 inches are in excellent request, but the very light stocks are the cause of limited operation; sales are being made at improved prices.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TRADE AT CALCUTTA.—The Englishman mentions that no less than 253 vessels are now moored in the harbour of Calcutta. The tonnage of those requiring freight amounts to 170,000 registered tons. Colonial trade at the same time is depressed, and freight is not to be obtained at any price. Vessels are leaving in ballast, and as all the eastern ports are similarly situated, must return to Europe empty handed. One or two, we understand, rather than accept this alternative have cleared for Vancouver's Island with "notions."

ENAMDAR COMMISSION.—The most important feature in Madras news is the fact that a Commissioner to enquire into the titles of Enamdars has been appointed under the authority of the late Court of Directors. The gentleman selected by Government to hold that office is Mr. G. N. Taylor, and the date of the despatch which will be found in another column, authorizing the enquiry, is the 1st September. The measure is regarded as most impolitic and as being in direct opposition to the assurance contained in that part of the Proclamation which says:—"We know and respect the feelings of attachment with which the natives of India regard the lands inherited by them from their ancestors; and we desire to protect them in all rights connected therewith, subject to the equitable demands of the State; and we will that, generally, in framing and administering the law, due regard be paid to the ancient rights, usages, and customs of India." The present Enamdars are rent-free landholders—have inherited the lands of which they are now possessed; and they and their ancestors have been in uninterrupted possession of those lands for periods varying from fifty to seventy years. They are now called upon to show by what right they hold their property. The onus probandi is thrown upon them. Of living witnesses to support their claim there will be few; and, in all probability, of title-deeds there will be fewer still. So that if the commission is persevered in there can be very little doubt as to the nature of the final result. The injustice of the measure, to use the mildest word, is shown by the facts that the English law recognises twenty years' possession as giving a title, and will presume from such possession a lawful grant. And the English law presumes this for the furtherance of justice and the sake of peace. That there is wisdom in this course is sufficiently proved by the rebellion in the Southern Mahratta country, where an Inam commission has been at work.—Madras Athenaeum.

THE CONOLLY MEMORIAL FUND.—The Director of Public Instruction on the 2nd November addressed Mr. Chief Secretary Pycroft as follows:—"Sir—I have been requested by the members of the committee of the Conolly Memorial Fund to submit for the information of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council and with a view to their transmission to the Honourable Court of Directors the accompanying report of the proceedings of a meeting held at Madras on the 5th January, 1856, for the purpose of raising an appropriate memorial to the late Mr. H. V. Conolly, Collector of Malabar and Provisional Member of the Council of this Presidency. The reports of the meetings of the Committee appointed at that meeting are enclosed. It will be seen from these papers that a subscription mounting to upwards of Rs. 7,000, and to which all classes of the community have contributed, has been raised for the purposes of the memorial, and has been applied to the endowment of two scholarships, to be designated the Conolly Scholarships, and to the erection of a tablet to the memory of Mr. Conolly, which has been placed in St. George's Cathedral at Madras. Two scholarships have been founded, one of 3 rupees per mensem, tenable in the Provincial School at Calcutta, and another at 16 rupees per mensem, or such larger sum as may be available in the Presidency College at Madras. Both scholarships are restricted to persons born in Malabar. The necessary arrangements have been made for their payment and for vesting the funds belonging to the endowment in the name of the Director of Public Instruction for the time being. The first examination for the Junior Conolly Scholarship was held at Calcutta in July, 1857, and the scholarship was awarded to Ramen Nair, a pupil in the Provincial school. The senior scholarship has not yet been awarded, no natives of Malabar having as yet presented themselves at the University entrance examination, but it is hoped, as the standard of instruction in that district is gradually raised, this scholarship will prove of use both as a stimulus to education in Malabar and as a means of enabling some of the most proficient students to profit by the higher standard of instruction afforded in the Presidency College. The Committee are desirous that the papers sent herewith should be placed upon the records of the home and local governments, and of the Malabar Collectorate, as evidence of the high regard and esteem in which the memory of the late Mr. Conolly is held by the community of this Presidency, and of their desire to associate it, in a lasting manner, with the district in which he served so long, and to the interest of which the labours of his best years were devoted, labours which ended only with life. Government, on the 17th of November, "resolved, as requested in the foregoing letter, that of the three sets of enclosures one to be deposited in the Record Office, Fort Saint George, and one to be transmitted to the Collector of Malabar to be lodged in his office. The remaining copy will be furnished to the home authorities with the general letter reporting the proceedings of Government for the present quarter, and request will be made that it may find a place amongst the records of the East India House, as evidence of the high esteem in which that devoted officer, the late Mr. Conolly, of Malabar was held by all classes of the community."

THE WYNAAD PLANTERS it seems are demanding more roads, a better police, and other necessary reforms. Civilization, however, costs money, and the greater part of Wynad is wholly untaxed, the land even, from local circumstances with which we are unacquainted, being exempted from assessment. The planters are willing to pay, but divided as to the mode of payment. One party argue for an export duty, the remainder for the land-tax as lighter and more universal. The latter, we warn the planters, is equivalent to ruin. It is not the amount of the tax which makes it dangerous. It will probably be lighter than the export duty. But it can only be levied by giving to Government the power of sale, that is by destroying all security of tenure.

MADRAS, Dec. 2nd.—We hear that the upper Anicut on the Cauvery has been carried away, and that the great embankments in Trichinopoly and Tanjore have been breached, and that much damage has been done to property, many villages swept away, and many lives lost, one to be regretted above all others, is that of Lieut. Moore, the Engineer, who was carried away by the violence of the flood in attempting to swim across one of the breaches in the aforesaid embankments. There is much talk about an Enam Commission under the Enam Act; where is the necessity of it? There are easier ways in the Presidency of appropriating Enam lands than even the Enam Act enacts. One is to ruzph the village or lands coveted, for any balance how trifling soever, and although that balance should be paid immediately after, and to say at the end of the year, exactly to a day and hour even, twelve months ago, the village or lands were ruzphed for an arrear we don't care about the said arrear having been paid in the month following, and your having paid the kist for the twelve months ensuing, there is still an arrear against you, which they make out by falsifying the accounts and charging ruzph sabbundy for twelve months for the village, though no sabbundy had been appointed, or done any work. By the 82nd para of the Hookumnamah your village or lands is forfeited, and accordingly it is appropriated. The other way is when an arrear has occurred, to issue a notice giving five days to pay it to keep back notice till the 4th or 5th day. Then to serve it, leaving the villagers who are numerous, no time to pay, then to step in and say you have not paid your arrear according to notice, your village is forfeited. Both these things actually happened in the case of the village of Neybarappu, in the Salem district. This may be very satisfactory to Government, but it was not to the proprietors of the Enam village, which was not either a rent free village, but a village on easy rent only, and consequently they sued Government in the Civil Court, and their suit is thrown out under Regulation 4 of 1831, because they had not obtained the permission of Government to go to Court to try their conduct. They ask Government for such permission, and it is refused. Can any one wonder at the people of the country being dissatisfied!—Athenaeum.

VERY INTERESTING.—After the reading of the proclamation at Masulipatam, Mr. J. J. Cotton, the civil and sessions judge, descending from the limber, on which he had mounted to read the proclamation, called out to Brigadier Lawrence, "Well, brigadier, I am entitled to a bottle of champagne after that." Brigadier Lawrence galloped to the front and called out, "Artillery, take away the bullocks 29th form line, and 'with blank cartridges.'" This was not the proper word of command, but the brigadier is a cavalry officer. Sergeant John Enfield, of the artillery, then gave the proper word:—"Artillery, prepare for action; action front."

THE RITE OF CONFIRMATION was administered at St. George's Cathedral on 17th November, by the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of the Diocese when about one hundred and eighty adults (twenty of these being soldiers of H.M.'s 44th regiment) and young persons of both sexes, took upon themselves vows made for them at baptism. The service was solemn and highly interesting, and we trust his lordship's excellent address to those who were confirmed, will be long remembered and acted upon, and that they will always strive to follow the example of the good King Josiah, whose goodly conduct formed the subject of his lordship's address.

Mr. W. S. WRIGHT has been appointed Sheriff of Madras.

THE ENAM COMMISSION.

We regret to perceive that the operations of the Enam Commission have recommenced with vigour. Captain Cowper, the unflinching enemy alike of frauds and alienations, is pursuing his task as if the mutinies had never occurred—as if the events of 1857 were a dream. The investigation into titles, the demand for papers, the search into ancient rights, is proceeding as if India were still asleep, or as if justice to the State were still the first law of Indian statesmen.

In principle, Captain Cowper and those who like him retain the convictions of 1856 unchanged, are, perhaps, in the right. The object of the Enam Commission is thoroughly just. No man can have a right to be exempt from a land tax any more than from a tea duty. London merchants would consider the exemption of John Smith while Thomas Brown still paid, the most heinous of oppressions. The State, therefore, in abstaining from an enactment taxing all lands is in fact unduly lenient. But while defending peremptorily the justice of the tax, we cannot so blind ourselves to facts as to defend its expediency. The principle of resumption on all its grounds is absolutely hateful to the population. Classes who, like the taxed ryots of the Deccan, are actually injured by the unfair competition of tax-free landholders, detest the inquiry equally with the owners of enams. Everybody sees himself deprived by the Commission of a hope, of a chance, however remote, of securing land exempted from the collector's hammer. The passion for a free tenure, as strong in India as in Europe, increases the disgust, and the Enam Commission, affecting, perhaps, 5,000 persons, and threatening at the utmost 100,000 more, is resented as a national grievance.

The resentment is the more intense because it is felt personally by the most influential classes. Englishmen are too apt to forget that not only is India not democratic, but that even the democratic feeling is absent. Men like independence here as elsewhere, but nobody is ashamed to say he serves. In Europe, a grievance falling chiefly on a privileged class, would for that reason alone be to an extent popular. In India, the rank of the injured seems to the poor man an aggravation of the injustice. That he, Teencouree Pauper, should be oppressed, within bounds, is a law of nature, perhaps even a law of God. But that his superior should be oppressed, is an absolute proof that the raj is one evilly disposed. The upper class, therefore, always important out of all proportion to its numbers, has in this country the advantage of the sympathy of the mass. The hatred to the inquiry is undiminished by class jealousies, and resistance is really prevented only by the bayonet.

With the first Walpole, we believe taxes collected by the bayonet are better abandoned. Just or unjust, the very first principle of taxation, that it shall not press on the imagination as well as the pockets of its contributors, is under such circumstances violated. It may occur that even this danger must be faced, that money is absolutely essential to the existence of a State. Taxes, like the window-tax and salt-tax, were collected under that belief. But India has not yet reached that point, nor if it had, would an Enam Inquiry be the easiest method of levying the necessary funds. The process is exceedingly slow, and causes just as much anxiety and irritation as a universal tax. It is now that we want money, not a generation hence, and let Captain Cowper strive as he will, a generation must elapse before the fruit of his labours will maintain a European regiment. Financiers are scarcely bound to look so far ahead. Twenty years hence the progress of mechanical invention may have brought us within ten days of England, and our power to tax be limited only by our sense of international justice. Meanwhile, until it can be proved that the Enam Inquiry is absolutely essential to the revenue, its progress should be suspended.

The time has arrived, we submit, for the compromise which Sir John Malcolm succeeded in effecting. He proposed, and, indeed, established for a time a succession duty. The Enamdars who had paid to the Peishwa a nuzzurana on each transfer, as a matter of course accepted the duty as a fair and just solution of the question. We have little doubt the proposal would be again received as a boon, and the tax, though less than the profit of resumption, would not involve expenditure for the troops under whose bayonets alone resumption can be made safe.

We may mention that the strong evidence on this point given before the Colonisation Committee, has changed the opinion even of the India-house. Mr. John Warden, himself an Enam Commissioner, declared the inquiry though just, ungenerous, and Mr. Marshman, the most determined advocate of the resumption system, admitted that had he known the discontent the inquiry would cause, he should have ceased to recommend it.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR HENRY SOMERSET.—All the Bombay journals accuse the local commander-in-chief of lethargy, carelessness, and want of interest in his duties. None of the measures carried out in Bombay during the last year were planned by him. He has not organised one of the many flying brigades now in motion, still less commanded one. Surely Sir H. Somerset displayed some energy at the Cape. It is, however, a defect of the Indian system that there is no one to compel a general to work. If he likes to sit quiet, he sits quiet, and there is an end of it. In France, an officer who shirked work would be dismissed at once.

PERSIAN PRIZE MONEY.—A correspondent of the Bombay Standard asks when he is to receive his prize money from the Persian campaign. The prize agents made over large funds to the Pay-office which have not been heard of since. The sale of horses and mules, carpets and saddles, lasted above a week. Large quantities of military stores, and above a hundred brass and iron guns, were taken, and remain to be accounted for. The complaint seems just, as nearly two years have elapsed since the conclusion of the campaign.

A NATIVE BARRISTER.—The Bombay Gazette announces that Mr. Kumrooddeen Tyabee, a mus-sulman, is about to be admitted to the local bar. He has completed his terms in Europe, and is the first native barrister who has appeared in India.

The Overland bulletin of the 9th of October was printed at Gaile and Kurrachee on the same day. The difference of time before the telegraph was constructed would have been at least eight days.

CHAPLAINS' FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.—The Court of Directors have given the following reply to the inquiry of the local government as to what period of service, as distinguished from residence, was requisite to entitle a chaplain to the higher rate of furlough pay; and secondly, whether the period of seven years was to be counted from date of arrival, or whether the time taken under medical certificate was to be made up by actual service:—"The term 'Residence' in Section XXXI. of the absentee rules, and in paragraphs 2 and 3 of our despatch in this department, dated 28th December, 1855, No. 113, must be construed as 'residence in actual service;' consequently a chaplain will not be entitled to the higher rate of furlough allowance till he has completed seven years of actual service, computed from the date of his arrival in India; nor will he be entitled to pension on retirement until he has completed an actual service, either of fifteen years if appointed before the 11th January, 1854, or of seventeen years if appointed subsequently to that date. The time of absence passed on the ordinary privilege leave is, however, permitted to reckon as time spent on service. You were informed in paragraph 6 of our despatch dated 15th September, 1855, No. 78, that we did not require retrospective effect to be given to the new rules, in respect of any leave which might have been taken by chaplains in India previous to their promulgation.

THE MUNICIPAL TRIUMVIRATE of Bombay are disposed to break off negotiations with Messrs. Lackie and Co.'s Gas Company. It appears that "the most unqualified pledges were given this company, that the municipality would support it, by lighting as many places as they could; and on the strength of these assurances, and of others as explicit from the government, the company has been inaugurated in London. Bombay Times.

THE KURRACHEE CANTONMENT WATER COMPANY is about to be dissolved. Twenty thousand rupees have been expended, but without succeeding in its object. For the last three years the shares have been sold for "a mere song." The shareholders, however, are likely to get back half their money, as the Scinde Railway Company are making arrangements for purchasing the large well belonging to the Water Company, situated in the rear of the cantonment lines. For this well Rs. 10,000 is to be paid.

SAWUNT WARRE.—The insurrection in the Sawunt Waree districts is at an end, as the remaining rebel leaders have delivered themselves up to the Goa Government. A Bombay contemporary has a notice of this disturbance from which it appears that the Sawunt Waree Dessais have been disaffected for a long time. In 1844 and 1845 they rebelled, and when the rebellion was put down, they took refuge in the Goa territories, where their machinations were a source of as much anxiety to the British authorities as the rebellion itself. In 1847, therefore, the majority were amnestied, and when the rebellion of last year commenced, they broke out afresh. Our contemporary continues:—"For the last eighteen months we have had a desultory jungle warfare to carry on, the rebels availing themselves, as usual, of their vicinity to the Goa frontier, to baffle pursuit when closely pressed. Such a state of things could not be permitted to last. It became naturally a question whether it might not be possible to induce the Goa government to waive the right which it had always enforced of preserving the integrity of their territory by preventing our troops from crossing their frontier. Colonel Le Grand Jacob, who, in 1847, had negotiated the amnesty of the Waree exiles, was very properly chosen to conduct so delicate a negotiation. He proceeded a few weeks ago in the Perceze to Goa. The evil we had to complain of was flagrant. The opportunity could not have been better chosen. The Governor of Goa was known to be animated by the greatest desire to put an end, if possible, to the confusion and disturbance which existed on his frontier. Colonel Jacob, found, therefore, in him a most generous supporter. He succeeded in obtaining, that should the right of asylum be curtailed, and the British troops allowed, if necessary, to cross the Goanese frontier in pursuit of the rebels. Armed with these concessions, Colonel Jacob issued a proclamation, giving the rebel chiefs ten days to surrender, at the expiration of which time measures would be taken to pursue them with renewed activity. The Dessais felt that resistance was hopeless, and on the 23rd of November they surrendered. We may congratulate ourselves, therefore, upon having finally broken the neck of the rebellion in the Sawunt Waree districts, and destroyed for ever the nest in which, for so many years, conspiracy and disorder were hatched."

SILIFICATION OF TIMBER.—The Bombay Standard states that experiments are in progress to ascertain the cause of the extraordinary Indian phenomenon, the silification of living trees. In many trees, and in many parts of India, notably in the bamboo and teak, silica is deposited in the joints and substance of the tree. The wood thus partially petrified is almost imperishable, and there are bits of teak supporting the ceiling of the Salsette caves, which must be two thousand years old. If we could produce this change in the wood by artificial means, Time would be baffled, and the white ants reduced to despair. The valuable experiments of Dr. Brandis, Superintendent of Forests in Pegu prove that such a discovery is at least possible.

THE NAVAL BRIGADE at Bombay has been ordered on board ship. The men it appears were troublesome, and ill disciplined, and it was finally determined to place them under a control stricter than on shore it was possible to maintain.

PUFF INDIRECT.—We understand that it is in contemplation to abolish all courts of requests, and that the different cantonment magistrates will be empowered to decide all suits to the extent of Rs. 200. This is a move in the right direction, as no one knows better than the bazaar master, the propensities of Billy Banian, and household servants, whose complaints chiefly form the subject of litigation at courts of requests. But in saddling the bazaar master with the additional work, it is nothing but fair that he should have an assistant to conduct the numerous other duties pertaining to a cantonment magistrate. As far as regards Kurrachee, we are only surprised how Captain Bolton manages to wade through the multifarious duties he is hampered with. At break of day every morning he is to be seen making his way through the numerous streets of the Bazaar, and often, at night, he stealthily takes his rounds to see that the night-watch are up to their work. During the day he has to go through the police cases of petty thefts, street rows, family jars, &c., &c.—Sindian.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

This outgoing mail carries as little intelligence of interest as was brought by the London Mail of the 9th October, which arrived here on the 22nd November.

Lord Elgin started on his trip up the Yang-tze-kiang on the 8th November, accompanied by a Chinese official, who had been deputed to accompany the expedition by Kweiliang and Hwasana, the Imperial Commissioners, who remain in Shanghai until his Lordship's return, which was not expected to be within a month.

The Tariff has been published, and shows a reduction on many articles of import of nearly one-half of the duties, and about one-third of those on exports. The reduction of the duties on the import of cotton is considered of most importance to the commercial world. Mr. Reed, the American Plenipotentiary, has come down to Hong Kong, but Baron Gros still remains in the north.

There appears to be no doubt now as to the truth of the statement that the French force at Cochinchina were suffering greatly from disease—chiefly dysentery, engendered by the unfavourable climate. The news brought up by the Scotland, lately, was to the effect that no advance had been made, and that the burials of French soldiers were at the rate of three a day, which, in such a small picked force, unexposed to much hardship, and with facilities for the removal of the sick, was quite enormous. The few French or Spanish soldiers who have fallen into the hands of the Anamese have been frightfully mutilated.

The state of Canton is undergoing little or no change. The principal streets, especially those with many shops, increase slowly in activity, and are thronged with passengers, but many parts of the city are still almost entirely deserted, and little disposition is shown to rebuild the ruined houses. Very little business has been done in the way of exports, but there has been some demand for English and American goods.

His Excellency Sir John Bowring has been suffering for some time from serious illness, aggravated by domestic calamities, furious local squabbles, and the hostility of Mr. Chisholm Anstey, who has on oath declared that he has sworn to work the destruction of something he calls "the Bridges administration." Sir John's tenure of office expires, we believe, in April next; and certainly there are few local reasons for his being continued another year, but many to the contrary. He left Hong Kong yesterday, on a few weeks' trip to Manila and Labuan; and, during his absence, his place will be filled by the Lieutenant-Governor, the Hon. Colonel Caine. One evidence of the extraordinary state into which matters here have got is that a local editor is about to be prosecuted by the Crown lawyers on a certain affidavit, in a manner which would make it appear dangerous to stigmatize as "a wretched falsehood" a statement rumoured, made, and insinuated that her Majesty's representative had been pretending illness, in order to avoid appearing at a recent trial; and by inference, that his medical attendants were art and part in the deception.

Mr. Mercer has returned to Hong Kong, and resumed the duties of Colonial Secretary, which have been well discharged during his absence by Dr. Bridges and the Hon. Mr. Forth.

The 59th regiment left this for the Cape on the 21st, after nine years stay in China.

There has been no change in the prospect of employment for shipping, and the harbour of Hong Kong still presents an unusual number of vessels lying idle.

The export of tea and silk to Great Britain since last mail's departure is as follows:—From Shanghai, the Asyrian with 621,000 lbs. of tea; and 1,207 bales silk; Wellington, 315,300 lbs., 1,168 bales. From Fuchuan, the Patea with 412,500 lbs. From Canton, the Velox (for orders) with 704,000, and Kelso 707,500. The steamer Cadiz took of silk 1,277 bales for Southampton, and 676 for Marseilles, and the Pekia takes 2,532 for Southampton, and 443 for Marseilles—making the total to date of 19,647,800 lbs tea, and 34,431 bales silk for Southampton, and 3,120 for Marseilles. The Spry of the Ocean had sailed from Fuchuan for London, but her cargo is not yet received.

The export to the United States has been, from Shanghai, Iwo, 689,200 lbs. tea; from Macon, Leicester, 231,800 lb.; making a total of 12,527,200 lb. to date. The Flying Fish left Fuchuan with upwards of a million pounds of tea on board, but got on shore on the South Bank, outside Sharp Peak, and returned to Pagoda anchorage. Her back is said to be broken, and there is every prospect of her becoming a wreck. A portion of her cargo may be saved.—China Mail, Nov. 30.

THE JAPANESE LANGUAGE.—There is an impression among most Europeans, we believe, that the Japanese and Chinese languages are substantially identical. We perceive, however, from an article in the Chinese Repository, that "The distinct origin of the Chinese and Japanese is completely established by the language of the latter, which is wholly different, in respect to radicals, from that of all the nations in the vicinity of Japan. Although it has adopted a considerable number of Chinese words, those words do not form a radically integral part of the language; they have been introduced by Chinese colonies, and principally by Chinese literature, which has formed the basis of that of Japan. The Japanese radicals have a little resemblance to those of the Korean tongue; they are equally alien from the dialects of the Kuriles or Aynos who inhabit Jedo."

CEYLON.

A POPULAR GOVERNOR.—All the European residents of Ceylon, and most of the leading natives, have addressed a petition to the Crown, praying that Sir Henry Ward may be re-appointed Governor at the expiration of his term of office. As, however, they are most unwilling to prevent his promotion, they beg that a bonus of £3,000 a year, paid, be it remembered, by taxes on themselves, may be presented to Sir Henry Ward during his stay in the colony. The Governor, in a letter promising to forward the petition, remarks: "I thank you once more, collectively and individually, for the honour that you have conferred upon me. I have taken the liberty of directing a copy of the petition to be made, with all the signatures, before transmitting it to her Majesty; and it will ever be regarded by me and mine as a memorial of the kindly ties that bind us to Ceylon, and as a proof that in a colony where English habits and influences prevail, honest intentions will always be appreciated."

COLOMBO, Dec. 15.—The weather during the fortnight has been all that could be wished for the preparation and shipment of coffee; but, owing, no doubt, to the partition of cargo amongst the many waiting vessels, only three vessels have sailed, with an aggregate (including a small quantity taken last month, by the Oneida and European to Sydney) of 15,443 cwts. of coffee, in the proportion of 7,674 plantation, and 7,769 native. Of this quantity, more than half has gone in the Juene Albert to Havre; the greater proportion of the remainder went to London in the Indian Chief. The next fortnightly statement will, we suspect, present a more imposing aspect. The total exports to date are 59,409 cwts., in the proportions of 33,849 plantation, and 25,560 native.—Ceylon Observer.

THE COOLIES.—The Governor has closed the session of council, and is away on one of his useful tours. The immigration ordinance is to be brought into force on 1st January, without waiting for the sanction of the Secretary of State, which, in ordinary cases is required before money bills can be brought into operation. Mr. Churchill, assistant civil engineer, is to be the government commissioner; Mr. Doyné will, doubtless represent the railway; Mr. Shand, who gained so much experience in working the Manchester, will be nominated by the Chamber of Commerce; and there cannot be a doubt that the choice of the Planters' Association will fall on Mr. Wall. A local cotemporary seems to indicate that Captain Evatt has declined to accept the appointment of agent in India. The secretary, on whom the working of the scheme will mainly depend, has not yet been mentioned. In a few months hence we suppose the steamers will be plying between India and Ceylon. Meantime, the list of arrivals for this year promises to reach 100,000.—Ceylon Observer.

COLONIAL PERSONAGES.—The Nemesis, which reached Galle on the 7th of December, brought a large number of passengers to our shores, including Mr. E. J. Darley, to whom the colony owes so much for the able performance of the duties of legislator in former years. We have no doubt that Sir Henry Ward will be anxious again to press this gentleman into the service of the colony. Mr. Gibson, the auditor-general, who returned from England by a previous steamer, will, it is understood, act as colonial secretary, when Sir C. MacCarthy goes home, about March. Mr. Lee will then, for the third time, act as auditor-general.—Ceylon Observer.

Defence of Gurrakota.

Allahabad, 9th Oct. 1858.

The right hon. the Gov. Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from Maj. gen. Whitelock, comdg. Saugor field div., submitting a communication from Captain H. Finch, 31st B.N.I., comdg. a detach., reporting the total defeat of a large body of rebels, who attempted to take Gurrakota.

His lordship offers to Captain Finch, and to those named in the despatch, and generally to the whole detachment employed, his best acknowledgments for the courage, endurance, and gallantry which they displayed on the present occasion.

R. J. H. BIRCH, maj. gen., secy. to the Govt. of India, mil. dept., with the Gov. Genl.

To Maj. gen. Sir W. Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff, Allahabad.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, for the information of H. E. the G. in C. copies of a letter from Brigd. Wheeler, comdg. the Saugor district, and a report from Capt. Finch of an encounter with the rebels who had attempted to take the fort of Gurrakota. I trust that the conduct of the officer in command, and that of the troops engaged, which appears to have been very gallant and exemplary, will meet with the approbation of H. E.

G. C. WHITLOCK, maj. genl., comdg. Saugor field div.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Maboba, 30th August, 1858.

To the Asst. Adjt. gen., Saugor field div.

Saugor, 22nd August, 1858.

Sir,—I have great satisfaction in forwarding copy of a despatch from Capt. Finch, 31st B.N.I., comdg. a detach. of about two hundred of his own regt., and sixty-five of the 3rd Irreg. Cav., reporting the total defeat of the large band of rebels, which had the temerity to attempt to take Gurrakota, and which had plundered Shahpore and the neighbouring villages, and mutilated some of the inhabitants and police.

I feel sure, that the major general will accord his approval of Capt. Finch's arrangements, and appreciate the gallantry of the 3rd irregulars, for it appears to have been essentially a cavalry action.

That sixty-five men, without an European officer, should charge a large body armed with matchlocks, and aided by some few mutineers, and posted in, as I understand, rather a strong position, is very remarkable and very praiseworthy.

I trust that this gang of rebels will now be broken up, and that the Dumoh rebels who have risen simultaneously, will disperse; doubtless the loss in men and arms, will be a heavy blow to them, and restore confidence to the police.

Thanks are due to Lieut. Dickens, who commanded a body of police, for his co-operation.

The name of Ressadar and Woodee Major Soobhan Khan, has frequently been brought to the notice of government, during the past year, and I beg leave again to bring his gallantry forward, and trust that the major general will recommend him for honour and promotion, as well as Ressadar Amanut Khan, who commanded the 2nd troop on this occasion.

F. WHEELER, Brig.

Comdg. Saugor district.

To Maj. W. Lamb, Asst. Adjt.-Gen. Saugor Div. Camp, Gurrakota, 20th of August, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Brig. F. Wheeler, comdg. the Saugor field force, the total defeat and dispersion of the rebel forces. I acknowledge the receipt of your letter, directing me to proceed to Gurrakota via Shahpore, without delay, with force as per margin.* On inquiry I found that there was a direct road across country, by which I could reach Gurrakota in one day, by making a forced march of twenty miles, and knowing that time was of the greatest importance, to save the town from being burnt, I resolved to push straight on the Gurrakota, and after a march of ten hours and a half, I reached that place. Our arrival was utterly unexpected, as the rebels thought we were going to Shahpore, where supplies had been laid in for us. From the direction in which I came, they were unable to retreat to the jungle and Government timber-forest, and were obliged to take to the open plain in rear of Hirdernugger, to effect their escape. We reached Gurrakota at half-past three, P.M., and took them completely by surprise. They fled precipitately, and I lost no time in following them up; but my intantry, being thoroughly knocked up, were unable to come up with them. But this was well compensated by the admirable conduct of the 3rd Irr. Cav., led by Woodee Major Soobhan Khan, who came well up with them in the open plain; and from the appearance of the field, which I inspected, I can state that upwards of 150 were killed on the spot, and I have brought into camp seventy-two wounded and prisoners. It is reported that Hindur Goshee, the noted rebel, is killed, and several recognised his body. The Punnah Thakoor, whom I mentioned in my demi-official of yesterday, is also killed; and Bunnur Dowa and Dhokul Sing, nephew of Hindur Goshee, Hindur Goshee's Kardar, a sepo of the 52nd N.I., and one of the Gwalior Contingent, are among the prisoners. Had our men been fresher, and night not come on, I think that hardly a man would have escaped. I shall send the prisoners into Saugor to-morrow.

I am of opinion that this force is thoroughly dispersed, and will not again become an organised body. I have brought into camp 300 matchlocks and swords, in addition to what the villagers took off the field. I shall halt here to-morrow for information, and if I hear of any rebels in the neighbourhood, I shall attack them again, and if not shall, on the following day, march to Shahpore. Three sowars were slightly wounded, one horse killed, and two wounded. In conclusion, I beg to bring to the notice of the brigd. the admirable conduct of all concerned, and more especially the cavalry, who pursued them till sunset. To Lieutenant Dickens and his police, and the civil police, my thanks are also due; and to Mr. Deputy Collector Rao Khrihn Narain, whose information was most correct and valuable.

H. FINCH, Captain 31st L. I.

Defeat of Tantia Topee near Rajghur.

Allahabad, 11th Nov., 1858.

In publishing for general information the following letter from the secy. to Govt. at Bombay, No. 171, dated 7th Oct., 1858, forwarding one from the adjt. gen. of the army, enclosing a despatch from Maj. gen. Michel, C.B., comdg. the Mhow field force, reporting the defeat of Tantia Topee on the 15th Sept., 1858, the right hon. the Gov. Gen. has much pleasure in recording his acknowledgment of the service rendered by Maj. gen. Michel, and the officers and men under his command on this occasion:—

From H. L. Anderson, Esq., Sec. to Govt., Bombay, to G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., Sec. to the Govt. of India, with the Gov. Gen., Allahabad, dated 7th Oct., 1858.

Secret Department.

Sir,—I am directed by the rt. hon. the Gov. in Council to forward to you for submission to the rt. hon. the Gov. Gen. of India the accompanying copy of a letter from adjt. gen. of the army, No. 3,611, dated the 21st of last month, enclosing a despatch from Maj. gen. Michel, C.B., comdg. the Mhow field force, reporting the defeat of Tantia Topee by the force under his command on the 15th idem.

2. The adjt. gen. has been informed in reply, that the rt. hon. the Gov. in Council heartily concurs with H. E. the C. in C. in the opinion which he has expressed of the service rendered by Maj. gen. Michel, C.B., and the gallant force under his command, on this occasion.

3. In forwarding this despatch, I am directed by the rt. hon. the Gov. in Council to draw the favourable attention of the rt. hon. the Gov. Gen. of India to the important service rendered by Maj. gen. Michel, and at the same time to recommend to his lordship's protection the officers prominently mentioned in the despatch.

H. L. ANDERSON,
Secretary to Government.

Bombay Castle, 7th Oct., 1858.

Adjt. Genl's office, Hd. Qrs. Poona,
21st Sept., 1858.

From the Adjt. Genl. of the Army, to the Sec. to Govt., Secret Depart., Bombay.

Sir,—I am directed by the C. in C. to forward for submission to the rt. hon. the gov. in council, the accompanying despatch dated 16th inst., this day received from Maj. gen. Michel, C.B., comdg. Mhow field force, and to convey at the same time h. e.'s gratification at the complete success which has attended the operations herein reported, and which appear to have been conducted with so much judgment and tact by the maj. gen., supported so admirably by the European and native troops of all arms under him.

2. I am also to recommend to the favourable notice and protection of his lordship in council, the officers prominently mentioned by Maj. gen. Michel, for the assistance rendered by them, in an engagement which has resulted in another victory over the mutinous army and rebels of Bengal, together with the capture of twenty seven of their guns, their camp equipage, cattle and material. EDWARD GREEN, colonel,
Adjt. gen. of the army.

From Maj. gen. Michel, to the Adjt. gen. of the Army, Biowra, 16th Sept., 1858.

Sir,—In continuation of my letter of the 13th inst. to the gr. m. gen. of the army, I have the honour to forward, for the information of h. e. the C. in C., that having received information that the rebels on the 13th inst. marched towards Rajghur, and that Brig. Parke was en route to cover Indore, on the morning of the 14th the Mhow field force under my orders marched towards Rajghur.

2. About three in the evening I reconnoitred the enemy's positions, who were at both sides the river at Rajghur; but the heat of the weather was so excessive, and so large a proportion of the inf. were affected by the sun, that I found it impossible to attack the same evening.

3. On the 15th, at 2½ A.M., I marched on Rajghur; force as detailed below.*

4. The enemy had marched away in the night. On crossing the river I found them in a very strong position, on the road to Biowra; on reconnoitring with cav. they moved on for four or five miles. We there had a slight skirmish with their rear-guard, wherein the 3rd cav. behaved very gallantly; and eventually we found their guns in position on ground commanding our line of march as per annexed diagram.

5. Our cav. were compelled to retire, and the art. of the enemy opened fire on our troops as they arrived on the field.

6. I endeavoured to check their fire, opening our 9-prs. on them, but the range was too great for guns of such calibre as ours. I therefore partially retired the force, whilst the enemy slightly advanced.

7. On the arrival of the Eur. inf. the whole line advanced, covered by the skirmishers of the rifles and 92nd.

8. The enemy, from about eight heavy guns, kept up a well-sustained fire for some time during the advance; and, although they had the exact range, we sustained no loss.

On our approaching their position they commenced to retreat, and crowds of fugitives were seen hurrying to the rear.

9. I did not allow the soldiers to fire a round with their minies, although within range, as it would have checked our speed. Thus the enemy had opportunities of opening his guns again once or twice, after once having commenced his retreat.

10. We proceeded in this order for about two or three miles, when two of our guns were rapidly brought into action before the skirmishers, and the excellent practice of Lieut. Le Marchant, comdg. the art., began to throw them into extreme confusion.

11. Another advance, and another dash forward of the art. completed their defeat.

12. Capt. Sir W. Gordon, H.M.'s 17th Lancers, comdg. the cav., had, during the whole action been proceeding on the extreme right flank, waiting for the moment when he might strike the last blow.

Every minute, guns, materiel and baggage were falling into our hands, and I now let him loose to complete their rout.

He dashed to the front, and having dispersed the remaining symptoms of an organised body, pursued for four or five miles, until horses and men were completely worn out.

13. The loss of the enemy probably did not exceed 200 or 300 men, owing to our want of cav., and the fact of impossibility of the inf. coming up to their main body.

14. I cannot say too much for the conduct of the troops. The native portion had been without food for upwards of thirty-six hours, the Europeans had to contend with a most severe march, under a deadly sun, which in some cases was fatal.

15. Although we sustained no loss, which, considering the amount of magnificent art. the enemy possessed, and the way in which for some time it was served, (nearly every shot plunging into the intervals between the troops) was most extraordinary. Still I consider that I should not do my duty, did I not record that to the able assistance I received from the officers comdg. columns, namely, Lieut. col. Lockhart, 92nd regt.; and Lieut. col. Hope, 71st regt.; and from the officers commanding corps, namely, Capt. Bethune, 92nd regt.; Major Blennerhasset, 71st regt.; Sir W. Gordon, 17th lancers; Capt. Oldfield, 3rd lt. cav., Cap. Barrow, 19th n. inf.; Maj. Manson, 4th rifles Lieut. LeMarchant, B. art., I owe the success that has been achieved.

The officers comdg. columns have recorded their approbation of their staff officers:—Capt. St. John, 92nd regt.; and Capt. Parker, 71st regt. H.M.'s troops, in which I cordially concur.

16. Capt. Sir W. Gordon, by his judicious management, and gallant bearing at the head of the cav., and Lieut. Le Marchant, by the manner in which he brought our art. into action, especially contributed to our success.

17. The gen. staff capt., Champion, asst. adjt. gen., Lieut. Holland, asst. gr. mr. gen., Lieut. Shewell, dep. adj. commis. gen. (who was with me near the field), as well as my personal staff, Maj. Elkington, 6th regt., a de. c., and Lieut. Malcolm, By. engs., whom I had attached to my staff, did their duty well.

18. The result of the day's operations has been the entire dispersion of the rebel army, number unknown, but from the best information that could be procured, estimated at about 10,000 men. The capture of twenty-seven guns, with all its materiel, ammunition, and draught cattle, as well as a quantity of camp equipage, &c.

Also the saving of the large town of Biowra, with its telegraphic station, &c.

19. I cannot close this despatch without soliciting H. R. to convey to the Govt. our mil. thanks for the very valuable advice and energetic aid that this force has received from Capt. Hutchinson, asst. political agent to Gov. Gen., to Lieut. Cummings, asst. Bheel agent, our best thanks are also due. Both gentlemen were present, and active in the field.

J. MICHEL, Maj. gen.,
Comdg. Mhow Field Force.

Operations near Bhumore Ghat.

To Maj. Hamilton, Asst. Adjt. Gen., Oude Force, Sultanpore, Camp Durriabad, Sept. 19, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Maj. gen. Sir Hope Grant, K.C.B., comdg., that on the 17th inst. I received a communication from Maj. Carnegie, the dep. comm. of Durriabad, that the rebels were increasing on the island near Bhumore Ghat, about ten miles off to the north-west; and that since the troop from this were there on the 15th inst., Ram Sing who was then in command, had been joined by Outar Sing, Pyrang Sing, Gujadhur Sing, &c., and that their united forces amounted to upwards of 2,000. I immediately decided on dispersing the rebels, and arranged for the troops, as per margin,* to move from this at twelve P.M., on the 17th inst., which would enable all to have a rest before advancing on their position. After leaving sufficient for the protection of the camp and the town guards, added to the police corps under command of Capt. Bunbury, the troops marched as directed, but in consequence of having to proceed by a longer and more circuitous route than we did on the previous occasion, as we found the rebels fully reckoned upon the troops advancing by the same road as before, and had accordingly made arrangements for us, which, by taking the way we did, were defeated. Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining any intelligence from the neighbouring villages, the entire population being apparently friendly to the rebels. I therefore halted the Europeans under a tope, to enable us to ascertain the position of the enemy. At half-past seven A.M., I formed up the column, having determined upon detaching the three guns of the contingent, with two Cos. Ben. Fus., two Cos. of the Rajah's troops, and the reg. cav. belonging to the Rajah. I placed this force under the command of Lieut. Magniac, Ben. Fus., with directions to proceed up the west bank of the nuddee, to prevent the enemy crossing inland from the Island, whence I decided upon moving with the main portion of the troops, four Cos. Europeans, Kappoorthullah Inf., and Hodson's Horse, and so compelled the rebels to fight, or run the risk of drowning in the Gogra. The two columns moved off simultaneously, that under my command fording the nuddee, and proceeded on to the Island, which is five miles long, and one half mile broad, and a great portion of the ground very heavy. I threw out two Cos. Ben. Fus. in skirmishing order, with the troops of the Kappoorthullah contingent in the same manner, and advanced to sweep up the Island, with Lieut. Magniac's force on our left, and Hodson's Horse under Lieut. McGregor (whom I appointed to do duty, and assume command of them) and the Rajah's reg. cav. on our right. After having gone a short distance, the enemy opened a brisk fire on us, from the bank of a very deep nuddee, some one hundred yards wide; to this fire we replied most effectively, driving the rebels from their cover, and being brought to a stand by the depth of water, the Sikhs being obliged to return, after attempting to cross. Lieut. McGregor in a most gallant way, led the irreg. cav. rather lower down, and into the nuddee and across, the water being well over their saddles. Whilst this was being accomplished, Lieut. Hamilton Maxwell, my detachment staff, who was also second in command and comdg. the four cos. Bengal Fus., galloped off to bring up the elephants from our rear, where they had been left under a guard with our spare ammunition, &c., before we crossed in the first instance. Lieut. Maxwell speedily returned with the elephants, and we passed over the men as rapidly as possible; and when all were over, advanced on steadily, driving the enemy before us, and the Enfield rifles doing good execution, turning the rebels out of their rifle-pits, and forcing them to take the open plain, when Lieut. McGregor charged them with Hodson's horse most steadily. The rebels had one gun, a brass 5-pr., with which they kept up a continual fire on our columns, but without doing us any injury. We still continued advancing, until we had cleared the whole of our front, when I halted the Europeans, placed them under cover in some huts, and allowed H.H. the Rajah of Kappoorthullah to proceed off to our right with his inf., and work down towards the cav., whence they advanced together on the gun which had fired on us, and which our guns on the opposite side, under Lieut. Magniac, from the great execution done by Ensign Boddy, made it too hot to remain in its original position, so that the rebels tried to carry it off, when Hodson's horse cut down the gunners, and the gun was ours. The rebels having received a severe lesson, and all who could escape having done so, I determined upon withdrawing the troops for the day. The Europeans suffered exceedingly, from having to follow up the rebels for five miles in a burning sun, from the effects of which they were struck down, added to the heavy ground and deep muds we had to ford before we could drive them into a corner, that I was anxious to get the Ben. Fus. under a tope, after the steady persevering manner in which they had gone through the severe work of the day; and I had them under shade by half-past eleven A.M., being then nearly twelve hours under arms. The details of the operations of the force under Lieut. Magniac on the west bank I have called upon him to furnish a report of, and have the pleasure to state that his arrangements during the five and a-half hours he was detached from me, have merited my warmest approval.

2. It is impossible to estimate the loss on the side of the rebels, but the natives have reported to the civil authorities that they numbered from 2,000 to 3,000 men in the first instance, and 450 are killed, missing, and drowned, besides wounded. Ram Singh himself was severely wounded; Byrung Singh, one of the rebel leaders, was slain; and Outar Singh's brother was killed also. Two boat loads of fugitives, containing seventy each, are reported to have been drowned while in their hurry to escape. This information has been supplied me by Mr. Bradford, asst. comsgr., Durriabad.

3. The casualties on our side are, I am very happy to say, comparatively small, being 3 men killed, and 17 wounded; and 1 horse killed, and 8 horses wounded. The nature and severity of the wounds received at once show that the troops were closely engaged.

4. I regret to say that Lieut. C. M. McGregor, late of the 57th N.I., and whom I appointed to command Hodson's horse, was severely wounded whilst charging the rebels, and his horse in three places, which has since had to be destroyed. The gallant manner in which this officer behaved on this as on the previous occasions when he has been with Hodson's horse seemed to gain the entire confidence of the men; and his being wounded was a great loss, inasmuch as there was not another European officer to lead them, as, had there been one, a good many rebels that escaped would not have done so. No officer could have behaved in a more gallant manner, or set a better example to his men, than Lieut. McGregor did, and the men themselves speak of his bravery on the occasion. I trust that he will soon be able to resume his duties, and that Government will grant him compensation for the loss of his horse. Mirza Ahmed Beg, resadar 14th troop 2nd regt. Hodson's horse, having behaved most gallantly, and led his men well after Lieut. McGregor was wounded, I beg to recommend the resadar for promotion. I have always found him most particular and strict in the performance of his duty.

5. The force under my command remained under the tope until five P.M., when they returned to Durriabad, arriving at nine P.M.

6. It now becomes my pleasing duty to acknowledge the assistance so readily afforded me by every one on the 18th inst.

7. To all officers and men engaged throughout the day, who cheerfully bore the great fatigue and necessary exposure to the excessive heat on this trying occasion, my best thanks are especially due, and I congratulate them on the result of their labours.

8. To Maj. Carnegie, the dep. comsgr. of Durriabad, who accompanied the force, and remained out during the day, my best thanks are due for his able assistance in obtaining information as to the position and strength of the enemy.

9. To Mr. Bradford, the asst. commiss., whose absence on this occasion I greatly regretted, in consequence of having broken his collar bone from his horse falling when out with the force on the 15th inst., I am under great obligations for the zealous manner in which he has conducted the intelligence department, and trust his services may soon be again available.

10. To Lieut. Hamilton Maxwell, my detachment staff and 2nd in comm., whose unwearied and cheerful exertions the whole day merited my highest approbation, has been always on the alert, and ready to aid me every possible way, my best thanks are offered.

11. To Lieut. Chamier, in political charge of the Kuppoothullah conting., I feel deeply indebted, and cannot speak too highly of the valuable services rendered me throughout the day by this excellent officer, in the performance of the arduous duties that devolved upon him.

12. To Asst. surg. T. E. Charles, M.D., for his uniform kindness and attention to the men suffering from sun-stroke, as well as to the wounded generally, I beg to express my great appreciation of his able services, particularly as he was suffering from illness himself.

13. The Kuppoothullah contingent performed the several duties required of them during the day.

14. H. H. the Rajah, his brother, and his gen., accompanied the force, and were at all times ready to lead their men, and induce them to press on, though somewhat tired, from the long march, after the retreating enemy, and my thanks are due to them.

15. Col. Williamson of the Rajah's service, was left with two cos. of Sikhs, and twenty-five Sikh cav., to protect the rear; the enemy attempted once to get at the doolies and spare ammunition, but by Col. Williamson's good disposition they were sent to the right about.

16. The brass 5-pr. gun captured from the enemy, is now in the Fort of Durriabad, and as H. H. the Rajah was present at the taking of it, I await instructions as to its disposal.

ALEXANDER HUME, Major,
Comdg. at Durriabad.

From Lieut. S. B. Magniac, 1st E.B. Fusiliers, Comdg. Detachment. To Lieut. Hamilton Maxwell,
Staff Officer, Durriabad.

Camp Durriabad, 19th Sept., 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Maj. Hume, comdg. the force, that agreeably to his instructions, I proceeded from Bhumarea Ghat, along the west bank of the nullah, which protected the position of the enemy in that direction, with the force as per margin.* After advancing for a short distance, I observed the enemy in large numbers on the opposite bank, who being emboldened by the difficulties their position presented to an attacking party, (the nullah here might be perhaps hundred yards broad, and very deep,) were making a stand, and keeping up a brisk fire on the main column. As they were within easy range of Ensign Roddy's guns, I ordered them to the front, when that officer opened a well-directed fire, completely enfilading their advanced line of skirmishers, who retired after receiving a few rounds.

I then continued my advance towards a large party of rebels to my left, but on the opposite bank, and who, upon our approach, opened a smart fire of musketry from rifle-pits, and behind a line of breast-works.

2. Being anxious to drive them from this, and seeing that the column had not yet crossed the nullah, I ordered one co. of the 1st Ben. Fus. out to skirmish along the bank, supported by the other company, the whole under the command of Lieut. Butler, the Sikh Inf. remaining with the guns. In this order we advanced until opposite the breast-work; here Ensign Roddy again tried his guns, the inf. from behind good cover, at two hundred and fifty yards, keeping down the fire on them, which was at first very heavy. Finding after ten or twelve rounds that the guns made no impression on the earth-works, and observing that you had crossed the nullah, and turned the enemy's flank, I ceased firing, and on your continuing to advance, the enemy suddenly vacated their position. This gave us a good opportunity to punish them, and the guns directed by Ensign Roddy made beautiful practice, thinning their ranks, and obliging them to retreat rapidly.

3. I followed them up towards a second line of works, where they had one gun (the one subsequently taken). Here they made but a short stand, endeavouring to take off their gun, which the well-directed fire from Ensign Roddy's 6-prs. prevented their doing far, although they persevered for nearly a mile. The gun was soon after taken in first-rate style by the Rajah of Kuppoothullah's inf., assisted by a detach. of Hodson's horse.

4. The enemy being thus driven, made a precipitate retreat in all directions; a few in their hurry attempting to swim the nullah were shot, while others that succeeded in crossing a little higher up were all cut down by the Rajah's reg. cav., led by Ensigns Roddy and Woodgate.

5. The work being thus complete, the enemy being defeated and scattered, the pursuit naturally fell to the cav.; and the men being much exhausted, the inf. were therefore halted, and as the sun was exceedingly powerful, I ordered them to retire slowly to a neighbouring tope, where we rested for a short time, and then returned to join the main column.

6. The distance gone over by the men under my immediate command during the advance could not have been less than five miles, and I cannot speak too highly of the cheerful alacrity displayed by every one under me, while exposed to the intense heat of this morning.

7. I beg to particularise the active energy displayed by Lieut. T. A. Butler, in leading on the skirmishers, and Ensign Roddy also, who, by his well-directed fire, contributed greatly to the success of the day. I particularly noticed "Nubbee Buksh," the native art. comdnt. of the Rajah of Kuppoothullah's contingent, who, by his coolness and activity, proved himself a good and valuable soldier.

8. I am happy to say, the casualties were but trifling, being a private of 1st Ben. Fus. slightly wounded, and one mule attached to the guns also wounded. The cause of this I attribute to the heavy and accurate fire kept up by the men from the Enfield rifles on the rifle-pits held by the enemy, which effectually prevented them firing with any steadiness.

S. B. MAGNIAC, Lieut.,
1st Ben. Fus., comdg. detach.

Operations of the Buxar Force.

To the Adj. Gen. of the Army, Army H.Q., Allahabad, Dinapore, 30th August, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward herewith, for submission to H.E. the C. in C., a report from Maj. Carr, Madras rifles, comdg. at Buxar, of a successful operation undertaken by him on the 13th inst., which resulted in the complete defeat and dispersion with heavy loss, of a very greatly superior body of rebels who had threatened, and were about to attack, his advanced post at Doornoon.

2. I beg to call H.E.'s special attention to the very skilful manner in which the small force under Maj. Carr was handled; to the cheerful alacrity which all ranks are reported to have displayed in encountering the enemy; and to the spirit and determination which animated the cav., (both of the mil. train and 3rd Sikh irr. regt.,) when after severe exertions over heavy ground, by which their horses were completely exhausted, and when far away from all support, under their gallant leader Capt. Nason, they unhesitatingly threw themselves on two large bodies of the hostile infantry, whom they dispersed with a severe loss in killed and wounded.

3. Capt. Nason's report of this brilliant charge is forwarded in original, and also a nominal return of the casualties on our side, of which, I am happy to say, the list is extremely light and insignificant when compared with the complete success obtained.

JOHN DOUGLAS, Brigdr.,
Comdg. in the disturbed districts of Ghazepore and Behar.

To the Deputy. Asst. Adj. Gen., with Brigdr.
Douglas.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Brigdr. Douglas, that on the 11th, having been called on by Capt. Broome, comdg. Doornoon, for assistance, as a large body of the rebels were moving in his post, I immediately sent off a troop and half of the mil. train, in all 50 sabres and 120 Sikh cav., under Lieut. Ryall, the whole commanded by Capt. Nason, mil. train; I proceeded myself during the night with two cos. 34th, on elephants, and 50 Madras rifles.

On the 12th the enemy, said to be from 1,500 to 2,000, 800 of whom were sepoys, were reported to me to be posted in and round the village of Chowgain, about six miles off. I went out of Doornoon a short way in their direction, but finding the country so difficult for cavalry, for it was all enclosed, and having in all only about 150 infantry, of whom 100 only were Europeans, I returned, and sent into Buxar for the two naval brig. guns, which with one other company of the 84th, arrived at twelve at night; this they were enabled to do by the fortuitous presence here of some bullocks and drivers of the Ben. art., which have been detained here by the closing of the communications.

Thus reinforced, on the morning of the 13th, as soon as I could get certain information of the rebels, I marched out in the direction of the enemy on the Chowgain road, when about four miles out the rebels were reported in front, advancing in three large bodies; on reaching the end of the enclosures I saw one large body posted in a tope behind a rising ground about 400 yards on my left front. I had a company of the 84th extended on that flank, and then advanced the guns which Capt. Batt skilfully brought up. On the skirmishers advancing the enemy began to retire; they were five or six hundred. Capt. Batt then fired three shells at them, the last of which, set for 1,200 yards, fell amongst a number of them, killing two and wounding two others; this sent them all flying.

Just as I began to advance on this body, word was brought to me, that a body of about 700 sepoys, with 150 sowars, were passing my right flank to get round in my rear; I sent Capt. Nason, with his men to stop them, which he did effectually, as he did everything entrusted to him. As soon as I saw the rebels in front clear off, I retired along the road with two companies 84th, between me and the enemy when I had got parallel with them; at Capt. Nason's request I sent a gun, one co. 84th, and half the Madras rifles, to dislodge the rebels from a village which they had seized. On the approach of the gun, &c., they all fled, throwing away their clothes and shoes; knowing that a third body was working round on my flank, I could not venture yet to let the cav. pursue; indeed I was told, that the body on the left were getting round to Doomraon; I had sent a troop Sikh cav. to stop them some time before, and they were reported to me as having halted, and I afterwards learned that, on the report of the first gun, they went off towards Arrah, plundering Jewningunge on the way.

Having beaten off the bodies in front and right and not being satisfied about that to the left, I determined to retire; and here Capt. Nason prompted by the spirit which carried him victorious through his subsequent operations, requested my permission to pursue the enemy with the cav.; at first I demurred on account of the fearful odds against him, and of my own position; but on his second appeal, seeing his determination, I yielded to him, and to his dashing gallantry, ably supported by his brave men, and the party of Sikhs under Lieut. Ryall, the success, which by God's blessing was achieved, is entirely due. His despatch will give the detail of his pursuit and punishment of the rebels, but the admiration which his leading and dash elicited from all who took part in his attack, I have to record.

My force consisted of about 45 sabres Mil. Train, 100 Sikh cav., two guns nav. brig., with 40 sailors under Capt. Batt, four cos. 84th, about 120 men under Maj. Rolleston, and one co. Madras rifles under Capt. Broome, in all about 350. I did not think of the smallness of my force opposed to three separate bodies, each doubling it, when I remembered that it was the 84th I had with me.

The skirmishers of the 84th, on the left, got a few shots at the enemy, which were in front at first, but to pursue them, even if advisable, was utterly hopeless; they can go two miles to our one when running away.

I have great pleasure in mentioning, not only the readiness of all to obey orders, but also the desire evinced by all to assist me in every way.

The Rajah of Doomraon was again in the field.

Mr. Garstin, the magistrate, was also out.

G. CARR, Maj. comdg. Buxar.
Buxar, the 16th August, 1858.

To Maj. Carr, comdg. Buxar force.

Doomraon, 14th Aug. 1858.

Sir,—Agreeably to instructions received, I yesterday proceeded with the force as per margin,* in pursuit of the retreating enemy. After a sharp gallop of three miles through kheets, interspersed with nullas, I came up with him, and observed he was moving on the village of Kusea in compact order, in two divisions of about 400 each, flanked by cav., the distance between each div. being about 400 yards. On seeing my party approach, he immediately drew up his forces in battle array, with very marshy ground in his front, and the village in his rear. I moved steadily on between the two masses, my object being, if possible, to prevent his concentrating his force; this he at once noticed, and moved the div. nearest the village up in double time, but was too late. When within 300 yards I directed the Mil. Train to charge, supported by the Sikh cav., which they did in a most gallant manner under a heavy fire, and cut up in the space of half an hour between forty and fifty of the enemy, all sepoys, with the exception of one man, who was found to be a Sikh. These men were well supplied with ammunition, the greater portion of which was "Minnie." Finding it rather hot work, the enemy retired in a very confused and hurried manner on the village. Our horses, from the heavy ground we were working upon, were completely exhausted; after resting them for a short time, I marched back to camp.

I am happy to say my casualties were few, notwithstanding the enemy fought with desperation; the Mil. Train had two men wounded (slightly), and the 3rd Sikh cav. one private (slightly), and one horse (slightly). I beg before closing this despatch to bring to your notice the undermentioned officers: Lieut. Ryall, comdg. 3rd Sikh cav., who steadily brought up his men in support of the Train.

To Dr. Corbyn, of the same corps, I am much indebted for his attendance on the wounded under a heavy fire; but more particularly to Lieut. Bodkin and Adj. Thomson, mil. train, for the gallant manner in which they led their troops to the charge.

Nothing could surpass the gallantry and soldierlike conduct of the non-commissioned officers and men of both regiments, who appeared to vie with each other in their anxiety to close with the enemy.

I have to offer my thanks to Mr. Garstin, magistrate of Buxar, who, from his thorough knowledge of the country, rendered me much assistance.

HENRY NASON, Capt.,
2nd Batt. Mil. Train, and Comdg. Lt. Cav., Buxar Force.

The Adj. Gen. of the Army,
Army Hd.-Qrs., Allahabad,
Dinapore, 14th August, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward herewith, to be laid before H. E. the C. in C. the report in original of a very successful affair with the rebels in the neighbourhood of Buxar, on the 8th inst.

2. Major Carr, Madras rifles, comdg. at that place, having received intimation, that the enemy purposed attacking the outpost of Doomraon, twelve miles further east, moved out from Buxar, and combining with the garrison of Doomraon post, met the rebels near Bhojpore, anticipating and entirely repulsing them with considerable loss, while that of our troops was merely nominal.

3. I cannot refrain from bringing prominently to H. E.'s notice, my obligations to Maj. Carr, who so ably planned and executed this surprise, and to the officers, non-commissioned officers and men (especially those mentioned by him by name), by whom he was so worthily supported.

JOHN DOUGLAS, Brigr.,
Comdg. in the Disturbed Districts of Ghazepore and Behar.

To the Brigr. Major.

Behar field force, Dinapore.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of brigr. Douglas, that having received information from Capt. Broome, comdg. Doomraon at eight P.M., on the 7th, that a body of rebels amounting to about 900, four hundred of whom were sepoys, were said to be advancing on Bhojpore and Doomraon, I proceeded the next morning to look for them with the force as below:—

1 troop mily. train (under Captain Inglefield), of forty sabres; 112 sabres of the 3rd Sikh cav. (under Lieut. Ryall).

Two cos. of H.M.'s 84th foot (under Capt. Brown); 50 Madras rifles (under Lieut. Gray).

The Sikh cav. were at Bhojpore shortly after daylight. I got to Bhojpore with the troops Mil. Train, and the two cos. of the 84th (the latter mounted on elephants) about half-past nine. Sent the Madras rifles into Doomraon to assist in protecting that place as I called on Capt. Broome to bring two-thirds of his force, Europeans especially, to my assistance, which he did with part of his own co. of Madras rifles.

We heard on the road that the rebels were about a cos beyond new Bhojpore.

We passed that village about one and a half miles when the patrols of Sikhs brought in word that the rebels were in a grove, about half a mile ahead, and were beginning to move towards the right.

Up to this time I think the rebels had not the slightest idea of our being near them. But here they saw my party, and commenced to retreat. Seeing they were retreating, I sent on all the cav. with orders to attack if the rebels were moving, but if they stood to wait till I came up. The cav. found them on the move, and taking advantage of a good opportunity they went at them, and the result was that about eighty rebels were killed, and the others dispersed. Capt. Inglefield tells me that he saw himself fully sixty dead bodies.

A party of forty of the Sikh cav., sent out from Doomraon to co-operate with us, state, that before flying the other Sikhs they fell in with a body of fighting rebels, and that they killed a number of them. But I have not been able to ascertain whether these men were included amongst those actually seen dead.

I followed the route of the cav. with the 84th some distance, but finding there was no chance of coming up with the enemy, I gave it up. The greater proportion by far of those killed were sepoys; and thirty percussion muskets were taken, besides a great number of swords.

They seemed badly off for caps. Amongst the killed were some mutineer Sikhs.

The Rajah of Doomraon himself came into the field.

Capt. Inglefield and his fine troop, and Lieut. Ryall, with the officers and men of the 3rd Sikh cav., took full advantage of the opportunity given them, and acquitted themselves in the most gallant manner. Mr. Garstin, the magistrate, accompanied the party in the pursuit and punishment of the rebels.

G. CARR, Maj. comdg. the party.

Doings of the Allahabad Police.

Allahabad, 10th Sept., 1858.

The Rt. Hon. the Gov.-Gen. is pleased to direct the publication in the Gazette of the subjoined report from Capt. Dennehy, comdg. Allahabad Div. Mil. Po., of his operations against a body of rebels in Pergunnah Bara on the 27th ult.

The Gov.-Gen. highly commends the gallantry evinced by Cap. Dennehy, his officers and men of the Allahabad Mil. Po., in this successful affair:—

To E. C. Bayley, Esq., Offg. Comr. Allahabad.

Camp Ghadamow, 28th Aug., 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, that on the night of the 26th inst., I marched with the force detailed below from Bara to Ghadamow, a village in the Pergunnah of Bara, about nine miles to the south-west, to which the rebel force under Punjab Sing, which had been plundering a number of villages all round the theel of Bara, had retreated on my arrival at that place:—

Allahabad Mil. Po.

CAVALRY.—6 native officers, 12 duffadars, 7 naib duffadars, 1 trumpeter, and 155 troopers.

INFANTRY.—3 native officers, 13 havildars, 1 bugler, and 163 rank and file.

On coming close to Ghadamow, shortly after daylight on the 27th, I found that the rebels, to the number of 1,000 or 1,200 matchlockmen, a few old sepoys, and 90 or 100 cav., had taken up their position in the village itself, and in some topes of trees in its immediate neighbourhood.

I directed Lieut. and Adj. Shaw to advance straight on the village with the infantry, throwing out one-half his men as skirmishers, and keeping the remainder as a support, while I kept with the cavalry towards the more open country to the left, where a large body of the rebels were posted in some thinly-planted topes of trees. Lieut. Shaw was to dislodge the enemy from the village, and, if possible, drive them towards the open country. And this he did with great gallantry; advancing at the double as the rebels opened fire upon him, he succeeded in driving them before him through the village, and a large tope behind, killing seven and wounding several more.

In the meantime, the rebels in my front had, as I advanced, retreated from the trees which had hitherto sheltered them; and now having the whole of them fairly in the open, I gave the cav. orders to charge.

We cut our way completely through the rebels, and dispersed them in every direction, following them up for more than four miles; and on our return we saw lying about in the fields more than one hundred dead bodies, among which that of Sirdar Punjab Sing, the leader of the rebels, is said to be recognised. Altogether their loss must have been very considerable. The whole of the baggage, and the baggage camels which they had with them, fell into our hands, as also a large number of cattle, most probably plundered from the villagers of this Pergunnah, many of whom are coming in to recognise their property.

The loss on our side was one trooper killed; two native officers of cav., five troopers, and fourteen horses wounded.

I would earnestly beg you to bring particularly to the notice of the Rt. Hon. the Gov.-Gen. the conduct and gallantry of the native officers and men of the 9th, 17th, and Sikh troops of the Allahabad Mil. Po., who were with me on this occasion, the first on which they have been engaged with the enemy in the field.

I have the honour to forward the depositions of some of the men, who swear to recognising the body of Punjab Sing, as also a number of papers found in his baggage.

F. DENNEHY, Cap. Comdg.

SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH TO ALEXANDRIA.

THE temporary suspension of telegraphic communication with Malta suggests unpleasant reflections as to the consequences of a complete rupture, in the event of a war with France. Let us imagine, for instance, what might have happened had the British Government ordered the Channel Fleet to assume a hostile attitude in the Tagus on occasion of the claims lately made on Portugal in the Charles-et-George affair. No sooner would the fleet have sailed in that direction than the Toulon squadron might have received orders to proceed immediately to sea, as if making for Lisbon, but in reality to push on under all sail and effect a junction with the squadron at Brest. The two united would have been more than a match for the Channel Fleet, and for a time might have rode triumphantly in the British waters. Nothing would have been easier than for the French Government to intercept all telegraphic messages to Malta, and thus our Mediterranean Fleet might have remained for days without a suspicion of the march that had been stolen upon this country. It is evident that we shall always be liable to be taken at a disadvantage until a submarine cable be laid to Gibraltar, Malta, Alexandria, and Corfu. At any time our communication with India may be interrupted, should war break out at the same time, as is probable, between France and Austria. In the event of a European convulsion, no reliance could be placed on the regular transmission of messages between India and Great Britain. The Red Sea Telegraph will be incomplete unless its connection with this country be placed beyond all possibility of interference or control. We cannot afford to throw away any chances, or to trust to mere physical vigour to repair the blunders caused by the shortsightedness of our rulers. It becomes, therefore, almost a national duty to press forward the laying of a telegraphic line from the English coast to Gibraltar, and thence to Malta and Alexandria.

THE INDIA HOUSE.

THE fiat has gone forth for the erection of a new India-house, and this time in the more aristocratic regions of the West-end. In the beginning the Directors of the Company of Merchants trading to the East Indies were content to meet in the parlour of a tavern in Bishopsgate-street, and transact their affairs amid the fumes of beer and tobacco. According to Mr. Charles Knight, the sign of this hostelry was "The Nag's Head," over against Bishopsgate Church, on the site now occupied by a Quaker's Meeting-house. Others, however, assert that it was at "The Bull" that the prices of Surat silks and Dacca muslins were agreed upon in this jovial fashion. Be that as it may, the labours of Mr. Cole, the secretary and accountant, were requited by a salary that could hardly have been fixed under such benign inspiration. Just forty pounds a-year was all that he could expect or claim, and on which he probably fared quite as well as Goldsmith's "Village Preacher." But, as the transactions of the adventurous traders increased in importance, it became manifest that a building must be obtained for their sole and exclusive use. With this view, in the year 1701, they took a twenty-one years' lease of the town house of the Craven family, situate in Leadenhall-street, and of a small tenement in Lime-street, at a yearly rental of one hundred pounds sterling. It was not, however, before 1726 that the first India-house was completed, and then it occupied no more space than the western wing of the present stately edifice. The latter was built in 1799 by Mr. R. Jupp, and about the year 1862 will probably be converted into a block of chambers and offices similar to Gresham-house. Many persons must have remarked the group of emblematical figures on the frieze over the portico. The central figure has especially invited comment, and of no favourable character—tradition vindicating good taste by the legend of the sculptor's suicide. We are not aware that there is any ground whatever for the report beyond the unpleasant effect produced by the representative of his Gracious Majesty George III. holding a sword in his left hand, and bearing a shield on his right arm. Again, on the apex is a Britannia grasping a spear, also with the left hand, as if Mr. Bacon were determined to allegorise, in the most emphatic manner, the peaceful mission of the Company. On the tympanum Britannia is represented as receiving the embrace of Liberty, and the same proud dame on the apex covers the point of her spear with a Phrygian cap. Was it a prophecy, or a sarcasm, or a combination of both? The cap of Liberty surmounting the spear with which Britannia conquered and subdued Hindostan is a not unbecoming pendant to the silken glove on the iron hand that holds our Gallic neighbours in thralldom.

THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.

AGREEING with our somewhat verbose and long-winded correspondent, "Durd Khush," in his condemnation of the fantastic notion of teaching the native languages through the medium of a Romanised alphabet, we entirely dissent from his proposition that a tolerably familiar acquaintance with Hindustani should be demanded of every candidate for a commission in the Indian army. It is true that a knowledge of the French tongue may never be required for colloquial purposes from an officer in the native army, but it is very important that he should be able to avail himself of the literature of that accomplished people, and especially of their works on military and scientific subjects. Besides, a certain familiarity with French is now-a-days as fair a test of a liberal and gentlemanly education as either of the dead languages; and the possibility of a candidate's rejection should also be taken into account, in which case Hindustani would be of little use in his subsequent career, though French might render him the highest service.

Nor do we think it advisable that any portion of the brief space of time at the disposal of a youth for the acquisition of that kind of knowledge which can only be obtained in Europe should be taken up by studies that can more advantageously be prosecuted in the East. Very few ensigns fail to pass the colloquial examination within a reasonable period after joining their regiments, and having taken this first step there are too many inducements for them to persevere, to render it likely that they will stop short at the threshold. It is neither necessary nor expedient that an English officer should become a Pundit. If he succeed in making himself clearly understood, and also in thoroughly understanding what is addressed to him, there is little more to be desired. It is not so much desirable that his imagination should be fired by the poetic exaggerations of the Prem Sagar, as that his mind should be strengthened and his heart purified and encouraged by the standard works which issue from the European press. We would rather that he should devote whatever time he can spare from his professional duties to holding "high converse" with the master minds of Europe, than that he should be an adept in Hindoo metaphysics, or a dabbler in Persian verse.

SIR JAMES COSMO MELVILL, K.C.B.

Soon after the retirement of Sir James Melvill from the office of Secretary to the East India Company in the spring of last year, the Home Service at large addressed to him a valedictory letter which, with the reply, appeared in our columns of the 28th April.

Those who had been more immediately associated with Sir James in official duties have since given expression to their feelings by presenting, as a lasting token of their high regard, a small but elegant service of plate, with the following address:—

"To Sir James Cosmo Melvill, K.C.B., &c., &c.

"Sir,—Although in the votes of the Honourable Courts of Proprietors and Directors of the East India Company; in the records of Parliament; in the speeches of statesmen; in the public press; and in the honours bestowed by her Majesty, there are abounding testimonies to the great ability, knowledge, and zeal for the well-being of India, which have marked your long official career; we, as members of the Home Indian Service, beg that you will accept from us, as a lasting token of our cordial respect and esteem, as well as of our admiration of that career which has conferred so much distinction on the service, the accompanying pieces of plate.

"In your example and labours; in your care to promote the efficiency and welfare of the service; in your courtesy and kindness we trace so many benefits, that your compliance with this request will afford to us very high gratification.

"Sincerely wishing that you may enjoy many years of happiness in your honourable retirement,

"We respectfully subscribe ourselves,

"Ever yours most faithfully,

(Here follow the signatures of 81 gentlemen of the Home Service)."

The reply of Sir James was as follows:—

"Gentlemen,—I acknowledge, with emotions of pride and satisfaction, the receipt of your address, and I request that you will accept my sincere thanks for the gratifying terms in which you have expressed yourselves towards me, and for the handsome and valuable testimonial in which you have given shape to your feelings of esteem and affection. To all, and to each one of you, I would tender my warmest acknowledgments. Your names are associated with some of my happiest recollections, and with many long-esteemed friendships.

"When I retired in February last it became my pleasing duty to reply to an address from the service at large. The sentiments which I then expressed are those which animate me on this occasion, and which must endure while life shall last.

"Regarding, as I always did, the respectability and efficiency of the home establishment as essential to the good government of India, it was incumbent on me to promote its importance and welfare; and I rejoice in the assurance which your address conveys to me, that my efforts in furtherance of that object were not altogether ineffectual.

"I am deeply sensible of many imperfections in my official conduct, and am also fully aware that in the position which I so long occupied, it was my lot occasionally to check, as well as promote, individual wishes and expectations. That, under such circumstances, so large a body of my late colleagues, not content with having subscribed the general address, should again come forward for the purpose of presenting me with a substantial testimonial of their regard, is a circumstance most gratifying to my feelings, assuring me, as it does, of their generous appreciation of the public motives by which my conduct was influenced.

"I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without repeating my thanks to you all, individually and collectively, for the able and friendly co-operation and assistance which I ever experienced from you, nor without assuring you that, though the tie of official relationship no longer unites us, my heart is still with the service, whose efficiency and high character will, I am convinced, only become the more apparent the more prominently it is brought before the public.

"I have the honour to be, gentlemen, yours most faithfully,
"JAMES C. MELVILL."

The plate, manufactured by Messrs. Garrard, Pantion-street, Haymarket, consists of two splendid table vases, with two highly ornamented silver stands for fruit, in value exceeding three hundred guineas, and bearing a suitable inscription in accordance with the terms of the address.

Our public intercourse with the Indian Home Service has been so intimate for so many years that we cannot forbear to express our warmest sympathy with both parties in this case, as well as in that of Mr. J. S. Mill, noticed in our last issue; and while admiring the good fellowship thus manifested, we cordially testify, as public writers, our respect and esteem for those distinguished men whose talents and ability have been thus recognised by their late colleagues.

INDIAN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.

In our last number we published a financial notification of the Government of India, confirmed by advertisement, under the signature of the Under-Secretary of State for India, which is well deserving of the attention of the monied men of this country, and is highly important in its bearing on the interests of retired Indians who have left their funds invested in the public securities of that country.

The loans of the Indian Government have always hitherto been negotiated at a difference in the rate of interest as compared with this country, which has never been less than one per cent. When the Three per Cent. Consols of England were at par, Lord Dalhousie succeeded in reducing the public debt of India to four per cent., and in imitation of Mr. Gladstone's attempted loan at two and three-quarters, tried a further reduction to three and a-half per cent., with very notable ill success. Seeing that the majority of the fundholders of India have always consisted of Englishmen either resident in India or retired, and living upon incomes derived from India, this difference in the rate of interest ought, one might have supposed, to have drawn to that country more of British capital than has hitherto been found to be the case.

There have been several reasons for the disinclination of English capitalists to invest in Indian securities quite independent of any doubt either of the good faith, or of the permanence of the national Government there established. The principal of these were, first, the necessity of employing an agent in India to receive and remit the interest as it was paid there. The income derived from invested funds was thus left subject to the accidents of remittance and of agency, and, besides, was realised for use at a long date after it was wanted. Heretofore, the loans of India were negotiated with the condition that interest should be receivable at the option of the fundholders in cash, or by bills on England. But these bills were always at six months' date, and at a fixed rate of exchange, which might or might not be favourable. Still the stock which had this condition was always at a premium. This practice has, however, been discontinued for more than twenty-five years, and the Indian securities, which then enjoyed the privilege of a bill remittance, were consolidated into the Transfer Book Debt Loan, a large proportion of which was paid off when Lord Dalhousie brought it under his financial screw for reduction of the rate of interest to four per cent. The same advertisement, however, which gives facilities for receiving the interest of Indian loans in the manner we shall presently explain, announces the extension to the existing Transfer Loan Stock of the privilege of incorporation into the open Five per Cent. Loan, under the similar condition of subscribing an equal amount, so that the remainder of this stock is likely to be soon extinguished.

But there was another great disadvantage attending Indian investment, besides that of agency and of delay in the remittance of dividends, which deterred British capitalists from placing their funds in those securities, and that was that they were not available for prompt realisation in case of unforeseen necessity; nor for use as collateral security for any present accommodation that might be desired. On this ground they were quite unsuitable for persons engaged in any mercantile pursuit, or desirous of engaging in any speculation, and were not sought, therefore, on that account.

These reasons are quite sufficient to account for a difference of one per cent. in the rate of interest of Indian securities as compared with those of England. Since the troubles incident to the mutiny of the Bengal army, this difference has much increased, and the financial exigencies of the Government of India have compelled them to seek funds by the offer of terms equal to six per cent. in the rate of interest, for which the revenue and resources of India are made liable. But this state of things is exceptional, and we hope to see the rate of interest there very shortly restored to the old status of peace and confidence. The debentures issued in this country upon the same security have borne interest not exceeding four per cent.

Now, the advertisement to which we are endeavouring to call attention has for its object to lessen, if not wholly to remove, the two disadvantages to which we have above adverted. The holder of the promissory notes of any of the Indian loans (and all but the Transfer-book Debt Stock to which we have referred are in this shape) will be able, by presenting their notes at the Accountant-General's Offices in Calcutta or Madras, to get them enfaced for payment of interest in England by a bill at sight on the treasuries of either of those Presidencies. Bombay is not included, because the rate of exchange of that side of India is not uniform with that which ranges at the other Presidencies, and the treasury there might be embarrassed by large transfers to it for exchange speculations.

The interest bill given in England will be for the precise amount that would be issued for interest from those Presidencies, so that the operation can produce no inconvenience to the local treasuries, but rather the contrary by the delay of a month or more in the arrival of the bill for presentation. The English fundholder receiving this bill will realise it through any of the banks of remittance, or by sale in the market, so as to obtain his income without delay or any risk or expense of agency. Again, having in possession the enfaced promissory notes, which are transferable by endorsement, he has it in his power to pledge or sell them here in England whenever he may require to do so; and he may, by presenting them at the East India House, obtain the division of any note, so as the better to suit such purposes, or in order to place any part in trust, or to use it in furtherance of any other object. This division will be made by the officers of the East India House, who, giving a receipt for the original note, will transmit it to India, and obtain fresh notes of the amounts required to be given to the holder of the receipt.

We contemplate great benefits to the Indian finance from the grant of these facilities, so soon as they shall be generally known and understood; and we think their effect will soon be seen in the improved quotations of the value of these securities as well here as in India.

While upon this subject, we may as well notice the abnormal ratio between the Four and Five per Cent. securities exhibited by our last quotations. While the Five per Cent. Promissory Notes, secured from repayment for fifteen years, were at a discount of 7 per cent.—that is, were selling at 93—the Four per Cents. ranged from 86 to 88, or at a discount of only 12 or 14. The difference of only 6 per cent. upon securities of the same character appears at first sight unaccountable. But it must be borne in mind that the Four per Cents. enjoy the privilege of conversion into Fives, under the condition of subscription in cash of an equal amount, which, of course, is an advantage increasing their relative value. On the other hand, the Five per Cents. are temporarily depressed by the circumstance that such transfers of Fours have been largely made with borrowed capital, for the replacement of which the Five per Cent. Promissory Notes are largely in the market, and in some cases with the obligation of prompt sale to fulfil a time bargain.

NE SUTOR, &c.—The public servant of Government, whether military or civil, should not attempt to preach a crusade, or spend his time in exhibiting religious dogmas, or discussing doctrinal points with the natives, his subordinates, for this reason above all others, that this is the surest way to make hypocrites, not converts. Let the soldier or civilian assist the missionary with his purse, his counsel, or his prayers, but let him not usurp an office which is inconsistent with his obligations to the State.—Raikes' Notes on the Revolt.

CORRESPONDENCE.

STUDY OF THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—There have been various discussions of late in the London papers upon the study of the languages of India and the Romanising system. I feel inclined to offer a few remarks upon the subject myself. But let me first give a short sketch of my own career in the East.

Born with a serious, meditative, and inquisitive mind, I commenced, soon after my arrival in the country, an indefatigable research into the Oriental languages, studying from ten till five daily. I was quite happy while closely engaged with my moonshee or my pundit. Let those who are spitefully inclined towards the literature of India sneer as much as they please. For my part, I have attributed my poetic turn of mind in a great measure to the perusal of its more imaginative works, though I was not so absorbed by them as to neglect graver studies. I profited by the perusal of the more solid and philosophical writings of the country. Should the uninitiated smile at the confession of my having derived what poetic vein I possess from such books as the "Bagh O Bahar," "Goolibakawali," "Goolistan," and "Prem Sagar," it is easy to answer them with a reference to the examples of our great poets, Shakespeare and Spenser, who were wont to invigorate their fancy by perusing works of fiction in prose and verse of no higher character than those above enumerated. Oriental works are sometimes designated by malicious Europeans "the black classics," by way of contempt; but those, from whom I have heard the expression, have never engaged deeply in the study of them, and act as unfairly as the native of India would do who should rest the merits of our writings upon such books as "Tom Thumb" and "Goody Two-Shoes," or upon those fantastical tracts which are circulated to terrify the ignorant populace into superstition still greater than is habitual to them. I have somewhere met with the saying, that "dunces always speak despitefully of Latin and Greek;" and I believe that many of those who are so inveterate against the study of Asiatic writings are actuated by a similar spirit. The "Prem Sagar" I have heard spoken of with peculiar ill-nature and contempt, but have a strong notion that this spleen is not so much occasioned by the demerits of the work as by a feeling of religious hostility. I have almost universally found the more unyielding Christian religionists among its detractors, who, if they could be prevailed upon to venture so far, would, I have little doubt, from the very same motive, remain quite blind to the acknowledged elegance of the Koran. As I myself, however, am not so exclusively partial to the sacred writings of my own creed, I here plainly avow, that, so far from being disgusted with the "Prem Sagar," its perusal quite entranced my imagination! As to the ridiculous stories for which these people are so ready to reproach it, and which, with hot-headed bigotry, they sometimes cast into the teeth of their believers, they should recollect that Hindoos may retort, and be allowed even to have done so with justice by a certain class of countrymen of their own.

One thing I recollect well as the consequence of my new course of studies, viz., my emancipation from the usual prejudices with which young men go out to India. From an acquired familiarity with ideas so dissimilar to those in which I had been brought up, my tastes became more catholic—less exclusive—and I was emboldened to spurn many illiberal dogmas that had been thrust upon me in my youth. How delightful is the privilege of thinking for oneself, and questioning everything, however much revered by the world, until proved to one's own satisfaction! Notwithstanding my happy devotedness to my studies, it is not to be supposed that I was quite indifferent to reward or preferment. I naturally looked forward to obtain an interpretership. Soon after I had begun to study, a pompous G.O. was issued, holding out great encouragement to students; on this I rested all my hopes, and consequently I passed my examination a considerable time before my brother officers, seniors and juniors; and yet I was doomed to disappointment. Interest, venal interest, I found carried the day,—360 rupees was the highest reward of laborious study, which scarcely covered the sum I had paid my moonshee alone.

It is an object worthy of inquiry to ascertain in which way so much deficiency in the acquisition of the tongues of those whose interest we are deputed to watch arises? The following appear to be the chief causes:—

Firstly. The blame lies at the very threshold of the East India House for substituting French in lieu of Hindustani, the absurdity is so obvious that it would be quite superfluous to dwell upon it for one moment. No preferment being given to Hindustani the cadets go out without any knowledge of it. On their first arrival in the country they are unsettled for some time waiting to be posted to a corps—marching and counter-marching from one station to the other. Young men just escaped from all scholastic discipline and restriction enjoy shooting, hunting, and other amusements till they have sown their wild oats; they pick up a vulgar jargon from the servants so as just to make themselves barely understood; they care not to be troubled with actual study, consequently in every regiment in Bengal there are not more than two or three passed officers.

Secondly. General, divisional, and regimental staff appointments are not all subject to a certain standard of examination in the Oriental languages. If all posts to which Indian military officers are eligible were restricted to the examination, and the reward increased, it would be a great stimulus to work hard and pass.

Thirdly. The most important object to be insisted upon should be that every military candidate should undergo a certain standard of examination in this country before he obtains his nomination. The books insisted upon should be Forbes' "Grammar," "Bagh-o-Bahar" (or "Tota Kahani"), and "Baital Pachasi"—translation of an easy English passage into Persia and Nagari characters in a legible hand—extempore conversation on daily and simple matters. Well, but the above books may soon be got through by a diligent scholar merely for the purpose of an examination, as boys are crammed for public prizes at schools; but it must be remembered that the foundation laid here, when the mind is young, fresh, and flexible, accustomed to study, and ready to receive impression, is of infinite use in preparing the way for more extensive acquisitions. This first small stock would rapidly increase in India, and enable a military aspirant to pass the severest ordeal in a very short time, and be the means of his future distinction. I now proceed to the second of the two heads under which I propose to arrange my subject.

It is a common practice with many Indian officers who are too indolent, or perhaps too dull, to study, and are contented to think that, by dint of romanised conversational manuals, a habit of conversing with their domestics and the lower order of natives in a desultory manner is quite enough to render them au fait at the language.

It is a deplorable mistake. Some of these people go so far as to say the more we study a language the less able we become to make ourselves understood. This deserves an answer. The real ignorance of those who pretend to think that those only who systematically study the Hindoostani tongue are unintelligible linguists is truly pitiable. The best time or opportunity to expose their shallow pretensions is in the presence of one or two moonshees—if one is fortunate enough to allure them there, which is a difficult matter—for they are generally wise enough to keep clear of men who could sound their depth, or might meet their affectation of talking like an Asiatic with a significant smile.

I have sometimes been amused by the tirades of these would-be linguists through the means of the romanising system, who endeavour to drown, by a hasty flow of language, the deficiency in the sense of their periods, and the glaring nature of their horrid pronunciation, to say nothing of their grammatical errors. In trying to come as near as they can to the style and expression of Asiatic colloquy, they often materially overdo the thing; and their conceited attempts to catch the proper pronunciation of the more difficult words have sometimes brought to my mind the mewling of a cat, while their vain endeavours to hit the more intricate parts of the idiom have made one regret their preference for the loose system of picking up the language from the hurried and careless conversation of common natives, instead of the more sound and solid method of arriving at their object by a careful perusal of original vernacular books by the aid of a moonshee and pundit. I think it will not be out of the way to mention some of the egregious blunders committed by people, who, not choosing to study the Hindoostani language in its original character, but depending upon romanised Hindoostani manuals and vocabularies, flatter themselves they can catch the true pronunciation of words, and become perfect in the idiom by a mere attention to the language of their servants or the inferior natives, which I trust will evince that, though they may not care to study the language as a matter of taste and pleasure, it is their duty to do so as men of sense and prudence.

The importance of this has been repeatedly dwelt upon by several learned, able, and experienced chairmen of the Hon. East India Company and various other anglo-Indian statesmen and thinking men. It is indispensably necessary for a man to know the language of the country to which he goes even as a bird of passage. But we are deputed to India and entrusted there with responsible posts, for half a life time, and often make the country our second or adopted home. At all events it is desirable to learn so much of the native languages as to render us free from gross errors of speech in common conversation. We should thus save our credit with the people. This particularly applies to those who are fortunate enough to secure staff and garrison appointments, and to get command of regiments.

The following are down-right facts relating to the advocates of the romanising system and those who are satisfied to learn a correct pronunciation from their menials:—

I once heard one of the latter description of persons declare to a coterie of griffs that the exclamation which Mahomedans and their mendicants make in the excitement of a charge, prayer, funeral ceremonies, &c., is "yáhee," his ear had just caught the last two syllables, and he mistook this word for the true one "Illahoe" (God), in which alone there is any sense; and at another time he so murdered the pronunciation of the word "bahoo," signifying a daughter-in-law, as to call it "bháoo," and there being a man at the place of the name of "Bháoo Khan," the native whom he addressed replied as if he had been questioned about that individual; he has checked a person for saying (correctly enough) "dukhunee" instead of "dakhunee," and one of the same class ridiculed once some young fellows for calling that well-known diah of Indian luxury a "pilau" instead of "pilao" as he pronounced it, and paid no attention to the more important mistake, apparently ignorant himself that the word is "pooláo" and not "pillao." In short, it is a regular case (with the lovers of the romanising system) of the pot abusing the kettle for being black, when these misguided linguists attempt to correct the pronunciation of others, or want to express their own ideas. A brother officer of mine wishing to recollect the Hindoostani names of the four cardinal points of the compass by writing them down, applied to one of these gentlemen of romanising fame, who, in his task of dictation, pronounced the word "otlar" (north) as though it had a "h" in it, and the word "postrub" (east) as though it were written with a "p" instead of "b." Thus the honest inquirer after information would have been misled had I not been present to put him right. The Persian poet and moralist, Shaikh Sadi, has figuratively remarked, "that the blind man's condition is truly hapless who has a very lame man to lead him along." I hope those romanisers who set up to be instructors of the young will wisely apply the above remark to themselves, and act more modestly for the future. I was once amused at a young officer, who conceived he had gained much more knowledge of the Hindoostani tongue, through the aid of his romanised Hindoo vocabulary, his sporting excursions, and familiar conversation with the peasantry of the surrounding villages, than I have from all the books I have read, trying to make my moonshee understand that a certain thing contained poison; and though he hammered at the word for some minutes, the poor man could not conceive what he meant, unless it might be "zar" (gold), until I pronounced it for his comprehension. At another time an advocate of the romanising system being defied to pronounce the word "duhee" (coagulated milk) so as to be understood, he accepted the challenge. One of my bearers was called in, and though he twisted the word in various ways, the man could not divine what he wanted, and he was obliged to give it up. I then pronounced the word, which is easy enough to those who have seen how it is written, and are acquainted with Indian alphabets, and the bearer immediately brightened up and looked as if he were about to receive some money to buy a bellyful of the dainty for himself. The idiom, too, is almost as frequently violated by the scorners of Hindoostani alphabet learning, while grammatical errors, and the use of wrong words, are of frequent occurrence. I have known a magistrate, in asking a native if he had been abused, say, "galee Paga;" and in threatening to pull a man's ears, use the verb "Khainchna;" and, telling a servant to remind him of something to do, say, "hum ko yad kuro," instead of "yad deláo." I have heard sepoys told to come "thorá oopur" in being required to dress up a little in the ranks; and how very common it is with people to use the transitive verbs to them, instead of "burho," or "huto," or "milo," when commanding them to dress up, or dress back, or to close together—thus, "burhao," and "hutao," or "milao;" and some even old officers of thirty or forty years' standing in the service are in the habit of nonsensically calling out to their men "Khure ho" whenever they happen to fidget about, as if they were lying or sitting down. I am sure the sepoys must often laugh at the numerous blunders thus committed by their European officers. I used to hear an adjutant in former days, in calling out to the soldiers on the left of any company or division, pronounce the word for "left" so funnily as to give one an idea that he was addressing their sisters. A field officer of forty years' service had occasion to reprove the men of his regiment on parade for talking and making a little noise while his back was turned, and intending to be very severe, after desiring them to be silent, he added, "Kyâ makdoor," thinking to say, as we would say in English, "How dare you?" I suppose he little knew how misapplied this was. It is just what the soldiers themselves might have said, had they been allowed to speak, and had he not said it for them. How often, too, have I seen English idioms childishly clothed with Hindoostani words! A native officer was some time ago put under arrest, and, on being released, his commanding officer humanely wishing to smooth the matter to him, said "bhool gao," just in the same manner as when we would comfort a man in his misfortune we tell him in English to forget it. The native officer, however, was left quite in the dark as to his colonel's kind intention. As I happened to be on the spot, I told him in good Hindoostani, "Khair jo howa so howa" (well, let by-gones be by-gones). He understood me immediately, and with hands placed palm to palm said, "Huzore mata pita hain" (you are my mother and father). The officer commanding understood him to say, "Marta peetla hain" (beat and ill treat). He immediately exclaimed, what does he mean by this? I said, he means to say he regards you in the light of his parents. Another error (the last I shall mention) committed by many who will not study the language in its original character and systematic form with a really good and well-educated moonshee, and trust to the little assistance afforded by romanised manual's vague and rare conversations with natives, consists in the misapplication of the Arabic adverb "bad" (afterwards), which is often used, as though it signified "ago." Thus I have heard people erroneously say, "Do ghunte bad humne toomko hookm diyâ tha" (I gave you the orders two hours ago), instead of "do ghunte hooe," or "do ghunte goozre." I could multiply instances of this kind, which are of daily occurrence in India, were I not fearful of trespassing too much on your space.

It is a subject of paramount importance, and loudly demands the attention of the Right Hon. Lord Stanley. He should make Hindoostani compulsory upon all officers, civil, military, and medical, previous to their leaving this country for the East Indies. Let the idea of romanised books be altogether done away with, and the original character made the candidate's only resource.

In conclusion, I have to assure you and your readers that I am perfectly disinterested in advocating the study of Hindoostani. I think only of the benefit of my country, and of the East India Service. I have retired after now forty-five years' active service; and I know, by practical and long experience, that the study of the Indian languages should be rigidly insisted upon in this country instead of in India, where the heat of the climate is certainly unfavourable to close application and hard study.—I remain, sir, your faithful servant,
DURD KUSH.

THE CHINESE IMPERIAL COMMISSIONERS.

Among the many beautiful photographs collected together at the Crystal Palace, there is one which some of our readers will thank us for pointing out to their notice. It is a small picture containing the full-length portraits of the Imperial Commissioners, Kweiliang and Hwashana, who signed the treaty with Lord Elgin, and was taken a day or two after that event by Mr. Robert Morrison, one of the attachés to the embassy.

The Commissioners are seated, in the ordinary dress of Chinese gentlemen, one on each side of a table. Kweiliang, as the senior, occupies the highest seat—according to Chinese etiquette, the left. Their official caps, decorated with peacocks' feathers, are placed on stands between them, and the invariable cup of tea, covered by a little saucer, is also ready for their Excellencies' use. From the front of the table hangs an embroidered cloth, which indicates the high standing of its owner in the civil service of the State.

In looking at this representation of two men who have risen—mainly, it must have been—by their own abilities to the very highest rank in the councils of their sovereign, one cannot help contrasting the mild, well-bred face of Kweiliang, and the younger and more vigorous head of Hwashana, with that of one of their conféres, the "miscreant Yeh," as shown in a drawing which appeared the moment the news of his capture reached England. We fear, however, as that drawing has no resemblance to any of the photographs that have since been made at Calcutta of the astute and truculent ex-Governor of Kwang-si, it must be set down as a caricature. The pencil of the sun is more faithful than that of most artists, and we may believe that Yeh is not—unless in a "Parliamentary sense"—a monster.

We regret to hear that several other photographic pictures of a very interesting character, which were done by Mr. Morrison at Tientsin under most unfavourable circumstances—the intense heat of that place in July not only rendering the manipulation difficult and laborious, but also affecting the chemical products used—were destroyed accidentally (if that term may be applied to the natural result of the usual treatment of passengers' luggage on board the Peninsular Company's steamer) on their way home.

LIEUTENANT SMITHETT.—Amongst the last arrivals from India is that of Lieut. H. Smithett, of the Bengal Horse Artillery, and one of the survivors of the immortal Havelock's gallant force, who has been compelled, from loss of health, brought on by excessive hardships, exposure to climate, and severity of his wounds, to invalid for a time. A brief narrative of this officer's services may not be uninteresting. In April, 1857, Lieut. Smithett marched from Benares to Dinapore in charge of the right half of No. 12 horse field battery, and commanded the artillery division at that station till June, when he rejoined his battery at Benares. He then marched in charge of three guns and joined the late General Sir Henry Havelock, shortly after the massacre and capture of Cawnpore, and continued with Havelock's force during the operations of the first advance on Lucknow, including the several actions of Buseerat-Gunge; returned to Cawnpore in August, and, when General Outram's reinforcements came up, advanced and fought in the actions of Mungulwar (Sept. 21), the Alumbagh (Sept. 23), and the ever-memorable relief of Lucknow (Sept. 25), where he had his horse shot from under him; was then one of the besieged in the garrison of Lucknow till Nov. 27, during which time he received eight wounds, three of which were severe, viz., a bullet through the wrist, another in his leg, and a third, the most serious, hit him on the head. He was present with General Sir James Outram during the celebrated operations at the Alumbagh in Dec., Jan., and Feb., including the several actions at Guilée; also in repulsing the enemy's repeated attacks on our camp; and lastly, with the forces under the Commander in Chief, Lord Clyde, during the fourteen days' siege and recapture of Lucknow. For these services in the field he was promoted to the horse artillery, but after joining his troop in Lahore, was compelled from the troublesome and painful nature of his wounds and failing health, to proceed to Simla, where, not getting better, he was ordered to return to England.

APPOINTMENT.—PRINCE EDWARD'S ISLAND.—(Downing-street, Jan. 5.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint George Dundas, Esq., to be Lieutenant-Governor of the Island of Prince Edward.

KNIGHTHOOD.—The Queen, on the 30th ult., conferred the honour of knighthood, at Windsor Castle, upon Mordaunt Lawson Wells, Esq., Judge of the Supreme Court at Calcutta.

DR. J. R. TAYLOR, C.B., the principal medical officer at Fort Pitt, Chatham, has been promoted to be Inspector-General of Hospitals in India.

THE NEW INDIA-HOUSE.—The Secretary of State for India in Council has appointed Messrs. G. G. Scott and Digby Wyatt joint architects for erecting the new India-office. The building is to occupy that half of the site in Downing-street which faces Parliament-street, and will form a united front with the new Foreign-office. The arrangement of the exterior will fall to Mr. Scott, while Mr. Digby Wyatt's knowledge of the internal decorations of mediæval works in Italy and more eastern countries will be brought to bear upon the internal portions of the structure.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN, Secretary to the Treasury, has been appointed Governor of Madras. We are glad to see this recognition by the Government of the eminent services of a most valuable public officer, and one especially qualified for the high office to which he has been selected by his intimate acquaintance with Indian affairs.

THE GROWTH OF FLAX IN INDIA.—At the annual meeting of the Leeds Chamber of Commerce, held on Wednesday last, a discussion arose as to the importance of promoting the growth of flax in India, and the best means of doing so. Mr. D. Lupton, the president, said that he had received a communication from Mr. G. O. Miller, the president of the Dundee Chamber of Commerce, stating that they had presented a memorial to the India Council on the same subject in October last, but that Lord Stanley, while admitting the importance of promoting the cultivation of flax in India, said that it must be left to private enterprise to carry out any scheme having that object. The letter suggested that the Chambers of Commerce at Leeds and other towns should take up the subject, and that the Government should be again memorialised. Mr. J. R. W. Atkinson (of the firm of Messrs. Hives and Atkinson) read a letter which he had written to Mr. R. Sturrock, the secretary of the Dundee Chamber of Commerce, in reply to a communication which he had received from that gentleman. Mr. Atkinson expressed his concurrence with Lord Stanley, that a well-organised system of private enterprise, in the form of an association, must be established before a large supply of Indian flax could be obtained. He suggested that a flax supply association, composed of the various flax spinners and manufacturers in Great Britain, should be formed, and raise a fund to send out intelligent and practical men to instruct the natives of India in the growth of flax, and point out to them the advantage that would accrue to them by improving the quality of the flax straw. This, he thought, would be the best method of obtaining a supply of flax in this country from India. Mr. Atkinson's suggestion was approved by the meeting, and it was resolved to form a flax supply association in connection with the Leeds Chamber of Commerce, consisting of Mr. Atkinson, Mr. H. C. Marshall, and other eminent flax-spinners. It was also understood that the subject should be brought prominently under the notice of other towns interested in the question.

A STRANGE ACCIDENT.—In the evening a strange accident occurred where we were. A badly-aimed 8-inch shell, from one of our own batteries across the river (Goemtee) pitched right amongst the guard at one of our gateways; it ran down the sentry's musket, twisting the iron barrel into a most extraordinary shape, and sheared off the poor fellow's arm as completely as if it had been cut off with an axe. The man ran forwards nearly 200 yards, and then cried, "Oh, where's my arm?" I believe he afterwards died. Fortunately the shell did not burst, or the consequences would have been disastrous.—Medley's "A Year's Campaigning."

THE VEDAS.—The Rig-Veda, the oldest of the four Vedas, has its some 11,000 distichs, or rich, from which it receives its name, arranged in hymns according to their authors and the gods whom they invoke. The Yajur Veda, the Sanhita of which is called the Vajasaneysa, and which has about half the number of distichs found in the Rik or Rig, derives about half its material from the Rig. The Sama Veda, which is only about half the size of the Yajur, draws almost its whole contents from the Rig, selecting them in small portions from particular hymns, and arranging them principally for sacrificial chanting. The distichs, or verses, of the Atharva Veda,—which is posterior to the others in composition,—including a few of the latter hymns of the Rig, and dealing principally in incantations and curses, are nearly, according to Dr. Roth, its learned editor, as numerous as those of the Rig.—Dr. Wilson's India.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPÆDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocquer's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocquer for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

THE INDUS and its PROVINCES; their Political and Commercial Importance considered in connection with Improved Means of Communication. Illustrated by Statistical Tables and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.,

Chairman of the Sindh and Punjab Railways, and Indus Steam Flotilla; Author of "Indian Railways as connected with the Power and Stability of the British Empire in the East," &c., &c., &c.

"The Indus and its Provinces" is really as interesting to the general reader as it is essential to the merchant, the trader, the politician, and the historian."—Morning Chronicle, May 27, 1858.

"Not contented to repose on his laurels as the early advocate for the construction of Railways in India, Mr. Andrew has steadily persevered in developing his original idea, and now, after twelve years of incessant application, we find him concentrating his energies on the improvement of land and river communication in Sindh and the Punjab, though with ulterior views, extending far beyond the immediate benefit of those Provinces."—Allen's Indian Mail, June 12, 1858.

In 8vo. cloth, with Maps, price 10s. 6d.,

MEMOIR on the EUPHRATES VALLEY ROUTE to INDIA; with Official Correspondence and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.

"It is impossible to refer to the Surveys and Reports of General Chesney and his colleagues on the Euphrates, published twenty years ago, without astonishment, that even at that period the British Government and people failed to take immediate steps to avail themselves of its capabilities."—The Times.

"What a glorious thing it would have been," said a writer in the 'Lahore Chronicle' of August last, "had the Euphrates Valley Railway and the Sindh and Punjab Railway been accomplished facts at the time of the present insurrection."—Vide The Indus and its Provinces—p. 14.

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS,

A WEEKLY SUMMARY OF BRITISH AND FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

This Newspaper presents a comprehensive and perfect view of British and Foreign affairs, with special reference to those subjects in any way interesting to residents in India, or those at home having connections there. The Intelligence is brought down to the latest possible moment prior to the departure of of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines.

The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—In general debility and incipient consumption, a course of this most admirable alternative and tonic is attended with the happiest results. The melancholy emaciation soon gives place to health, strength, and cheerfulness, and the patient discovers to his surprise and delight, that symptoms which had resisted all medical skill, and were quite unaffected by a change of air and climate, are easily and speedily subjected to the magical influence of these inestimable Pills. Printed directions for the guidance of patients in the use of these Pills are affixed to every box. Composed exclusively of rare balsams, they are as harmless as they are efficacious. Sold by Professor HOLLOWAY, 244, Strand, London, and by all Medicine-vendors throughout the civilised world.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS
PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfect, with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the month exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldonsquare, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE cannot this time complain of the lack of interest that attaches to the intelligence brought by the last Indian Mail—that from Bombay, of the 24th December. Lord Clyde appears to have outwitted himself. His strategy has been baffled by the simplest mischance in the world. Just as his lordship was about to drag his net, and catch, at one haul, all the rebel leaders still at large in the province of Oude, his prey discovered a hole in the meshes, and swiftly glided through.

The ex-Prince of Delhi, Feroze Shah, though again defeated by Brigadier Troup on the 1st December, being joined by the principal Musulman chiefs of the district, formed the bold resolution of crossing the Ganges and making his way into Rajpootana. Safely effecting the passage of the Goomtee, and avoiding the flying column under Brigadier Barker, he reached a spot within the Doab, about twelve miles from Kanouj, on the 6th of December. Mr A. O. Hume, the magistrate at Etawah, having obtained information of the approach of a hostile force, gallantly took the field with a small body of irregular horsemen, with the intention of disputing their further progress. On the morning of the 8th he came in sight of the overwhelming masses of the insurgents; but, nothing daunted, instantly advanced to the attack. His dashing intrepidity, however, was unfortunately not shared by his sowers, who displayed more discretion than valour. While vainly endeavouring to inspire them with his own courage, Lieut. Doyle, their commander, fell dead upon the field, and Mr. Hume was constrained to retreat into Hurchundpore, a small fortress in the possession of a friendly zemindar. Without stopping to reap the fruits of his victory by the reduction of this fort, Feroze Shah pushed on towards Ooriya. He had hardly passed through that town, when Brigadier Herbert's column from Cawnpore came up with his rear-guard, dispersed it, and captured the only gun still belonging to him. Lieut. Angelo, at the head of the Towana horse, followed up this advantage, and closely pursued him along the northern bank of the Jumna. But the rebels kept the lead, and crossed that river just above the mouth of the Chumbul. Here the pursuit was given up, through fear of the ever-shifting quicksands in the bed of the Jumna. The fugitives then crossed the Chumbul and the Sind and made for Runode. But in this movement they had been anticipated by Sir Robert Napier, who, throwing a small force into Gwalior, arrived at Runode before the enemy. A few hours later, on the morning of the 17th December, Feroze Shah's little army appeared in sight, quite unconscious of the reception that awaited them. While advancing without suspicion they were suddenly charged by the 14th Dragoons and thrown into confusion. In this brilliant affair Captain Prettyjohn and a few troopers were wounded, but not a single life was lost on the side of the British, though the enemy's loss was very severe. Feroze Shah, however, again contrived to gather his followers together, and made for Kotah, where he fondly hoped to effect a junction with Tantia Topee. This want of correct intelligence on the part of the rebel leaders clearly indicates the lukewarmness of the natives in their favour.

Tantia Topee has been as ubiquitous and unapproachable as ever. Turning aside from Guzerat, he again directed his steps towards Rajpootana, and on the 10th arrived at B. ns-warrah. On the 18th he was at Durriabad, a short distance to the southward of Pertabghur, and again it is reported that his escape is impossible.

In Oude Lord Clyde had fixed his headquarters at Baraitch, having hemmed in the begum's forces on all sides, and it is said that the royal amazon had offered to surrender. This movement of the Commander-in-Chief fairly unearthed the Nana. The wretch had been lurking in the fort of Churda, some thirty miles from Baraitch, but on the approach of the British column he fled in terror into the jungles lying to the north west. The good effect of the amnesty promised in the Royal Proclamation is said to be daily exemplified.

We have the pleasure to announce the election of Colonel Durand, of the Bengal Engineers, to the seat in Council rendered vacant by the resignation of the late Captain Shepherd. With not less satisfaction do we observe that Mr. Charles Mason has been recalled to the office of secretary in the Marine Department, his removal from which proved, as might have been expected, most injurious to the public service.

Our readers will pardon us for directing their attention to the alteration in the dates of despatch of mails to India, as shown under the usual head in our first column.

BENGAL.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

Intelligence by Government message has been received at Bombay from Lucknow regarding the party of rebels which lately entered the Doab. They are fugitives from the fight at Biswa, and are stated to muster 900 horse, 300 foot, with one small gun, some elephants, and several women.

Their leaders are Feroze Shah, Lukkur Shah, Goolab Shah alias Peerjee, Mohsum Alee Khan of Shumshabad, who wears the European dress, Moulvee Fuzul Huq of Delhi, Sumund Khan of Jujjur, and others. On the 8th inst. they were encountered by Mr. Hume, with local levies only, near Hurchundpoor, and after a severe fight of three hours and a half, in which Mr. Doyle was killed, the enemy appeared to have retired towards Papoond, where they were last heard of, on their way, it is supposed, to Shergur Ghat. Brigadier Showers, with his force, was to be at Etawah on the 11th.

From the same source we learn that Ishmael Khan and 200 sowars have surrendered to Major Carnegie, at Biswa, under the terms of the amnesty.

We are informed that the rebels under Feroze Shah were at Tengoor on the river Siude on the morning of the 12th. They are stated to have crossed over to Lahar and to have recrossed to Birgaon on the same day. On the morning of the 13th they again crossed to Doobai, burnt a bungalow there, and proceeded south; General Napier, who was at Antree on the road to Dutteea, in pursuit. The rebels reached Bullewar on the 13th, and were still moving. They had eleven elephants with them, and were mostly cavalry, with some camel zumboorucks. The route appeared to be towards Neewar or Choorpoor. General Napier was at Noor-ke-Serai the same day, and would move on in pursuit that evening.

The following telegrams, with which we have been favoured by Government, record a satisfactory attack on the rebels under Feroze Shah by Brigadier Napier's force:—

"From Gwalior, 18th Dec., from Major Macpherson.

"On the 17th December Sir R. Napier's force beat and pursued with slaughter for eight miles the rebels under Feroze Shah. Captain Meade, 14th Dragoons, captured six elephants. Captain Prettyjohn, 14th Dragoons, wounded in leg, and eight or ten men wounded; none killed."

"From Goona, 18th Dec., from Captain Mayne.

"I have just received this telegram: General Napier arrived at Ranode at 8.30 A.M., having travelled 140 miles in four days, with Prettyjohn's and Meade's troops: 14th Dragoons, 150 men; Captain H. Monith's Mahratta Horse, just raised, 100; H.M.'s 71st Highlanders, 38, under Captain Smith; and Captain Templer's Sowarce Camels. At 9 A.M. the rebels, apparently more numerous than usually reported, advanced to attack Ranode, but instead of Scundies, H.M.'s 14th Dragoons emerged from behind a grove of trees, and charged into the mass; pursuit continued over a good plain for eight miles, with great slaughter; numbers of Holme's Irregulars, including Russuldar Yahoore Ali, killed, also several persons of distinction, but none that look like Feroze Shah. The papers on one body seem to identify it as Feroze Shah, and a prisoner corroborates it. Six elephants captured, with numbers of horses and ponies, and arms. Our loss—killed, none; Captain Prettyjohn, H.M.'s 14th Dragoons, and eight or ten men, wounded; all doing well."—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 24.

OATHS OR AFFIRMATIONS.

The Legislative Council at their last meeting on Saturday had before them the second reading of the Bill concerning oaths and affirmations. In the course of the discussion Mr. Forbes moved that the opinions of all the judicial authorities, English and native, should be obtained on this subject before the Council proceeded further; and also on the proposition of her Majesty's Commissioners to dispense with oaths and affirmations altogether. Sir James Outram, we are happy to observe, suggested that as the subject was of the greatest importance as regarded the feelings of the natives the inquiry should not be confined to the officials alone. Mr. Forbes accepted the suggestion, and amended his motion accordingly. The request now goes to Government to obtain information on this subject, not only from officials, but from such other persons as the local Governments shall think fit, and generally to invite the public upon the subject. Is this the first instance of a proper consideration for the feelings of the people, whose interests are involved in the acts of the Council? If so, we congratulate ourselves on the advent of Sir James Outram, and on the new-born liberality of the Council. We shall only remark at present that the lively interest excited appears to be for the natives, but we cannot doubt that a consideration that has now been shown for them cannot in future be refused to Englishmen.

The questions of oaths and affirmations is one of great importance; at present the law and practice in the Mofussil is to swear Christians on the Bible, but the Hindoos and Mohammedans are only required to repeat an affirmation that they will "tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth." At the Presidency, in the Supreme Court the Hindoo takes his oath on the Ganges water, and the Mohammedan on the Koran. Besides the objection to this inconsistency there is no doubt that the "affirmation" practice is a failure in the Mofussil. A late well-known Judge of the Sudder of Agra has long ago shown the absurdity of the practice in a very amusing paper. The old woman witness endeavouring to repeat the Arabic and Persian words tendered to her in the affirmation, the cross purposes of the official and the witnesses; the villager when told to say that he was to speak the truth, and nothing but the truth, assuring the magistrate he was never known to speak anything but the truth, whilst the gibberish of the Court Oordoo was mainly unintelligible to him; often ended in scenes which convulsed the court with laughter, but more frequently exhausted its patience. Few natives understood the nature of the formula of the affirmation or the procedure, it was altogether so opposed to their habits and customs that as a solemn ceremony it was a melancholy failure.

The true difficulty with the native people is to find a form of oath, or an oath sufficiently sacred which shall have weight with them. The Mohammedan conscience holds the Koran sacred, quite as much as the Christian holds the Bible, but unfortunately he easily satisfies himself that no oaths are binding on his conscience taken in a court over which Christians or infidels preside. The Moslem law never for a moment contemplated that the faithful were ever to be subject to an infidel power. In the Koran the rules for treating infidels are clearly laid down, the infidels are to be destroyed, sent to hell, have the ends of their fingers cut off, and such like; but there is no provision for the conduct of Moslems subject to infidels. The casuistry of the Mohammedan is not slow in taking advantage of this circumstance. Oaths and affirmations made in the English Courts by them, therefore, are of equal value, and are binding on their conscience alike, that is to say, there is no sanctity in them at all, and the Moslem has no difficulty in regarding them.

With the Hindoo the case is still more difficult. They have texts or anything and everything they please. The Ganges river is holy for a limited period of time, and whilst it is so the water is hallowed, and oaths sworn by it ought to be sacred; but it is not so, and the oath is anything but the serious affair Hindoos try to make us believe it is; a large majority of them look upon it with indifference. Many castes and tribes have a special oath of their own, which is held sacred, and care for none other. They sometimes change it. Some keep their oath as profound a secret as the Masons do their mysteries. Some swear only by the Pind Mahadeo; some by the Toolsee. Some care for no oath but one taken on their son's head, devoting their sons to the infernal gods if they speak falsely. These care for no other oath, and refuse to take the one they hold sacred except at the last extremity.

How is it possible, then, to frame an oath which will be of any value amongst the natives of India? It is quite impracticable, and we look upon the proposal of reintroducing the old form of oaths and practice of swearing as a retrograde step. For if we were even fortunate enough to discover an effective form of oath, one which would now be binding on the conscience of the swearers, the use and wont of the courts, the friction of daily trial would soon wear away all its sacredness. As the oaths taken in the customs' houses in England became a mere idle form, so would any oath become in India.

Sir James Outram, we observe, made his suggestion entirely in the interest of the natives, and as their feelings are to be consulted, there is another serious argument against seeking for a very terrible oath. Hindoos taking any oath by their gods believe that they are, under any circumstances, whether they speak truth or not, condemning the souls of so many generations of their ancestors to additional terms of punishment. If they are not quite certain on this point it forms an admirable excuse for refusing to take oaths, and for refusing to submit to the tribunals of the country; a thing they do, not in the loud manner of the English, but in a mode peculiar to themselves and more effective; a question for Dr. Russell's consideration.

It is of course a matter of indifference how Englishmen are treated by their legislators—their feelings! who cares for them? but the prejudices of the natives, it is politic to respect, and one very serious prejudice with them is the objection to swear, particularly men of rank or wealth. As for the vulgar, the legislators have carte blanche and may do unto them as seems to them right.

The rebel chief in Rohileund proclaimed to the world the greatest grievance the people suffered under the English Government, viz., that we allowed the chumar or low caste to drag the gentleman into court, where we were tyrants enough to make all equal before the law. The Council, therefore, must give great weight to this objection; neither oath nor affirmative then will do, we believe the best thing is to abolish both, and accept the wise suggestion of Her Majesty's Commissioners; make falsehood liable to punishment as proposed by Mr. LeGeyt; let the witness be carefully warned that evidence given solemnly in a court, if discovered to be false, renders him subject to pains and penalties.

If these threats are carried out with sufficient energy, the guilty at once made to feel that the Courts are not to be trifled with, the fear which will be instilled will be a far more effective check on falsehood and perjury, than the fear of conscience for breaking the sacredness of an oath.

The difficulty of introducing this mode of procedure we know will be great, the proneness to falsehood of the people will so multiply cases that the Courts may be very uncertain how to deal with them; but this cannot be helped, they must do the best they can under the circumstances; for we fear there is no better course to be pursued than the one we venture to recommend.—Englishman, Dec. 8.

THE FRENCH IN COCHIN CHINA.

The French expedition against Cochin China does not apparently advance. After the capture of Tuaran the force entered the river Anam on 6th October, destroyed two or three forts with a slaughter of sixty of the enemy, and halted apparently for reinforcements. The native army is advancing over a range which separates the assailed territory from the capital, and the commander-in-chief has informed the French admiral that, unless he retires, his force will be exterminated. The enemy are said to display some courage, and the French, like all European troops when first employed in these deltas, are suffering severely from dysentery and fever. Fortunately for themselves, they have with them a small body of troops impervious to the climate. They have availed themselves of a resource which, during the mummies, was open also to ourselves, and borrowed troops from the Philippines. These men, sepoys in all save their courage and their Christianity, and commanded by acclimatised Spanish officers, are doing evidently the work of the expedition. The men, it is said, behave admirably, and one of their officers has already been recommended for the legion of honour. Another regiment and a battery has been asked and given, and as the service is popular, two or three thousand more may be readily obtained.

Pending the arrival of reinforcements, the inhabitants are compelled to work on the fortifications of Tuaran. These are said to be extensive, and the visible determination to form a permanent settlement introduces a new element into the affair. So long as the expedition was intended to throw open Cochin China, or to ensure an adequate retribution for the frightful cruelties committed on the Roman Catholic missionaries, it had our hearty sympathy. But the extension of French dominions in Cochin China, or even the foundation of a powerful French settlement, involves questions of the most grave importance. It is no light thing for England to lose that isolation, which has been so long one of the most valuable attributes of her Eastern Empire. Hitherto, from the day when Lally sailed to answer with his head for the crime of bestowing a kingdom on his countrymen, the British Empire in Asia has remained alone. It has had no enemy within ten thousand miles capable even of a menace. The French hold Pondicherry, it is true, but Pondicherry is no refuge for a fleet, and can supply no army. The Portuguese hold cities at Goa and at Macao, but in both places they exist by the sufferance of empires which can crush them without a stroke. The Dutch power in the Archipelago is real, but Holland cannot meet a European danger, and her policy has always been to grasp everything, and then yield back half, with a groan over the oppression practised on her weakness. The Spanish possess a point d'appui in the Philippines which an energetic race might make formidable, but the Spanish Colonies are buried in the trance which for three centuries has oppressed the mother country. No native power save China possesses a fleet, and the Chinese feebleness has been demonstrated too often for that vain race to disbelieve. No European power save England can send armies across half the world, and England from the victory of Plassey may be said to have been alone. The fleets of the maritime powers might pass and repass across her course, but from attack, from a real substantial danger, she has been exempt. The consequences have been most important both to her enterprise and her finance. She has had no need of a strong fleet, and has kept none. Bombay and Madras, richer than any maritime cities of Asia not belonging to Anglo-Saxons, have been left wholly undefended. Calcutta, it is true, is protected, and is probably the city on earth most impregnable to external attack, but it has been made safe by no device of man. Stations have been jotted down in Hong Kong, Singapore, Labuan, and Shanghai, without a thought of how they are to be defended in case of war. With the dominion of the seas, and India for her storehouse, the certainty of ultimate victory was too plain not to act as a check on Asiatic discontent or European envy. The case will be widely different should France succeed in building an empire, or even founding a settlement, in Anam. Hue and its river conveys the command of a delta as rich as Bengal. A fleet such as is only seen in European waters might refit there in absolute security. Stores, coals, men, and shelter would be all equally at hand, and the distance from her resources, the great defect of France in any Asiatic contest with Great Britain, would be abolished. In the event of a European war, we must either fortify Bombay, Singapore, and Hong Kong, as they have never yet been fortified, or keep up a great fleet in Asia to watch the mouth of the Anam.

France has a right if she will to avenge her subjects, or to spread her influence over those portions of Asia not yet obedient to the decrees of Europe; but as Englishmen we cannot regard her settlement in Cochin China as fraught with anything but expense and annoyance to the permanent interests of Great Britain.—Friend of India.

QUEEN OF OUDE'S PROCLAMATION.

The Begum of Oude has issued under her royal seal the following reply to the Proclamation of the British Government:—

"At this time certain weak-minded, foolish people have spread a report that the English have forgiven the faults and crimes of the people of Hindostan. This appears very astonishing, for it is the unvarying custom of the English never to forgive a fault, be it great or small, so much so that if a small offence be committed through ignorance or negligence they never forgive it.

"The Proclamation of the 1st of November, 1858, which has come before us is perfectly clear; and, as some foolish people, not understanding the real object of the Proclamation, have been carried away, therefore we, the ever abiding Government parents of the people of Oude, with great consideration, put forth the present Proclamation in order that the real object of the chief points may be exposed and our subjects be placed on their guard.

"1. It is written in the Proclamation that the country of Hindostan, which was held in trust by the Company, has been resumed by the Queen, and that for the future the Queen's laws shall be obeyed. This is not to be trusted by our religious subjects, for the laws of the Company, the settlement of the Company, the English servants of the Company, the Governor General, and the judicial administration of the Company, are all unchanged. What, then, is there new which can benefit the people, or on which they can rely?

"2. In the Proclamation it is written that all contracts and agreements entered into by the Company will be accepted by the Queen. Let the people carefully observe this artifice. The Company has seized on the whole of Hindostan, and, if this arrangement be accepted, what is there new in it? The Company professed to treat the Chief of Bhurtpore as a son, and then took his territory; the Chief of Lahore was carried off to London, and it has not fallen to his lot to return; the Nawab Shumshooddeen Khan on one side they hanged, and on the other side they took off their hats and salaamed to him; the Peishwah they expelled from Poonah Sitara, and imprisoned for life in Bithoor; their breach of faith with Sultan Tippoo is well known; the Rajah of Benares they imprisoned in Agra. Under pretence of administering the country of the Chief of Gwalior, they introduced English customs; they have left no name or traces of the Chiefs of Behar, Orissa, and Bengal; they gave the Raes of Farruckabad a small monthly allowance, and took his territory, Shahjehanpore, Bareilly, Azimgurh, Jounpore, Goruckpore, Etawah, Allahabad, Futehpore, &c. Our ancient possessions they took from us on pretence of distributing pay; and in the 7th article of the treaty they wrote on oath that they would take no more from us. If, then, the arrangements made by the Company are to be accepted, what is the difference between the former and the present state of things? These are old affairs; but recently, in defiance of treaties and oaths, and notwithstanding that they owed us millions of rupees, without reason and on the pretence of the misgovernment and discontent of our people, they took our country and property, worth millions of rupees. If our people were discontented with our royal predecessor, Wajid Ally Shah, how comes it they are content with us? And no ruler ever experienced such loyalty and devotion of life and goods as we have done! What, then, is wanting that they do not restore our country?

"Further, it is written in the Proclamation, that they want no increase of territory, but yet they cannot refrain from annexation. If the Queen has assumed the Government, why does her Majesty not restore our country to us when our people wish it? It is well known that no King or Queen ever punished a whole army and people for rebellion; all were forgiven, and the wise cannot approve of punishing the whole army and people of Hindostan, for, so long as the word 'punishment' remains, the disturbances will not be suppressed. There is a well-known proverb, 'A dying man is desperate' (Marta kua ne karta). It is impossible that a thousand should attack a million, and the thousand escape.

"3. In the Proclamation it is written, that the Christian religion is true, but no other creed will suffer oppression, and that the laws will be observed towards all. What has the administration of justice to do with the truth or falsehood of a religion? That religion is true which acknowledges one God and knows no other. Where there are three Gods in a religion neither Mussulmen nor Hindoos—may, not even Jews, Sun-worshippers, or Fire-worshippers can believe it true. To eat pigs and drink wine, to bite greased cartridges and to mix pig's fat with flour and sweetmeats, to destroy Hindoo and Mussulman temples on pretence of making roads, to build churches, to send clergymen into the streets and alleys to preach the Christian religion, to institute English schools, and pay people a monthly stipend for learning the English sciences, while the places of worship of Hindoos and Mussulmans are to this day entirely neglected; with all this, how can the people believe that religion will not be interfered with? The rebellion began with religion, and for it millions of men have been killed. Let not our subjects be deceived; thousands were deprived of their religion in the North West, and thousands were hanged rather than abandon their religion.

"4. It is written in the Proclamation that they who harboured rebels, or who were leaders of rebels, or who caused men to rebel, shall have their lives, but that punishment shall be awarded after deliberation, and that murderers and abettors of murderers shall have no mercy shown them, while all others shall be forgiven. Any foolish person can see that under this Proclamation no one, be he guilty or innocent, can escape. Everything is written, and yet nothing is written, but they have clearly written that they will not let off any one implicated; and in whatever village or estate the army may have halted, the inhabitants of that place cannot escape. We are deeply concerned for the condition of our people on reading this Proclamation, which palpably teems with enmity. We now issue a distinct order, and one that may be trusted—that all subjects who may have foolishly presented themselves as heads of villages to the English, shall, before the 1st of January next, present themselves in our camp. Without doubt their faults shall be forgiven them, and they shall be treated according to their merits. To believe in this Proclamation, it is only necessary to remember that Hindostani rulers are altogether kind and merciful. Thousands have seen this, millions have heard it. No one has ever seen in a dream that the English forgave an offence.

"5. In this Proclamation it is written that when peace is restored, public works, such as roads and canals, will be made in order to improve the condition of the people. It is worthy of a little reflection that they have promised no better employment for Hindostanees than making roads and digging canals. If people cannot see clearly what this means, there is no help for them. Let no subject be deceived by the Proclamation.

"(A true translation.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE MR. TODD.—The Government has granted a monthly pension of Rs. 32 to the widow, and Rs. 16 to each child of the late Mr. C. Todd, the assistant in charge of the telegraph office of Delhi, who was murdered by the mutineers on the night of the 11th May, 1857, while engaged in attempting to restore communication between Delhi and Meerut. The pensions to commence from the date of Mr. Todd's demise.

ANECDOTE OF RUNJEET SINGH—A RELIQUE.—Of all the anecdotes which have currency among the natives concerning Maharaja Runjeet Singh, there is perhaps none more characteristic of his remarkable tact for government than the following, for the insertion of which, we are sure, no apology is needed:—The Sikh Sirdars and soldiery having overcome all opposition in the Punjab, longed for foreign conquests. They had been uniformly successful. The hardy Afghans of the north, who had for centuries marched in triumph to the walls of Delhi, were met and effectually routed. The brave Goorkhas, too, had succumbed to the impetuous career of the newly-created warriors. Within the Punjab none dared to face the Sikh; without, except east of the Sutlej, the prestige of the Sikh was felt and acknowledged. The people of the N. W. Provinces too fondly believed in their invincibility, and already calculated on the overthrow of the hated English through their means. The elated Sikhs longed for an opportunity to measure their strength with the "Feringee." None, they said, remained to oppose their victorious career but the English. Should that barrier for ever check the followers of the Gooroo? The army was impatient; but the iron grasp of the great Runjeet restrained it. Without his permission that army, which, a few years after, recognised no law but its own will, dared not act. A deputation of the chief Sikh Sirdars and leaders waited on the Maharaja, and made known the disposition of the army. Runjeet understood his own interests and the interests of his nation better than to adopt the foolhardy course suggested to him. Yet the Sirdars and the army were not in a mood to be trifled with. What commands and threats could not have effected, was effected by a simple stratagem. Runjeet informed the Sirdars that he had no objection to the course, but that it could not be adopted unless the necessary means for prosecuting a campaign were placed at his disposal. Al-lard, a referee in all military affairs, was called upon to estimate the probable cost of making a conquest of Hindoostan, and driving the English into the sea. The wily Frenchman, to whom the Maharaja's sentiments had been secretly made known, after some intentional delay, stated an amount far beyond the capability of the State exchequer to supply. Runjeet called a meeting of the Sirdars, explained to them the available means, and requested them to make up the deficiency from their private resources. But time had been allowed for reflection. The ardour for foreign conquest had abated. The Sirdars withdrew with abject expressions of their inability. The love of gold predominated, and the freedom of the Sikhs was spared for a time.—Lahore Chronicle.

EMBARKATION OF THE GREAT MOGUL.—On Saturday, the 4th December, at ten in the morning, the ex-King of Delhi, conveyed in the Soorma flat in tow of the Koyle steamer, was taken on board H.M.'s good ship-of-war the Megara, which, for a vessel of the Royal navy, presented a curious spectacle at the time, crowded as her main deck was with household furniture, live and lifeless stock in the shape of cattle, goats, rabbits, poultry, rice, peas, chattus innumerable, &c., &c., brought by the Royal prisoner and his attendants for their consumption and comfort. The flat was lugged alongside the gangway of the ship, so that the Delhi gentleman could step on board. Lieut. Ommaany of the 59th, who has had charge of him ever since he was taken, conducted him to this probably the last conveyance that will ever again serve him in his peregrinations. He had two wives with him, so impenetrably veiled that they were led below by guides. He looked utterly broken up, and in his dotage; but not a bad type of Eastern face and manner, something king-like about his deeply furrowed countenance,—and lots of robes and cachemires. He was quite self-possessed, and was heard to ask some of the officers what their respective positions were on board, &c. A son and a grandson are with him; and their very first care on touching the deck with their feet was, to ask for cheroots: took things easily in short. The ex-King, meanwhile, went below, and was said to have stretched himself forth with upon a couch of pillows and cushions, which his folk had arranged for him in a twinkling. The whole operation of transferring him and his from the flat was quickly effected, and then the guard of the 84th Regiment returned to Calcutta, while the Megara steamed away down the Hooghly for its destination.—Hurkaru.

EXTRA COMMISSIONER FOR THE PUNJAB.—Owing to the excess of work devolving on the Commissioner of Lahore, the Court of Directors, in one of their last despatches, authorised an extra Commissioner for the province. He is, we understand, to be at Sealkote, and Mr. Cust will probably be the nominee. The salary is Rs. 2,750.

KISSORY CHAND MITTRA.—We understand that in reply to an application submitted by the late native magistrate of Calcutta to the Bengal Government, praying for a reconsideration of the proceedings which resulted on his dismissal from office, on the ground that the evidence of Lieut. Milligan would set up that of Mr. Weskin, which the commissioners had chosen to disbelieve, the Lieut. Governor has stated that he "does not see in this any sufficient reason for reopening the commission, or for altering the order which his honour has already passed on the case."

WIDOW MARRIAGES.—The following is from a Burdwan letter:—"Mr. Elliott the commissioner, I understand, has reported to Government no less than nine widow marriages including two Brahmines in the one Thanna of Chunderkonah. The average age of the girls when first married was only five years, when left widows seven years, and when re-married ten years. Of these nine widows two are of Brahmin, four of Asin Tantee, one of Sutgoe, and two of Teeb castes. Of all these, one, a respectable Brahmin family, and the rest, although of the low castes, hold pretty good positions in the community of the neighbourhood of Chunderkonah. The fathers of the widows personally gave their daughters in marriage according to the Hindoo custom. All these marriages were celebrated with great publicity and with the entire consent of the nearest relatives of the parties. At the commencement, the principal residents of the villages where the marriages were performed, were averse to the measure, and bent upon creating a disturbance and carrying away the brides by force, with a view thereby to put a stop to all such attempts; but the fathers of the intended brides and the intended bridegrooms, in three cases, presented petitions to the Deputy Magistrate of Jehanabad, stating that they apprehended violence from some of the villagers, and begging that the police may be instructed to give them protection and prevent their opponents from molesting them. The Deputy Magistrate accordingly directed the police to be very careful that no breach of the peace took place, and that no one improperly interfered with the parties in the voluntary performance of the marriages. In five cases the parties did not consider it necessary to come to the Deputy Magistrate, but merely gave an Ezhar before the police, and under their protection performed the ceremony without any one disturbing them. By the time these eight marriages were celebrated, the people appear to have become so much reconciled to this innovation that the last marriage was performed by the parties themselves without the aid of the police. I further understand that the guardians of a very large number of respectable Hindoo widows of the neighbourhood of Chanderkonah are exceedingly anxious to have them re-married, and are only waiting for the month of Augrahan to celebrate the same."—Englishman.

THE MILITARY PROFESSION IN INDIA.—The following is from a correspondent of the Calcutta Phoenix:—"The assertion so often made that officers are better off in India than in any other part of the world, induces people to take that for granted which will not admit of demonstration. The liberality of Indian allowances may be boasted by those who have an interest in buffing, but the officer who has had an opportunity of judging between the Queen and Company, very soon discovered that, all said and done, Cawnpore and Meerut are not Canterbury and York. Few officers can save out of mere regimental pay and allowances before they attain the rank of major; a rank that, under existing circumstances, can scarcely be looked forward to without a long servitude—a very long apprenticeship. The struggle with pecuniary difficulties bears heavy, in an Indian climate, not only on the temper but the health of the sufferer; and though youth and high spirit may think lightly of them for a time, there is a certain limit, beyond which their pressure is felt with extreme severity, and the accumulation of misery tends to wrest the prize from his hands, at the very moment when almost within his grasp. The subaltern, who has passed the best part of his life in India, loses all confidence in the glittering prospect which the "prizes of the lottery of the army," so ostentatiously held out, are said to afford, and the utmost stretch of his hope fails to offer an opening by which he can hope to escape from privation. The pay of an ensign in the late Company's service is the very smallest upon which he can possibly maintain himself, and it is to be hoped the present Government will take this matter into consideration."

THE PROCLAMATION.—Khureetas have been sent by the Governor General to the Ameer of Cabul, and the chiefs of Kokhan and Kiva, announcing the direct assumption by her Majesty of the government of India.

THE SUDDER COURT.—The Hurkaru has been given to understand that the Government of India have written to the Bengal Government, desiring it to devise some method whereby the Sudder Court may be relieved of some of the less important of its work, so as to allow the judges to bring up the arrears of the court. We have not yet heard how the Bengal Government intends to act in this matter.

AN UNPLEASANT RUMOUR.—A letter from Allahabad, dated the 8th Dec., reports a serious disturbance amongst the European troops at Lucknow. The details of this rumour, however, prevent us giving implicit credence to it, and we give an abridgment of it to our readers, warning them that though it is one of those stories which has so much probability in it that we do not think we should keep it back, still it requires corroboration. "A European soldier is said to have been sentenced to a severe punishment for killing a native, and when the authorities proceeded to execute it, first the European artillery, and then the infantry interfered to prevent it. Insubordination (nay, mutiny is the word for it) arising out of the policy of the Government is what is stated to have occurred." We should not be at all surprised at such a consequence, but trust, notwithstanding, that the tale is only one more of those malicious rumours the natives so delight in disseminating for the purpose of bringing our Government into contempt.—Englishman.

HEAD QUARTERS, CAMP WEST FYZABAD, 11th Dec.—We left Lucknow with Lord Clyde last Sunday, and marched from thence to Nawabgunge, Fyzabad road. Hearing that Beni Madho with some 10,000 followers were on this side of the Gogra, we made a forced march to Byram ghaut, but, taking into consideration the splendid army Lord Clyde had with him, it could not be expected that the rebels could make a stand. Accordingly we arrived there only to see them all safe and sound on the other side of the river. They fired a few shots at us with their matchlocks, but the river was too wide for them to have any effect. However, a few of the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade did a little work, and dispersed one or two parties of them who had congregated on the bank. Our heavy guns did not open on them at all. Here we halted for one day, and having left Colonel Purnell's Brigade behind to watch the ghaut (consisting of Colonel Mead's guns, the 23rd, 90th, 5th Punjab infantry, and 5th police infantry), we marched with the Chief and with Brigadier Horsford's Brigade to Fyzabad. Our force consisted of several guns, the 20th, 2nd battalion rifle brigade, Belooch battalion, 11th Oude police infantry, part of 7th hussars, 6th carabineers, Madras cavalry, Oude police cavalry, altogether about 5000 or 6000 effective men. The distance from Byram ghaut to Fyzabad is about 65 or 70 miles, and this we accomplished in three marches. We arrived within a mile of Fyzabad last night, and go across the bridge of boats in detachments to-day. I expect that we shall march again to-morrow, and I believe that it is the Chief's intention to go along the banks of the river, and attack Beni Madho (that is to say, if he does not run away), at Byram ghaut, where he crossed the Gogra the other day. General Grant has already crossed, and we are—after attacking Beni Madho—to make a combined movement with his and other brigades, on the Begum's force at "Boondee," about thirty miles from the river. At least, so goes camp talk. All is tolerably quiet on this side of the Gogra, and not much ground is left on the other side for us to conquer. Lord Clyde, we hear, thinks that all will be quiet in Oude in two months hence. I hope it may, as we are all sick and tired of running madly about the country. There must either be a tremendous slaughter, or else a complete surrender, before another month is over, as we commence to-day to take possession of the rebels' last hope, the Trans Gogra portion of Oude. All ghauts and large towns are well guarded, and I don't see how they are to escape, except Nepal affords them shelter.—Delhi Gazette.

JACKLOON, Nov. 28.—The force under the command of Brigadier Colonel Liddell left Lullutpore yesterday, at 3 A.M., and marched to a place called Jackloon, where there were supposed to be about 1,000 rebel Sepoys and matchlockmen of Tania Topee's force. We arrived at the village about 8 A.M. They fired a few rounds, and then played us the old game, making their escape. The gallant 3rd Bombay Europeans were close after them, charged the village in fine style, and killed from forty to fifty mostly all Sepoys, well armed with firelock, bayonet, swords, and pistols. A very high and long hill of dense jungle at the back of the village afforded a very fine shelter for them, for our men could not see them until they came upon them. A great many of the enemy commenced to escape before we got near the village, had they held out, it would have given our infantry some hard work to have driven them out. One man of the 3rd Bombay Europeans was killed: having come across eight or nine of the enemy hidden away in the jungle, the poor fellow looking round saw he was by himself, he charged them, and I heard killed two of them, though he was shot in three or four different places, and had several spear wounds. Some of his own men coming up at the moment, were just in time to save him from getting cut to pieces. Colonel Partridge, of the 24th N. I., shot one of them, as they were making their escape, and one of his own men shot two, so I think they have not much to brag about the three who got away. Captain Forest, of the 3rd Bombay Europeans, led his men up the hill in gallant style, and killed about thirty. The 24th N. I. made some very good shots, and were up the hill almost as soon as the 3rd Europeans, who speak very highly of the manner in which the N. I. performed their duties. Captain Lightfoot, with his two guns, made some very good practice at the rebels as they ascended the hill, firing over our infantry, but the jungle being so thick, the shot and shell were not of much use. The cavalry covered the guns, but the ground in all parts was so bad, all they could do was to look on, which was a great disappointment to them. The rebels are completely beaten out, and have scarcely any ammunition.—Delhi Gazette.

SHAHABAD DISTRICT.—The last news from the Soane is, that the rebels have all left the hills, and are scattered about the Shahabad district, but in small parties, and chiefly without arms. They are very much disheartened; and it is supposed that when the amnesty proclamation reaches them, they will only be too glad to accept it. They had not received it up to the 28th Nov. A number of prisoners had been taken, all suffering intensely from jungle fever, which they say is very prevalent in the rebel force; this they contracted in the hills, and many will die of it. Brigadier Douglas made a very splendid "bag" on the night of the 26th Nov., he surprised a party of 230 rebels, and killed 40 sepoy, took 116 stand of arms, 200 tulwars, and 66 sets of accoutrements, and lots of ammunition; amongst the arms were found seven Enfield rifles. The Brigade has gone to Jehanabad to find out the whereabouts of the enemy. Report says that they are doubling back to the hills. It is to be hoped this is the case, as they will most assuredly be hemmed in, and if they again escape it will be a wonder.

MASONIC LODGE.—For the first time a Masonic Lodge has been opened in the Punjab. It is to be called the "Hope and Perseverance."

BRIGADIER TROUP'S COLUMN.—We last met the rebels at Biswah on the 1st Dec., where Ismael Khan commanded them. The artillery and cavalry were only engaged, but they, the rebels, made very little of a stand and fled. On the right, where the largest body was, infantry with guns, as well as cavalry, the latter numbering some 800, made a flank movement, and charged Cureton's Mooltanee, or rather that portion of his regiment with the column, and he charged front to the right, and went at them, driving them back, with the loss of twenty-five killed, two of them Syuds of high degree, and a good many, probably double the number, wounded; he could not, however, unsupported, carry off the guns which their gunners had deserted, on account of the close proximity of the infantry. The light guns were in the front beyond the topos, one of the Syuds, Peer Jee, was the head priest of the rebels. Brigadier Barker with his column joined us on the 3rd, and the following day Ismael Khan came in and gave himself up, with about 100 followers. Some more have since sent in to say they will follow suit. Ismael Khan was sent to Brigadier Barker's camp, where we suppose he is still. Feroze Shah has gone round to our left, and was said to be endeavouring to get across the Gauges to join Tania Topee.

SHAHGURH.—Mr. Thornton, Assistant Superintendent of Shahgurb, writes in from Murowa, that he sent out a native Government official to read H. M.'s Proclamation to four leaders of rebels in the Shahgurb territory; the said leaders caused the native official to be most brutally murdered, killed one of the burkundazes accompanying him, and wounded two others. In consequence of this information a detachment consisting of 2 foot artillery guns and 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. mortars, about 1 company 3rd M. B. Regt. Head Quarters, and 200 50th M. N. I., and 35 men of the 3rd Irregular Cavalry, marched out this morning, carrying with them 30 days' provisions, for the purpose of taking some forts and to capture the rebel leaders, if possible; but in this jungly country the attempt will be as fruitless as putting salt on a bird's tail. All else quiet.

LUCKNOW, 9th Dec.—On Sunday morning the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief marched from Lucknow towards Byramghat. His intention, it is said, is to cross the Gogra at a very early date, and to enter the district, which is yet swarming with rebels. I have not yet heard of the camp having reached Byramghat, but I dare say it has, as the distance from Lucknow is only forty-two miles. A small force was detached from the main body to attack the fort of Numreah, in which Dirgobjee Singh was holding out with a few hundred of his followers. On the appearance of our troops the rebels as usual deserted the fortress, and took to the jungles. Major Barrow has again accompanied the army as the chief civil officer; but as soon as the Byraitch division is completely in our possession, he will leave for Seetapore, to take charge of the commissionership of that division. In the meanwhile Mr. Forbes will officiate for him. Civil Government has now been restored more or less in all the districts of that division. Mr. Kavanagh has been sent as assistant commissioner to Seetapore. Feroze Shah and some other rebel chiefs, who have for some time been hid from view, have within the last week brought themselves into notice by a very daring march through the Mullaon district. It appears that these scoundrels, since the occupation of that district by our forces, had taken refuge in the jungles of Seetapore, and finding their retreat into Byraitch cut off by the Shah-jehanpore and Furruckabad columns, made up their minds to escape across the Ganges; and with this view Feroze Shah, with about 300 sowars, well mounted and equipped, 1 elephant and 1 gun, made a rapid march towards Kanouj, and crossed the Ganges without any obstruction. On their way they passed close to Sundeela, and captured the Kotwal of that town, but fortunately while they were crossing the river this poor fellow made his escape. This occurrence took place on the 6th instant. It is not known what direction the rebels have taken; but as the country between Mynpoorie and Cawnpore is without troops, they might possibly do a great deal of harm if they are allowed to remain long in that neighbourhood. On Saturday morning it is the intention of the Chief Commissioner to liberate all the prisoners in the Lucknow jail, who are undergoing imprisonment for rebellion and mutiny. They are all to be assembled and told that under the terms of the Royal Proclamation their offences have been pardoned, and that they are at liberty to go to their homes, and become peaceful subjects—one rupee is to be given to each prisoner. The number of prisoners who will be liberated is, I hear, about 150. The Chief Commissioner has, I hear, issued a circular withdrawing the powers vested in officers under the Special Acts, as there exists no further necessity to try persons under those Acts. I forgot to mention that the Gonda district is now in our possession. General Sir Hope Grant, who took command of the Goruckpore Field Force, entered the district last week, defeated Deenee Buskh, the Gonda Rajah, took all his guns, and established himself at the head-quarters of the district. Captain Ross has probably reached Gonda by this time, to take charge of the civil government of the district.—Delhi Gazette.

BAITOOL, Nov. 21.—The Nawab of Banda left the rebels on the 14th; they were marching from Danjeepoor in Kalabheet on that morning, and he refused to accompany them. Tania and the Rao came and tried to persuade him, but he said they might kill him, but he would not go. They at length left him, and he, with several female members of his family and attendants, numbering some hundred souls, made his way to the borders of the Baitool district, and addressed a letter to Mr. MacGeorge, the officiating magistrate, saying that he had come in on his invitation, and on the promise contained in her Majesty's Proclamation (a copy of which had been forwarded to him). The Deputy Commissioner being in General Michel's camp, directed him to present himself there, which he did, and now accompanies the General. The rebels show some intention of getting into the Satpoora Hills. They are supposed to have crossed to Tapti above Boorhanpoor, en route to Piplode. General Michel with his fine and willing force is at Rebetgaon, on the road to Charwa, ready to pounce upon the enemy, should he turn, or to follow him at his own pace, heading him even in that. Troops from all quarters, Aungabad, Malligaum, Ellichpoor, Charwa, &c., are closing in upon Tania, and he will soon be "up a tree." Plenty of loot for the lucky column that succeeds in coming across him. Every man in the rebel force having wealth in the convenient shape of gold-mohurs and rupees. I sent a translation of the Proclamation issued at Mooltye, in the Baitool district, and extensively disseminated. Also of a Purwannah addressed to C.O.

"Proclamation of Maharajah Rao Sahib Pishwa Bahadur.—Let it be known to all people, to the gentry, the merchants, the shop-keepers, and the military of every city, town and village, that the army bearing the standard of victory, accompanying His Highness the head of Government, has marched in this direction only for the destruction of the infidel Christians, not for the spoliation of the resident inhabitants. Let every one know this, that this army, buoyed on the waves of victory, is at enmity with the English, not with the native cultivators of the soil. It has never been the intention of any one in this force to cause loss to the villagers and residents of the country through which we pass, but it is evident that daily supplies must be had, more especially when an enemy is in our front; some villages have been looted, through the folly of the inhabitants in leaving their homes. Then, not being able to purchase, my followers have taken what was necessary for their sustenance. If the villagers remained in their houses, and sold their grain, &c., then no outrage nor robbery would take place. They have reaped the reward of their own foolishness. Now this proclamation is put forth, that no villager should leave his home on the approach of this army, but producing the supplies there may be, receive the fair price of the same. Beyond the current rate a price shall be fixed. When this proclamation reaches any village, the head man thereof should send a copy of it to the adjacent villages, that fear may be dispelled. Dated 7th November, 1858. 30th Rubbee-ool-aval. Perwanna addressed to the officers of artillery, the 5th Regiment, the cavalry of the Nawab of Kamouna, the forces, horse and foot, of the Bengal Presidency, the Morar and Gwalior forces, and the troops of the Nawab of Jaora. As it is the custom of sowars and sipahes of this force constantly to press women to carry loads, and this practice is undesirable, this is to warn such, and you are requested to intimate it publicly to the troops under your command, that women are not to be forced to accompany the camp, either as porters or for any other purpose. Any one disobeying this order will be hanged. Officers are requested to affix their signatures as noting the receipt of this order. Dated, 5th November, 1858, 25th Rubbee-ool-aval." Several signatures are affixed.—Mofussile.

MAJOR SUTHERLAND'S VICTORY.—On the night of the 24th November Major Sutherland's little band, consisting of Captain Newall's Company of the 92nd and Captain Langston's Company of the 4th Rifles, arrived at Julwani, and were joined next morning by fifty of 71st Highlanders, and Barras's Brigade of 150 riding camels, and Captain Helbert and his escort of sowars. Soon after their arrival reports were brought in that the enemy under Tania Topee were encamped at Thann, six miles off on the Mhow road. Towards the evening these reports were confirmed by Lieutenant Barris, who went out to reconnoitre. At 4 o'clock on the morning of the 25th our little force marched off in silence, with our gallant Major at our head, to attack the enemy's position. On arriving at Thann we found the village burnt and deserted. We discovered that the enemy had moved on towards Rajpore, six miles distant, so our gallant commander, who was in no humour to be trifled with, sounded the advance, and led us at a rapid pace towards that place. From a slight height near Rajpore we perceived the enemy streaming out of the town, and going in the direction of Burwance. Major Sutherland sounded the halt, to allow the men to refresh themselves, and also to give the enemy time to get clear of the town, as, had they remained there, we could scarcely hope, without guns, to retake it. The camels were now equally distributed between the Rifles and Highlanders, and soon commenced as hard a day's work as was possible to be done. We pursued three miles (the Highlanders occasionally firing from their camels, and the sowars coming out very strong against unarmed stragglers) at a great pace, when the enemy, chiefly cavalry, took up a position about 300 yards in our front. Our men were instantly dismounted, and formed into column of sub-divisions, with one sub division as skirmishers to protect our flanks. The enemy, after exchanging a few shots with us, retired in good order, closely pursued again by our force for two miles, when they again formed up, and took up a very strong position on a height open all round them for about sixty yards. We reserved our fire till within seventy yards of them, the road being very narrow with thick jungle on either side, and to our surprise they opened two guns on us, which we were ignorant they had with them. They fired six or seven rounds of grape and round shot at us, each round with greater precision, and seemed determined to stand, notwithstanding the good practice which our fellows made with their Enfields. Their practice by this time improved conderably so Major Sutherland gave the order to charge, which we were all only too eager to obey, and with three ringing cheers we dashed up the hill, and took their two guns at the bayonet's point, entirely routing them. It was during the charge that Lieutenant and Adjutant Humfrey fell fighting with immense pluck with a huge sowar, who was ultimately bagged. The pursuit again commenced, and was carried on for two miles, by which time we were all pretty well pumped. We were then ordered to retrace our steps to Rajpore. I must not omit to mention that each time the enemy formed up Holkar's sowars were to be seen a long distance in our rear, no doubt with the intention of defending to the last that face of our column should any unknown enemy have shown themselves, and when Lieut. Helbert gave the word to the said sowars to charge, their Commandant Bhemgir, and two or three Sikhs, were the only followers he could muster. Captain Ballard, C.B., Bombay Engineers, and Assistant Quarter Master General, were to be seen everywhere in the thickest of the mêlée, and to Lieut. B. Rras, who has his camel corps in tip-top order, too much praise cannot be given. Our loss was one man (71st) wounded, and one missing, and Lieut. Humfrey severely wounded, while the enemy's loss could not have been under 80 killed, and as many more wounded. Their force was about 3000 strong, and as, next day on the banks of the Nerbudda at Chiculda, we had a beautiful view of them, I can safely say that so far from being much harassed, their horses seemed to be in most excellent condition, and nearly every man had a spare charger with him. I should not have taken it on myself to write an account of the battle of Rajpore, had I not observed such gross mis-statements as to the facts, and credit bestowed where no credit was due; your contemporary having attributed the defeat of rebels to Lieut. Helbert and his gallant escort, instead of the 130 Europeans and seventy Bombay Rifles, who in truth did the whole work that was done. The following is a copy of the order issued by Major Sutherland to the troops after the action of Rajpore:—"Camp Rajpore, 25th Nov.—Major Sutherland, in conveying his best thanks to the troops for their perseverance during the long and tedious march of to-day, as also for their gallant conduct throughout the operations, hopes that an early opportunity may be afforded them of confronting the rebels, with similar results to those which he has now the gratification of recording. By order, (Signed) F. Montreux, Lieut. Staff Officer.

NANA RAO.—The Nana is at a place called Churdah, which may be found on the map of Oude, about 30 miles north of Byraitch, and not far from the Surjoo nuddee. He has with him about 1,500 men, among whom some sepoys and the rest matchlockmen. The Baces (Bajee Rao's widows), whom the Nana took away with him, have sent in a messenger, praying that some provision may be made for them by Government when they are able to effect their escape. These ladies had, at one time, heavy litigation with the Nana in the Cawnpore civil courts, relative to the succession to Bajee Rao's property. They were not successful in their suit. The same messenger appeals to Government on behalf of the Nana for protection to his women and children. The Nana declares that he is innocent of the foul massacre of our women and children, but is aware that there is no hope for himself, as he reads our English papers. The English papers were sent to him from Futtehghurh, taken from some gentleman who cast them aside after perusal, and sold by a servant.—Delhi Gazette.

GWALIOR, November 27.—Tantia Toppee, on the 17th, plundered Candoh. He also plundered the house of the tehseeldar; and, on the 18th, he was at Achrowlee, and it is said to be his intention to come into the territory of Holkar. On the 25th of November (Thursday), we had grand doings on account of the Queen's proclamation. The Maharajah and the Dewan gave grand nautes, and the whole Lushkur was illuminated by order of the durbar. No Dewalee ever presented such a grand illumination. At seven in the evening the Maharajah, accompanied by the Dewan and other Sirdars, arrived at Phool Bagh, where a grand feast had been prepared for the officers and gentlemen. About forty were present on the occasion; fireworks and dancing succeeded the feast, and illuminations were kept up the whole night. It has been discovered that some persons in Gwalior had been keeping up a communication with Tantia Toppee. Dewan Dinker Rao, by order of the Maharajah, has arrested 675 persons, who are supposed to be in the conspiracy. A court is to be immediately summoned to inquire into the matter, presided over by Bulwant Rao, Baba and Pandit Hurnath, when those proved guilty will be severely punished.—Mofussilite.

JUBBULPORE, Dec. 3.—Letters from Jubbulpore state that the rebels, who had left Tantia and the Banda Nawab, are returning in large numbers from the Deccan, and are in the neighbourhood of the place. It is imagined that they are not intending to surrender, and their destination is not known. The Shahgurrh rebels, instead of submitting to the terms of the proclamation, have been very troublesome and insolent, and at last cruelly murdered Mr Thornton's chief official. The brigadier has ordered out a detachment of all arms to attack them at Patna, to which place they have returned. There are various bodies of these rebels, and Lieutenant Dickins, with his new police, is watching on the frontier to get a dash at one party under Jeswant Sing. The proclamation seems to have made these fellows active. The sick families of officers and others have at last got an escort to Banda from General Whitlock. They start in a week to the number of thirty-seven, I believe. The 31st N.I. will be relieved positively this season by a Madras regiment.—Delhi Gazette.

CASHMERE.—We (Punjabee) learned late last night, Dec. 12, that a serious affair happened in the Maharajah Rundbeer Sing's territories, about a month since, in a village about twenty miles from Jummoo, in which an officer of the General Trigonometrical Survey, Lieut. H. H. Godwin Austen, nearly lost his life. It appears, from what we have heard, that the above-named officer went into a village on his way back to camp in the evening, and asked for a guide of the headman: without any provocation he was abused and called a Kafir; and the villagers assembling, attacked him. Lieut. Austen drew his sword, when they ran off; but having reassembled in greater numbers they followed him out of the village, and again attacked him. He was knocked down by a blow from a lutee on the head, beaten severely, and left lying senseless on the ground. The matter has gone before the Chief Commissioner, but as yet the villagers have received no punishment due for their cowardly and brutal assault. In the village, we believe, were some Poorbunh-sepoys (mutineers), who very likely incited the villagers to commit this outrage. Why do the authorities still allow these men to find an asylum in those territories? From all accounts of this affair the conduct of the Maharajah was not as satisfactory as it might have been or expected. By his orders they pretended to burn the village, but which was afterwards discovered to be merely piles of brushwood fired for the purpose, and not an individual was taken until required at this place for examination.

DOINGS IN GORUCKPORE.—Our correspondent from Camp Doomreegunge, Zilla Goruckpore, dated November 27th, says:—"I told you in my last letter that we were to march for this place the next morning. Accordingly we left Bhanpore at four P.M. yesterday, and arrived within a short distance of Doomreegunge about eight o'clock, when we received intelligence of the enemy being in a tope of trees about three-quarters of a mile from our left. The Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry, under Major Richardson, and two guns of the Madras Artillery, under Captain Cadell, immediately crossed the plain, keeping the tope to our right, when the enemy opened a harmless fire of musketry upon the cavalry. Our guns soon sent them from their position, and we followed on, headed by the deserving and plucky Thannadar of Bedowlee, who, mounted on a pony, and knowing the country, showed us the way. All we could see were men in the distance, who kept up a desultory fire of musketry, the shots of which either fell short or went over our heads. The ground we crossed at a canter and sometimes at a gallop can hardly be imagined—so wet that the horses sunk to their knees in many places, with bunds or banks every ten or dozen yards, and here and there a deep wide ditch; the whole covered with standing crops of corn as high as our horses' bellies, so that all impediments were imperceptible till we came upon them. After pursuing the enemy for some miles we came to the river Rapter, which stayed all further progress. Here the enemy made a stand; they had a dense jungle near, and Dhal fields to protect them, and the river to aid their escape. Major Richardson despatched the 4th troop Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry under Lieut. Ellis, accompanied by Captain Gifford, which did excellent service, and afterwards sent the 3rd troop, under Lieut. de Hoxar, the whole of whom charged the enemy in admirable style. The head quarters of the Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry, accompanied by a portion of H. M.'s 13th Light Infantry and two guns, soon followed, and found many rebels swimming over the river and others hiding themselves in the Dhal fields. In crossing the river many were shot, and the cavalry either shot or cut down all they found in the field. In the Dhal fields the enemy have a great advantage over cavalry. The rebels sit on the ground with their fire-locks loaded and bayonets fixed, and as the Dhal stalks are bare of leaves towards the stem, they can see at a distance anyone approaching. Not so the rider, the bushy tops of the Dhal preclude the possibility of seeing any one concealed till you are upon them, and then follows the fatal steel or bullet. We were not long here before the enemy opened a 9-pounder gun upon us, from a bamboo jungle and fortified places across the river. Their shots (thanks to Providence) proved harmless, the balls whizzing through the air over our heads. Our two guns returned the fire till our ammunition was exhausted, when we slowly retired to our camp, at Doomreegunge, after being in the saddle eight or nine hours without any refreshment. The sepoys we slew were those of the pucca army, and most of them wore their original uniform. One had on his breast the Punjab medal, and several the brass plates of the Punjab regiments, and regiments of the line that mutinied. The abuse they coolly gave our men was astounding, and they fought like devils. An officer who has seen many a hard fight in India said he never saw men so difficult to kill. Now comes my painful task to record our casualties, which only occurred in the Bengal yeomanry cavalry, except one native, the plucky and loyal Thannadar of Bedowlee. Of the Bengal yeomanry cavalry we had—killed, Captain Arthur Gifford and trooper Curran, a descendant, I believe, of the old Irish family of that name. Wounded severely were Quartermaster sergeant Dias, and troopers Folier and M'Quilpin, besides several more slightly injured, whose names I do not mention. Of Captain Gifford, whose loss we all sincerely lament, I must say a few words. He was a lieutenant in the 16th Bombay N. I., and served with the Osmannli cavalry during the Crimean campaign. In August last he was appointed by the Right Hon. the Governor General, second in command of the Bengal Yeomanry Cavalry, (vice local Captain Chapman transferred to some Police Corps) and he held the local rank of captain. It was only to know him and the best feelings of our nature must follow him. He was a character rarely met with: sincerely pious, he adhered in the strictest sense to those commandments which lead us the way of salvation, while his kind, brave, generous disposition attracted strangers, and kindled to the highest degree that genial warmth of friendship the best attributes can inspire. It may be said, in few words, he was as brave as a lion, while he possessed the spirit of a dove: he was a bright ornament to the Christian religion, the tenets of which he upheld without intruding his sentiments on others; had his life been spared and opportunity been afforded, he would have been a second Havelock in his brave and virtuous deeds. This morning we performed the last respect we could show him and poor trooper Curran, both of whom fell in bravely charging the enemy, and who were consigned to one tomb. Her Majesty's 13th Light Infantry lent their hand to pour forth those solemn soul stirring strains which suggest to us another and a better world. The brigadier attended, as well as all the officers and men of our brigade of duty. It was a consolation to us, who mourn the loss of him who had won our hearts, to see so large an assembly, consisting of soldiers and sailors, all of whom, though many unacquainted with Captain Gifford's private character, admired his coolness and bravery in the field. The bravery and gallant bearing of the Bengal yeomanry cavalry has won the esteem of all its comrades, and it was never more conspicuously shown than on this occasion. Although we lament our losses the enemy must have suffered in a satisfactory ratio; the Bengal yeomanry cavalry alone must have killed at least fifty, to say nothing of the havoc our guns made under their cool and intrepid commander, Captain Cadell. Major Richardson led his gallant band of heroes with his usual skill; and such is the confidence placed in him, that the men would follow him to death's door if necessary. One more name I must mention, and that is Dr. Garden, in medical charge of the Bengal yeomanry cavalry; he was ever on the alert and often to the front, giving that timely aid which the battle field requires. We are now forming a bridge of boats across the Rapter, where the enemy are said to be in large numbers.—Mofussilite.

GOVERNMENT LIBERALITY.—The Calcutta Phoenix understands that Government has been pleased to grant a reward of Rupees 2,000, and a monthly allowance of Rupees 10, to one Rajah, a Punjabee, for his having brought information to the British camps as to the movements of the rebel force on several occasions. The Phoenix adds:—"We cannot but acknowledge the importance of encouraging spies like the one under notice, since it is an undisputed fact that the rebel sepoys do very seldom come in open fight with our troops, but have always remained concealed in jungles or hilly tracts, waiting for an opportunity to surprise the British troops while left unawares, or that they have often attempted to lead them astray into such places whence they have little chance to escape. On occasions like these the assistance of the spies has proved a blessing to the British troops, and it is therefore but just that they should be encouraged by every possible means of reward. The Hurkuru has heard that on a reference from the local authorities in Oude, the Supreme Government has granted a compensation, amounting to Rs. 8,000, to one of the begums of Lucknow who remained unflinchingly loyal to the British during the disturbances, for losses sustained by her owing to the destruction of the palace called the Siambul. The late lamented Sir Henry Lawrence had promised the begum to compensate her loss.

OUDE VICTIMS.—We do not give the following and account of the fate of some of our countrymen and women in Lucknow, and which we have received from an undoubted source, from any desire to perpetuate ill-will between the native and British races, but because it may prove of some satisfaction, though of a melancholy kind, to their friends to know with certainty the end of these victims. A party, consisting of Miss Jackson, Mrs. Greene, wife of Captain Greene, Mr. Calderah, Mr. Carew, of Shahjehanpore, and the step son of Sergeant-Major Norton, were sent into Lucknow by the Dhounair Raja, under an escort of men belonging to Hurrepohad, the Chuckledar of Khyrabad. On their arrival at Lucknow, a court, consisting principally of native officers, sat to decide upon the fate of the fugitives, the result of which was, the captives were to be suitably treated, housed, and cared for, and that refreshments in abundance in every available variety were to be provided for them, some alone excepted. After being located for a short while in the house of Munooes-ood-dowlah, they were removed to the Kaiser Bagh. A native officer, who had served under Captain Bunbury, and to whom he had reason to be grateful for many favours bestowed, by name Mookhum Bux, took apparently forcible charge of the prisoners, and a few days afterwards the ladies, some by the heels, others by the hair of their heads, were forcibly dragged to a nullah near the Tara Kotee, and were there most inhumanly butchered, under the superintendence of that fiend, their mangled remains being afterwards thrown into the river Goomtee. On the same occasion twenty-two Christians, in all, were murdered, but their names, we regret to say, have not been furnished by our informant. We are, for the sake of humanity, glad to add that five Mahomedans, who vehemently protested against the barbarous proceeding, were at the same time put to death with their Christian fellow-subjects by Mukhoom Bux, of whose capture we expect to hear shortly.—Bombay Gazette.

FEROZE SHAH.—A letter from the Trunk Road, below Mynpooree, says:—"A body of four or five thousand rebels, with one gun, headed by Feroze Shah, crossed over into the Doab. The Meerut mail of the 6th had been detained at Kanouj by order of the military authorities, and the shigram at Goorshaigunge. Nothing was known of the safety of the Calcutta mail. Certain travellers by the dawk gharee, who were proceeding to Cawnpore, returned at 2 o'clock, and intimated that a body of rebels having come across the Ganges had burnt and sacked the village of Daipore, which is situated two or three coos beyond Meeran-ke-Sera. The shigram in which were travelling two ladies and two children having returned to Goorshaigunge, they had been located in Thannah Dhoo. The roads had been completely closed. The escape of the rebels under Feroze Shah from Oude has produced a bad effect on the native mind. Fear exaggerates their numbers. They are said to be 9,000 strong, with guns, and to have burnt the tehsil and thanah at Bithour. People are already busy burying their valuables in the town of Cawnpore. The re-opening of the navigation probably facilitated Feroze Shah's passage of the river. He is said to have secured ten boats, and to have constructed a breastwork on the right bank with the cotton he found in them. These, however, are native reports."—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 11.

PURSUIT OF THE REBELS IN ETAWAH.—A letter from Mynpooree states that on Thursday all the available force at hand was ordered back to Mynpooree. The detached portion of H.M.'s 64th arrived from Allypore on Friday evening, and Alexander's horse on the morning of Saturday. The latter had not met with the rebels, who were believed to have all left the neighbourhood of Meeran-ke-Sera. They were to proceed on Saturday evening to join the force already on its way for the protection of Etawah. Mr. Hume received information that two hundred sepoy were making for the Jumna, and marched out to surprise them. This he did while they were at their dinner, and routed them with great gallantry. This was at a place called Hurchundpore, about thirty miles from Etawah. Mr. Hume's party remained masters of the field, entirely dispersed the enemy in every direction, taking above 60 of their horses and a lot of miscellaneous traps. Two of their leaders, Morad Allee Khan, alias the Nazim, and Hurree Singh, Resaldar, (said to have lately turned Mussulman, any how they buried his body at Oucha) were killed, and 57 or 58 others wounded severely. Goolab Shah, alias Peerjee, lost his right hand, and 25 others, besides numbers not so severely wounded as to prevent their making off on horseback, with a loss on his side of 21 killed and 19 wounded. Having, moreover, started in pursuit directly, he ascertained the prevalent report of a very large force of mutineers (infantry) being in the rear was false. It cannot be conceived how the idea originated, unless it arose from the statements of the fugitive sowars. In the meantime a column under Colonel Herbert had been despatched from Cawnpore, and on its approach the enemy fled. Mr. Hume's exertions were, however, not sufficient to prevent the rebels from crossing both the Jumna and the Chumbul, and getting clear off. Brigadier Showers' column arrived at Etawah on Saturday morning, having marched the entire distance from Agra in thirty-five hours—an achievement which deserved a better reward than it met with, for the column arrived only to find the enemy fled, and pursuit almost hopeless. The column were returning by the direct route on this side the Jumna, but coming to a nullah found they were unable to cross the guns, and had to return.—Mofussilite, Dec. 17.

THE REBELS UNDER FEROZE SHAH.—"CAMP LUCKNOW, BRIGADIER THE HONOURABLE P. HERBERT'S COLUMN, 12th Dec.—I give you (Delhi Gazette) a line of our doings in the Doab. You have ere this heard of the rebel force, consisting of 8 cavalry under the Delhi Shah Zada, having crossed at Ankin Ghat on the Ganges. Brigadier the Honourable Percy Herbert left Cawnpore at mid-day on the 8th instant, with Towana horse under command of Lieut. Angelo, two guns light field battery under command of Lieut. Baley, Chapman's horse, Meerut light horse, and thirty men 6th dragoon guards to intercept the rebels. The column made three long marches to Ooraya, from whence Lieutenant Angelo with forty men of Towana horse was ordered to reconnoitre the Etawah road, and get any information he could, and engage the rebels till the column came up. He had galloped eleven miles when he came on the rebels with one gun; he attacked them with his small party and captured the gun, which he turned on the enemy. The column came up before daybreak for a grand smash. The brigadier marched for the Jumna with his column via Dahnagur Ghat, and Lieut. Angelo with Towana horse was ordered via Jakkha Ghat, which the rebels had made for during the night. Before the arrival of the brigadier's party Lieut. Angelo attacked them when they were in the act of crossing, but owing to the ravines he was obliged to dismount half his men, who went in with their swords like Britons, and polished off sixty or seventy rebels, and captured 300 or 400 horses and fifty camels, with a quantity of arms and baggage. It was a beautiful sight, 300 loose horses tearing about; the shouts of the astounded budmashes, and the Dooranee yell of the Towana, mingled with rattling of musketry, and cries of drowning men and women. However, we regret to say many of them live to fight again. Our force was late by a few hours, and Pandey got clear across the Jumna with little loss."

GOVERNMENT PRESS.—The Government of India has awarded Rs. 1,000 to the Superintendent of the Government Press for his able management. The India Government has also sanctioned the purchase of a consecutive numbering machine at the price of 25*l*. or 30*l*., and to extend the operations of the press to the Financial Department and the officers of the Treasury generally. The India Government did not doubt that very great advantage will be derived from so doing, but it will be necessary that the entire control of it shall rest with the Financial Secretary, as by far the largest portion of the work to be done by it will be connected with his office.—Englishman.

REBEL LEADERS.—After the defeat of the rebels at Biswa, fifty miles north-west of Lucknow, on the 1st Dec., a body of rebels started for the Ganges, which they reached on the 5th. They tried to cross at Nana Mow Ghat, but, finding that impossible, they went up the river to Akum Ghat above Bithour, and below Kanouj. Their numbers are 900 horsemen, of whom 400 are well mounted and armed, the rest are badly equipped; 300 foot camp-followers, &c., including 100 women, 6 elephants, 1 small gun, called a Goorda. The leaders of this body are:—Feroze Shah, a Delhi prince; Lukker Shah; Goolab Shah, alias Peerjee; Mohsun Ali Khan, of Mow Shumhabad (Furruckabad), who passes himself off as an European; Fuzul Hug, Moulvie, formerly scribbledar in the Delhi Commissioner's office (several of his relations have held high appointments under Government; his brother is now in the employ of the Puttiala Rajah); Hurree Singh, of the 12th Irregular Cavalry; Jareeb or Yacoub Khan, of the 12th Irregular Cavalry; Summund Khan, of Jhujjur; Salig Ram, 11th Cavalry; Diler Sing, of Pareechut Gurth. These men were last seen at sunrise on the 6th, at Akum Ghat, by the Kotwal of Sundeelah, who was taken prisoner, but contrived to escape from them when engaged in crossing. He and two prisoners, taken by the district authorities, state that the rebels are making for Calpee, en route to Runthambour, twenty koss distant from Kotah, in the Jyepore territory. They hope to join Tantia Topce, who, they believe, rules at Agra.

LOAN DEPARTMENT.—The Hurkuru has been informed that the accountant to the Government of India has been authorized to entertain a separate establishment in the Loan Department of his office, for the purpose of keeping accounts of notes payable in London. The accountant has, therefore, entertained the establishment lately employed in bringing up the arrears of the "Government Agency in liquidation," with a few additional hands for the purpose. Government promissory notes, amounting to nearly ten lakhs of rupees, the interest on which has been made payable in London, were despatched by the last mail.

SHAHJEHANPORE, Dec. 5.—I presume you have heard of the occupation of Seetpore and Khyrabad, the former station utterly destroyed, and even the burial mound of our murdered ones there had not been found the first day at any rate. The rebels were defeated at Biswah, three coos south-east of Khyrabad, on the 1st, but carried off their guns.

THE RAJAHS OF SHAHGHUR AND BANPORE are required to reside, in the event of their surrendering themselves, under surveillance at Lahore, and the following monthly stipends will be paid to them. The former, 1,400 Rs. and the latter, 800 Rs. per month.

CANPORE, December 7.—The invalids from the different corps, up-country, arrived on the morning of the 3rd, on their way to England. Some portions leave to-morrow morning by train, the remainder in a day or two. The Delhi jewels were sent down yesterday in charge of Sir Edward Campbell, enclosed in a large iron safe. The dawk from the upper provinces has not come in since yesterday, as Feroze Shah crossed over at Bithour, with, it is said, some 1,500 cavalry, and some three or four thousand foot. Such is the report, but it is suspected the report given out of Feroze Shah being at their head is to mislead, and that it is that arch fiend the Nana who has come over. Yesterday morning Cawnpore was expected to be attacked, a telegram was therefore sent off to Allahabad, and the 26th Regiment came up late last evening by train, and left this morning with three companies of the 80th and a couple of troops of the 6th Carabineers in the direction of Bithour. About two P.M. to-day two horse artillery guns, and the Meerut light horse left for the direction of Calpee; they passed the railway station at rather a sharp pace, and were followed about five P.M. by between three and four hundred of Hudson's horse. Some of the troopers belonging to the latter on being asked where they were going, said on a dhour, and that they intended making Bithour to-night, about twenty miles from this, up the Grand Trunk Road. No firing has been heard up to the present hour (seven P.M.), our troops could not therefore have come across the villains.—Mofussilite.

PUBLIC WORKS.—The Secretary in the Department of Public Works some time back inquired whether it is regular to permit the forfeited portion of the pay of an office clerk temporarily absent from duty to be given to the other clerks of the establishment, in addition to their fixed salaries, as a remuneration for the additional labour imposed upon them. The Secretary was of opinion that special permission from superior authority should first be obtained. The civil auditor reported that the practice is not unusual, and thought it unobjectionable, so long as the duties of the absentees were properly conducted, and no extra expenditure incurred. The receipt of the full salaries of two appointments, however, by the same officer, he considered should not under any circumstances be allowed. The President in Council decided that the more expedient as well as regular course would be for the head of an office to appoint an acting man on the forfeited pay of the absentee, as thereby the strength of the office will be maintained.

ANOTHER PROCLAMATION.—"Proclamation of Sree Muth Pundit Purdhan Maha Rajah Row Sahib Peishwa Bahadur:—Be it known to all ryots, sowkars, dookandars, and sepoys of all the kushas, cities, villages, &c., that I have come with my army to kill the English and plunder them all. I have not come to destroy the ryots, for I am the enemy of the English alone, but not of the Hindoostanees. My intention was not to plunder the inhabitants of this country, but, owing to my army being in a state of starvation, I was obliged to loot some of the villages of these parts, as the inhabitants ran away without giving supplies. If they had not done so nothing would have happened to them: they have received the benefits of their doings. Now be it known that no one should quit their houses, fields, &c., and when my army approaches they must furnish supplies, for which they will receive more than the fixed nerrick. Keep your hearts free. On the arrival of this proclamation, the heads of villagers will and must send copies of it to all the neighbouring country. Dated 30th Rubbeool Awul 1275 Hijree."

BUXAR, Dec. 5.—Intelligence has been received that the celebrated Meghur Sing, rebel of Ghumur, was taken on Friday night by the gallant 84th, who came on them at night, bayoneted the sentry, and took the arch rebel, who will be brought into Buxar to-night or to-morrow, and probably be hanged the day after. There are three more Hindoo and one Musulman rebel chiefs of note to be taken, Hurkissen Sing, Tadar Sing, Ummur Sing, and Ibrahim Khan, then there will be an end of the Shahabad rebels.

ACTION AT HURCHUNDPOOR.—Alas! poor Doyle is killed. The account of the fight which took place in this district on the 8th is as follows:—The enemy entered the Doab on the 6th, and looted the town of Belah. The news reached our active magistrate on the 7th, who at once started to Phupound to stop the rebels' progress. At ten A.M. on the 8th our little force attacked the enemy near Phupound, but got the worst of it. Doyle, one resaladar, and from fifteen to twenty sowars fell on the field, and the rest of our cavalry bolted off in all directions; but Messrs. Hume, Maconochie, and Forbes managed to save the guns, and took possession of the strong fort of Hurchundpoor. The enemy were about 2,000 in number, more than half being mounted on very fine horses, and having very fine arms, our poor fellows having nothing but their swords. The enemy had one gun, and made four or five charges to capture ours, but were each time repulsed by the few men in charge of them. The enemy last evening were preparing to cross the Jumna after looting several villages. Our runaway sowars gave a horrid account of the fight, making it, of course, ten times worse than it was, "the guns were captured, and all the Europeans killed, &c., and the enemy marching on Etawah." The poor fellows would, perhaps, have fought more bravely had the odds not been so much against them.

NOTES BY A TRAVELLER.—It appears to me that matters are returning pretty much to the state they were in before the mutiny. Lord Clyde has taken the whole army with him, and gone off nobody knows where, meantime the whole road and all the stations between Allahabad and the Cis Sutlej states are left almost without European troops. At Allyghur we have a station and fort entrusted to a few native levies, who only differ from the old regiments in that they have all the faults of the sepoys and none of the virtues. On the Trunk Road, between Cawnpore, Allyghur, and Agra, there are a few parties of police here and there, but the road is not patrolled. Cawnpore was all but denuded of troops till the other day, when the Madras Fusiliers arrived. Agra is left with a handful of English soldiers. Bodies of the enemy with cavalry and guns cross the river, burn and plunder as they go, and, if report speaks true, attack our forts, capture our guns, and kill our countrymen and fellow-subjects. Travelling is no longer safe, our communications are interrupted. And all this with about 80,000 European soldiers in the country, and after it has been given out that the Government has succeeded in suppressing the rebellion.—Delhi Gazette.

ON DIT.—We find it stated in the Punjabee that Colonel Richard Lawrence accompanies the Rajah of Puttiala to England shortly, and that Mr. Kirk, the Superintendent of the Chief Commissioner's Office, goes also as a sort of attaché.

TARGET PRACTICE.—The Government of India have, on the recommendation of Major Turnbull, Commandant Calcutta Volunteer Guards, sanctioned the erection of butts for target practice at Dappa, at an expense of Rs. 250. Dappa is about two miles from where Dhurumtolah meets the circular road.

MADRAS.

MADRAS FINANCE FOR THE YEAR 1856-57.

We must bestow high praise upon the Financial Section of the Madras Report. It is clear, comprehensive, and puts striking matters in a very striking light; and is pervaded throughout with a strong feeling of local patriotism, which is highly creditable to the writer; for there is no damper to progress, no enemy to civilisation, so much to be dreaded, as that superficial and pernicious generalising, which has been imported from Germany and France into India; and which, assailing in the first instance the spirit of locality, ends by annihilating public spirit altogether. The financial review before us is a protest against diluting the revenues and expenditure of Madras into those of the whole of India, in order that they may be employed in filling up the holes and blotches in the Imperial system, and in enabling the Central Government to show a far better and more symmetrical balance sheet than it would otherwise be able to do. Madras is asserted, officially, as well as popularly, not to pay the expenses of its Government, while the Punjab, the pet province of the Central Power, is declared to have already poured millions into the Imperial Treasury. In the Punjab Report for 1855-56 it was officially stated that that province had, after paying its own expenses, yielded £5,555,585 as surplus to the general revenues of India; and this was alleged upon the plea that the annexation of the Punjab had caused no material increase to the regular army of India; which plea was an audacious yet successful protest by that Government against being debited with its fair share of the general military charges of the empire. Facts have now effectually exposed the wretched fallacy upheld by the Central Government. The massing of European troops in the Punjab, which left Central India and Hindostan at the mercy of the natives; the long and dreary exile of the Bengal sepoys in the Punjab; these circumstances were secretly stirring up mutiny and rebellion, while our infatuated rulers were exulting in the financial profits of the new acquisition. It is now clear, that so far from the Punjab being debited with no portion of the general expense of the army, that province should have been charged for the lion's share. If for every European regiment which the Punjab withdrew from the Central and Eastern provinces, another in its place had been substituted, it is highly probable that we should not now be speculating as to the wherewithal to pay the costs of the great rebellion.

In the report before us, the writer has done well to furnish us with the charges proper of the Madras territories, including those for the regular army which garrison them; thus debiting them with a charge which the Punjab treats in the manner an American "repudiating

State" treats its debts; and which charge should be at least 50 to 60 per cent. upon the Punjab revenues. The statement for Madras, so given, for a period of ten years, shows an average surplus of Rs. 70,52,543 or in pounds sterling £752,000. It gives a gross surplus during that period, of upwards of £7,000,000. But this is exclusive of a preposterous charge against the Madras territories, for troops which are employed elsewhere. It is this charge which converts the surplus into a deficit, amounting upon the whole ten years to the sum of £1,174,000; and thus victimised Madras is stigmatised as a defaulting province, while the "repudiating" Punjab is paraded as the most profitable of our acquisitions, a financial imposition which, countenanced by Lord Dalhousie, helped to gain him a pension of £5,000 a year, or in other words, a trifling percentage upon the profits his lordship was supposed to have had realised for the empire! Surely the force of humbug in excelsis could not transcend this!

There are also some exceedingly just remarks with regard to public works in Madras. The charges in this department are placed under two general heads—ordinary and extraordinary; the former consisting of salaries, establishments, repairs of roads, canals, annicuts, buildings; and the latter of the costs of constructing new works. It is observed that these charges of construction are not rightly expenditure, but "investment of capital upon works which are either productive in themselves directly, or which diminish the expenses which Government would otherwise incur in various ways, and are thus indirectly valuable." The expenditure, however, in the review before us, upon works of construction could only be shown for two years, viz., 1854–55, 1855–56; and for a third year only given in estimate: the average annual expenditure of these three years is Rs. 42,82,666, or £428,260. If, therefore, this sum had been deducted from the annual expenditure, if, for example, it had been taken up on loan, a still greater surplus than that already indicated might have been shown in the territorial receipts. The charges which Madras disburses for troops employed beyond her own frontier, are as follows:—

Saugor Division... ..	" 19,12,243
Cuttack ... ..	" 15,922
Rangoon ... ..	" 22,61,290

Commissariat charges for the Eastern Settlements ... ..	" 26,90,340

Rupees 90,96,000

Deducting the above charge, and that for the construction of public works, Madras would show an extremely favourable balance-sheet; and in that case there would be no difficulties in the way of reducing taxes—that surest method of repressing abuses in our administration.

The aggregate of revenue received during the official year ending April, 1857, amounted to £5,496,700. The proportion which the various branches bear to each other is thus noted:—

The balances of cash remaining in the different public treasuries in this Presidency at the beginning and termination of each official year, averaged, in ten past years, £2,648,122. In the section before us, the "cash balance" is termed the barometer of the finances; and is reported to have worked satisfactorily, there having been only three unfavourable variations during the last ten years; while on the whole, there was a slight average increase. At the end of the year under review, there was in hand, a balance sufficient to meet about six months' average expenditure. Information is also furnished as to the extent to which bills have been granted to merchants, and others on the provincial treasuries, for the past ten years; namely, £11,162,000 or £1,116,000 a year. The amount drawn away to the Presidency by means of bills, was, during the same period, £12,157,000, or an average of £1,215,000.

So much for the finance of Madras in a year expiring nineteen months ago, and which, under any system of Government but that which obtains, would have been made public long before even the termination of the period to which the present report has reference.—Madras Athenæum.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—A meeting of the proprietors of the bank, under section xv. of act ix. of 1843, was held yesterday, for the purpose of electing two directors in the room of J. Gooldeen and J. Vans Agnew, Esqs., who go out by rotation. Six proprietors were present, Mr. Gooldeen in the chair. Messrs. J. Young and H. Nelson were elected unanimously as the new directors.

NATIVE ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY.—"To Her Most Excellent and Gracious Majesty Victoria, Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Colonies and Dependencies thereof in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australasia. May it please your Majesty,—We, your Majesty's undersigned Mahomedan and Hindoo subjects, inhabitants of Madras, beg to approach your royal throne with the most dutiful and respectful expression of our feelings of unfeigned loyalty towards your Imperial person, crown, and family, and of the deep satisfaction and thankfulness with which we have received the gracious Proclamation, that on the 1st of November informed all the inhabitants of British India that your Majesty had been pleased to assume the rights, prerogatives, and immediate government of your vast and populous dominions in India; and to present with the utmost respect our heartiest felicitations to your gracious Majesty on this auspicious occasion, so fraught with honour to your throne and advantage to all classes of your Indian subjects, as well as to assure your Majesty that in no part of your Majesty's vast and flourishing empire are to be found subjects of the British Crown more loyally affectionate and obedient than the natives of India resident within the limits of the city of Madras. With all loyal and humble submission, we ask your royal leave to subscribe ourselves your Majesty's most dutiful and faithful subjects.—Madras, 7th December, 1858."

THE AURUNGABAD COLUMN were still at Hewurkeir on the 20th November watching the ghauts, and prepared to act as circumstances might require. Two of Captain Davies' scouts were seized at Peeplood by some of Tania Topee's sowars, who are dressed like the Nizam's cavalry in green cloth with red turbans, and armed with lancers and carbines. Both of the scouts when seized were placed in confinement, but most fortunately managed to escape during the night, one of them having been wounded by a spear on the head. The scouts say that they saw about a thousand of the enemy's cavalry picketed in long lines, and that they moved out regularly at intervals to guard their camp. There were also eight or ten elephants, three of which had howdahs, in which natives of distinction were riding, one chief, supposed to be Tania Topee, enjoyed the luxury of a palankeen. The intention of the rebels appeared to be to push on by Boregaum to Asseerghur, and Boorhanpoor. They would scarcely be foolhardy enough to march into the Deccan. Captain Davies sent out six scouts, of whom four were missing at the date of our correspondent's letter—evidently they have fallen into the hands of the Philistines.—Madras Spectator.

KAMPTEE FLYING COLUMN.—"Camp Natchin-gaon, left bank of Wurdah, 28th Nov. Our column has just received orders to return to Kamptee. On the 22nd a report reached us that the '2nd Division of the army of the Peishwah,' consisting of about 5000 rebels, was engaged in crossing the Nurbudda, and intended attacking Baitool; the fact of their crossing has since been confirmed, and it is thought that the rebels, being now so distant from Tantea Topee, will make for Karinga in Berar, ten miles south of which a large band of Rohillas has assembled. Karinga is fifty-five miles south-west of this ford of the Wurdah river, and it may yet fall to the lot of this column to intercept the rebel army. It will be a great disappointment to us should we return to Kamptee without firing a shot. The column is now commanded by Colonel Basil Blogg, 7th Madras Cavalry, Colonel Osborne (father of the gallant Osborne, of Rewah) having been appointed Brigadier of Masulipatam. The Rohillas have pillaged and burnt the town of Gunga Kair, on the Godavery, and a force from Secunderabad has gone out after them, consisting of half of E troop Madras Horse Artillery, Wright's company Royal Artillery, Wright's company Royal Artillery, with mortars, &c., one troop 12th Royal Lancers, one squadron 7th Madras Light Cavalry, two companies 1st Royals, and 9th Madras N. I., under Colonel Roberts, Madras Infantry. Brigadier Hill, with the Hyderabad Contingent, has arrived at Ellichpoor; Sir Patrick Grant, Commander-in-Chief, is expected at Kamptee, on a tour of inspection, about the 6th proximo, and the right wing H. M.'s 91st will arrive there about the same time; the left wing has been ordered to remain for the present at Janlnah."—Delhi Gazette.

ELICHPORE.—We (Poona Observer) learn from a letter from Ellichpoor, dated the 5th of December, that some rebel cavalry, about 150 or 200 in number, belonging to Tania Topee's force, were overtaken by some villagers, who captured several of them, and brought them in prisoners to Bothee, about four miles from Doomuck. The villagers also captured four of the enemy's camels laden with valuables. About 2,000 rebels having reached Maulgah, they sent in a rissaldar and two sowars to Shavulmaida, and ordered the Patell to provide guides to show them the road to Mehesdihee; but the Patell refused, although they offered him a large sum of money to do so. Our correspondent adds that the rebels across the Nerbudda seem in great tribulation, and are endeavouring to make their escape in every possible direction. Two hundred infantry from Ellichpoor, and some irregular cavalry under Captain Prescott from Behram hill, eight miles from Ellichpoor, left for Shavulmaida on the 3rd, in pursuit of the rebels. Captain Shakespear arrived at Mooltaee on the 2nd, in pursuit of Tania's rear-guard.

CAPTAIN HANDCOCK, A.D.C.—We regret to learn from the Madras Spectator, that Captain Handcock, Aide-de-Camp to the Right Honourable the Governor, met with a severe accident whilst out tiger-shooting a few days ago at Bandipore. The gallant sportsman had severely wounded a royal tiger, and was approaching what he believed to be the dying animal, when it suddenly sprang upon him. The captain endeavoured to save himself by catching the branch of a tree, but before he could get out of harm's way, the tiger clawed him down, and wounded him in the severest manner, though we trust not dangerously. His friends are anxiously waiting for further information, and we hope may soon be relieved from their present anxieties concerning so bold and adventurous a huntsman.

that the enemy had neared us considerably by quite a different route to what we had expected them to come, if they did ever come. Great excitement was caused by this news in the minds of the native officials, who had been dreadfully alarmed by reports from the district regarding the fates of the different Tehsildars and Thanadars. These were mostly false, though believed by all at the time. It was reported that the Mooltye Tehsildar had fled on his horse across a field, pursued by forty sowars, that his girths broke and caused him to fall off, when he was speared by his pursuers; another was, that the Seristadar of Sindwarra had been hung, together with all the chupprassies, under the superintendence of the Nawab of Banda. A fact, since found to be true, was also reported, that none of the Brahmins had been plundered, and that they had received large presents. They are now being made to disgorge, and one man has already sent up seventy-eight gold mohurs, and we shall soon cause the rest to appear. The night passed over without any further approach of the rebels, but a ludicrous alarm took place in the middle of the right. A man placed a bamboo in a fire, which caused it to go off like the report of a musket, which was no sooner heard, than the news spread like wild fire, that the enemy had arrived, and the inhabitants started up ready to bolt, they hardly knew where. During the day we had been informed that the eastern part of the district had joined Tantia Topee, and that a party of the inhabitants of that part of the country, a peculiar caste of Rajpoot, called Rugbunsees, were pursuing the thanadar of Donawa from hill to hill. This man wrote in to say, that the Rugbunsees had risen, and that he had two musketeers with him, but what could he do, he said, against so many. On the 8th, 9th, and 10th the rebels seem, contrary to their usual custom, to have loitered on the road, especially at Mooltye; the plunder of which wealthy place no doubt was ample attraction. We heard that Tantia sent for all the Government Gazettes containing our despatches of the upcountry campaigns, and read out their contents amid shouts of laughter. This gentleman, on entering the Baitool district, gave out that the English raj was at end, and that he intended murdering all round it, burning every Tehselee and Chowki, and putting all Government officials to death. This he very nearly accomplished, and no doubt would have done so had not Colonel Becher with the right column pushed on and saved Baitool. Though not much to do with what occurred at Baitool, it seems a strange thing that the Nagpoor authorities were so tardy in their aid. Had they marched a force from Nagpoor to Mooltye, on receiving the intelligence, nothing could have saved the enemy from being annihilated to a man. Although we in Baitool did not hear the news till the 3rd November, the express carrying it to Nagpoor passed through this on the 31st October, and in regular course must have arrived there on the 1st November. It is hard to believe that no assistance from this place reached Mooltye till Tantia Topee had reached the Taptee at Mail Ghaut, near Mhota. Still it was not till this had actually taken place that news reached us, that the officer in command had taken up the track of the rebels, and hoped to engage them to-morrow! This is what it is. The Government pay their troops better than any other state in the world, but cannot get a paltry force of 1,500 men under weigh in less than a week. On the 9th, a servant of the Nawab of Banda came in with a letter from his master, saying that if he was guaranteed his life he would come in. Mr. Mac George, the Assistant Commissioner, wrote him a letter, and sent a copy of the amnesty proclamation with it, and told him that if he considered his life granted by the proclamation he had better come in as soon as possible. This was unanswered for some time, but at last he separated and delivered himself up at Chicholee to Captain Baldwin, Deputy Commissioner, Baitool, who was with General Michel's camp. The track of the rebels up to this time from their crossing the Nerbudda is as follows:—Lohagpoor and Futtpoor, Puchmury and Mahdeo, Oomait, Boodye, Donawa, Mooltye, Athair, Sawulmainda, Bhainadahie, Chandoo, down the left bank of the Taptee to Jilpy, Aumnair, where they crossed going north, leaving Pessold on the left, they passed Cundwah and entered the Scindwah jungle. On the 12th November, Colonel Becher's column moved on towards Ellichpore, and made way for the force under General Michel. General Michel halted one day, and then proceeded to Chicholee, and was to arrive at Charwah on the 23rd November. Brigadier Hill has taken the field at the head of the Hyderabad Contingent, and was to be at Akote on the 21st November. He is in command of 2,000 bayonets, 1,200 mules and eight guns, quite sufficient to smash Tantia Topee. From the evidence of the Banda Nawab, Ally Chadoor, it appears the enemy have 1,500 good sowars, 4,000 or 5,000 infantry, part of the Gwalior Contingent and camp followers to a great extent, the total of which altogether may be estimated at 12,000 individuals. They have no guns, and no magazine, and very little powder. The country through which Tantia Topee passed has evinced very little inclination to join him, and beyond dacoities and a little private revenge being inflicted few disturbances have taken place. We hope a month will re-establish something like order. Baitool offers very little to the plunderer beyond the Government treasury, which happened to be full, containing about 1½ lakh of rupees—a bait it was thought sufficient to induce the enemy to turn his steps hitherwards. The Acting Deputy Commissioner, Mr. MacGeorge, is an excellent officer, who we hope will be rewarded for the anxiety he underwent, the charge of the treasury being no slight one for so young an officer, with no assistance but 140 of the Nagpoor Irregular force, who belong to the Pandey tribe, and 150 new police levies, armed with old flint muskets, which might shoot round a corner, but decidedly not straightforward. It is hoped the rebels will continue their course and cross the Nerbudda again. This Pandary chief should be fought with his own weapons, and until a column lightly equipped, devoid of wheel carriage and consisting of cavalry, infantry, and mountain guns be organised, he never can be forced to fight. General Michel has had four fights with him, and all by chance. Each time the General has utterly defeated his opponent. It is high time such trash as this ceased. It is perfectly impossible General Michel can overtake, though he may come across the rebels by accident. His baggage is composed chiefly of carts, and the Royals travel in Nagpur carts. The mess carts of the 17th Lancers are alone enough to impede the course of any army. The chief personages in the rebel camp are Tantia Topee, the Rao Sahib, a nephew of Nana, Nawab of Jourd, and a lady, who the rebels declare to be the Ranees of Jhansie. There cannot be much truth in this report.

THE LATE TRAGEDY AT KURRACHEE.—On Saturday last the preliminary investigation in the case of Mr. George Bease, managing proprietor, and late editor of the Sindian, came to a conclusion, before A. F. Bellasis, Esq., C.S., magistrate of this station, and resulted in the committal of the accused, on the charge of wilful murder of Mrs. Bease, and of the attempt to murder Mr. H. Foster, Vakeel of the Kurrachee Adawlut, for trial before the Supreme Court of Bombay. We may be permitted to say that Mr. Bease's case is regarded with universal sympathy in Kurrachee, and from Mr. Bellasis's feeling address on the painful occasion, we have every reason to believe that he was conscious of being in the discharge of a most repugnant duty. Mr. Barton, the barrister, defended the prisoner. The facts are already before the public, and there is no occasion for us to comment upon the subject. Mr. Bease is now at the disposal of a jury of his countrymen; and we feel no reason to doubt that they, taking into consideration the unparalleled treachery on the part of a man whom he had befriended on more than one occasion, will decide, between God and their own consciences, how far the crime of murder can be substantiated.—Scinde Kossid, Dec. 7.

THE LATE GENERAL JACOB.—As a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the ensign at Government-house at Kurrachee has been hoisted half-mast high for the last two days, and yesterday the commanders of all the vessels in harbour followed the Commissioner's example by doing the same. A correspondent of the Scinde Kossid at Jacobabad, writing from that station on the 6th, says:—"It is with feelings of the deepest regret that I have to announce to you the death of Brigadier General Jacob, c.b., Political Superintendent on the frontiers of Upper Scinde, and commander-in-chief of the Scinde Irregular horse, which occurred at midnight yesterday. He was suffering for the last week from bowel complaint jointly with other diseases, brought on by exposure to cold and over-exertion whilst out surveying. I need not say that by his death Government have lost an invaluable officer, and the population of Jacobabad, and the whole frontier a sincere friend and generous ruler. His remains were interred this evening at 4 o'clock with all due honour. The vicinity of the burial ground was literally a 'sea of heads'—high and low, rich and poor, all were present, and not one left without shedding a tear over his grave. His loss is universally felt and deeply lamented. The people will henceforth look in vain for a governor so firm, so just, and yet so good. Their 'Gooroo' is gone, and they are prostrate with grief. Captain King, the brigade major, officiated as chaplain at the funeral. Major Henry Green, Political Agent at Khelat, being the senior officer present, has taken charge of both the political and military command." Mr. Frere, the Commissioner of Scinde, has issued the following circular concerning the death of his dear friend and fellow-labourer, General John Jacob—an event which was communicated to him shortly after his arrival in Kurrachee from Bombay:—"Circular No. 2275 of 1858. Political Department. From H. B. E. Frere, Esq., Commissioner in Scinde. To all Civil Departments in Scinde. Dated 8th December, 1858. Sir,—You will, I am sure, participate with me in the feeling of deep regret with which I heard, this morning, by express, of the death of Brigadier General John Jacob, C.B., Political Superintendent and Commandant of the north-western frontier of Scinde, who expired at Jacobabad at midnight of the 5th and 6th instant. The death of a man so eminent as both a soldier and administrator would, under any circumstances, be a public misfortune of no ordinary magnitude. But General Jacob's name has been so long and so intimately associated with this province, as to give to the event the character of a personal loss in the estimation of every one who is employed in, or interested in, the province. Among the foremost of the band of heroes at the conquest, he has remained ever prominent among the most able, the most persevering, and the most successful of those who have sought to improve the country, and to render our rule a blessing to its inhabitants. The removal of such a man cannot but be deeply felt by every one of his fellow-labourers in the same good cause, and I would therefore suggest for your consideration, that the day following the receipt of this intelligence at every station should be observed as a day of mourning, public offices being closed for all but work of emergency or immediate necessity.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant, H. B. E. FRERE, Commissioner's Office, Kurrachee." The following promotions have taken place in the regiment of Artillery, consequent on the demise of Brigadier General John Jacob, C.B.:—Captain (Brevet Major) J. B. Woosnam, agent for gunpowder, to be Lieutenant Colonel; and Supernumerary Captain G. G. Brown will be brought on the established strength of the regiment, in succession to Woosnam, promoted.

BRIGADIER GENERAL JOHN JACOB, C.B., was born at Woolavington in Somersetshire in 1812, and was educated by his father, the late Rev. S. L. Jacob, until his entrance to Addiscombe at the age of fourteen years. He joined the Bombay Artillery as a Cadet in 1828, and from that time until his death served, we believe, unceasingly in that country. Lieutenant Jacob accompanied the invading army of Lord Keane as far as Upper Scinde in 1838, being left there to assist in keeping open communications with Afghanistan. In 1839-40 he took part in Major Billamore's successful expedition in Cutchee, and in 1842 was appointed to command the Scinde horse, then 500 strong, and received the warm acknowledgments of Major Outram and Sir Richard England for his services. From this period he rose rapidly to notice. The Scinde horse played a conspicuous part in Sir Charles Napier's campaign in 1843, covering itself with glory on the field of Meanee. At Shadadpoor the young commandant attacked the army of Shere Mahomed, nearly 10,000 strong, with a force of only 800 men, and utterly defeated it. In 1846 a second regiment was added to the Scinde horse, Captain Jacob being made the commandant of both. In 1847 he was appointed to the charge of the frontier, and remained in that charge until his death, with two short intervals, during the first of which (1856) he acted as Commissioner of Scinde in Mr. Frere's absence, and in the second (1857) joined the Persian expedition, which, upon the departure of General Outram, he commanded in chief. The history of his administration upon the frontier is a thrice-told tale. He converted a desert into a garden, and the robbers of the hills into its peaceful cultivators. In person, General Jacob was a little above the middle stature, and of a spare but wiry and enduring frame. Fearless to rashness in the exposure of himself to the sun, it will be found, we except, that he has at last fallen a victim to his temerity. His commissions bore date as follows:—2nd lieutenant, 11th January, 1828; lieutenant, 14th May, 1836; captain, 11th January, 1843; major, 16th January, 1847; lieutenant-colonel, 20th November, 1854; colonel, 20th March, 1857. It will not be an easy task to select a successor worthy of the charge left vacant by his death.—Times.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH LINKS.—As some information regarding the telegraph lines now in progress in the Bombay Presidency may be interesting to our readers, we have much pleasure in sub-joining a statement respecting them. From Bombay, a coast line is being laid down, via Nagotna, Severndroog, Rutnagberry, and Vingorla, to Goa. This will join another line, being constructed, via Cochichin, to Cape Comorin, so that there will thus be an independent coast line the whole way from Calcutta to Bombay, via Madras and Manar. To the north of Bombay, another coast line is being constructed, via Bassein, Mahim, Demann, and Bulsar to Surat, so that the latter place will then communicate with Bombay direct, instead of taking the circuit of Nasick. From Surat the line has already been completed to Kurrachee via Broach, Baroda, Ahmedabad, and Deesa; and from Kurrachee it is being pushed forward, through the Punjab towards Lahore, so that the latter will shortly be in direct communication with the Western Presidency. Independent of these coast lines, another line is to be carried right through the heart of the country from Bombay, via Poona, Seror and Ahmednuggur, through the Nizam's dominions on to Nagpore, with a junction between Ahmednuggur and Nasick. From Nagpore, a distinct line communicates with Calcutta via Benares, so that when Bombay is connected with Nagpore, there will be three separate wires communicating between Bombay and Calcutta, viz., via Madras, via Nagpore, and via Agra, besides a distinct line to Ceylon on the one side and Lahore on the other, which, as we said before, are being carried out. With such an intricate network of telegraphic wires, the Indian Government will be in constant communication with all parts of the empire.—Standard.

OOMRAWATTEE.—A correspondent of the Madras Times, writing from the town of Oomrawattee, says:—"I arrived here the day before yesterday. You know, perhaps, that this is one of the largest and richest towns in this part of India. The people got into great alarm, having heard that Tania Topee was making straight for the place to plunder it. He certainly did come within forty-five miles of it, and he fell in with some of our pickets, a few miles from Ellichipore, but he then turned away to the westward, keeping to the northward of that range of hills defined on your map in that region. The Hyderabad Contingent troops are now divided into parties, watching the difficult passes from the hills into the plains. A report came in to say that another party of rebels had crossed the Nerbudda, and are making southward. One very suspicious circumstance has happened here. Two men in the garb of coolies were taken up, having on their persons the most beautiful jewels. They are most costly, worth Rs. 30,000, and consist of ornaments only worn by Indian princes. We suppose that they were sent as a bribe, or advance of payment, offered to the Rohillas to come up and join the rebels. I never saw such splendid diamonds and emeralds as are in these jewels."

CATHOLIC BISHOP.—The Reverend Dr. A. Canoz, the newly appointed Catholic Bishop of Bombay, arrived here by the Pearl on Tuesday last.

EXPORT OF OPIUM.—The freight of the B. S. N. Company's steamer Pioneer, Captain P. James, which left for China on the 15th December, included 1,057 chests of Malwa opium; 850 chests were exported per P. and O. Company's steamer Cadiz, Captain R. Curling, which sailed on the 16th; and the B. S. N. Company's steamer United Service, Captain Fitzmaurice, which left on the 19th, took 545 chests.

MR. BEAUVAIS, the newly appointed Inspecting Post Master of Sind, arrived at Kurrachee by the last steamer from Bombay, and has assumed charge from Mr. Kimpton, who proceeds about the end of the month to Belgaum, where he will relieve Mr. Hearne on his retirement from the active duties of the department, on a pension.

MR. DEASE arrived in Bombay from Kurrachee on the 9th Dec., in the steamer Victoria, for the purpose of undergoing his trial at the Supreme Court.

A PROSELYTE.—We learn from a vernacular paper that the Bhatia Hindoo, who lately became a convert to Christianity, has again returned to his Hindoo faith, and has consequently gone on a pilgrimage to one of the holy Hindoo cities for ablution.

THE GERMAN LEGION.—Three officers and one hundred and forty privates of the German Legion (volunteers), under the command of Captain Valentine, arrived here on the 10th Dec. by the barque Ariel from East London; on the following day the barque Estafette arrived from the same port with six officers and one hundred and forty-nine non-commissioned officers and men, in charge of Major Wolfake; and a third batch of the Legion, numbering about eleven officers and four hundred and twenty-one non-commissioned officers and men, in charge of Lieut. Colonel Woodbridge, arrived by the ship Edward Oliver, on the 18th.

FORT AT POONA.—We hear that Government contemplate building a fort at the Sungum at Poona, in which the arsenal, commissariat, and other public departments are to be located, and it is also to serve as a place of refuge for the inhabitants of the camp in the event of an émeute.—Poona Observer.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—At a weekly meeting of the directors, held on Thursday week, the 16th Dec., the Bank of Bombay raised its rates of interest and discount one per cent. all round.

THE CHASE FOR TANTIA TOPEE.—A letter from Seerpore, dated the 7th Dec., informs us that Colonel Tapp's field force has been divided and subdivided in the most indiscriminate manner. On meeting General Beaton's force from Jaulnah at Adjunta, Colonel Tapp changed his direction and started at once for Choprah with the 4th (Gaye's) troop of horse artillery, leaving Captain Miller's squadron of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, and two companies of the 18th Royal Irish regiment to follow him as fast as they could. They arrived at Choprah on the 27th Nov., and found Colonel Tapp and the guns had left for Seerpore. They remained at Choprah—their first halt since leaving Ahmednuggur—two days, and then followed him, and on arriving at Seerpore found he had gone still further to the west. Our correspondent adds—"Colonel Tapp and the guns were recalled three days ago, and himself again despatched yesterday to a place the name of which sounds like 'Shadra' (Sadra?), about forty miles to the west of this; and this morning Captain Macfarlane's troop of the 3rd dragoon guards, and Captain Taylor's company of the 18th foot, started for another place with a very unpronounceable name in the same direction, on the Tantee, about sixty miles from here. Sir Hugh Rose with Captain Macdonald came in here last night from Sindwah, and as far as I can learn is likely to remain here. Captain Annesley, from Malligum, and Captain Pocklington's company of the 18th Royal Irish, Captain Miller's troop 3rd dragoon guards, the 4th troop Bombay horse artillery, a mountain battery under Captain Lucas, Bombay artillery, and a company of the 30th Bombay N. I. Since the foregoing was in type we have received a letter from Gulnar, dated the 10th Dec., in which it is stated that Colonel Tapp's force had left Seerpore that morning en route to Oodeypore. The weather was dreadfully hot, being over 90 deg. in the tents.—Poona Observer.

INDIAN MISSIONS.—We are happy to announce the return to India of Dr. Trumpp, late of the Church Missionary Society, Sindh Mission. He has been transferred to the Punjab mission of the same society, and is proceeding to Peshawar. His acquaintance with the Pushtoo language will enable him to enter without delay upon his work. We understand that he has been endeavouring, during his absence in Europe, to perfect the Sindian alphabets, by adding several letters both to the Devanagari and Arabic characters as hitherto used in Sindh, and that matrices for these additional letters have been prepared, so that the types can be furnished without delay. We have also much pleasure in mentioning the arrival of a reinforcement for the German missions on the Malabar coast, in the persons of three new missionaries and two former labourers returning to their field. This reinforcement is timely, after the severe losses lately sustained. The Basle Missionary Society have at length concluded to adopt the Coorg Mission, and the Rev. Mr. Moegling is expected by the next steamer, on his way to resume his labours in Coorg. We congratulate him on this satisfactory result of his visit to Europe.—Bombay Guardian.

BELGAUM.—The Poona Observer informs us that Mr. Bettington has been at Belgaum and distributed the reward of Rs. 10,000 amongst the captors of the late Chief of Nurgood, who was hanged for the murder of Mr. Manson. Our cotemporary says "None of this money would seem to have reached Mr. Souter, to whom the whole merit of this capture is due. The whole amount ought undoubtedly to have been paid to Mr. Souter, and he should have been left to reward those who aided him in the capture as he deemed best. All interference with him in such a matter should have been most carefully avoided. There has, we regret to hear, been a serious unpleasantness between Mr. Seton Karr, the magistrate, and Mr. Souter, who, we understand, has been treated with great disrespect by the former. Colonel Le Grand Jacob arrived at Belgaum on the 9th Dec., and has been appointed president of the court which is to try the Jumkhundeekur. Mootoo Coomaria, the native Christian deputy magistrate of Belgaum, has, we are informed, been suspended by Mr. Karr, who has reported him to Government as being unfit to hold the office." Public officials in Belgaum seem to be playing at the game of cross purposes.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Dec. 24).—Cotton.—The prices of this staple fell soon after the receipt of home intelligence by the last mail, but a demand having set in consequent on the reduced rates, prices again rose to the present quotations, which are a little lower. A good demand exists, and business to a fair extent has been done both for Europe and China. Oilseeds.—Oilseeds are active. Linseed, Rapeseed, and Poppy-seed have slightly advanced in value. Ground Nuts are firm. Teel-seed is in good request at previous rates. Wool.—Largely held and in languid inquiry. Transactions few, and solely confined to native shippers. Pepper.—Scarce; Malabar sold at Rs. 95, and Bhuteol Rs. 101 to 102 per candy. Coffee.—Dull, and stocks of both Mocha and Malabar are much reduced. Saltpetre.—Large stocks on hand, and prices of Scinde have declined to Rs. 7 per bag of 1½ cwt. Mooltan is sold at Rs. 13 to 14 per bag. Madder Root.—Declined in price, and a very trifling business done. Opium.—The market is steady, with a somewhat upward tendency. Malwa Opium is quoted at Rs. 1,260 per chest for China.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Dec. 24, 1858).—Cotton Manufactures.—The demand for Piece Goods continues brisk, and for many descriptions the prices have further advanced. The market is short of stocks, and as supplies are not freely coming in, the high prices will continue to operate for some time to come. However, as the season has advanced, the eagerness to purchase goods "to arrive" has somewhat abated, and dealers show reluctance to enter into extensive fresh contracts. Grey Goods of all descriptions, with the exception of Grey Twills, are in eager inquiry as before, and the prices of Grey Shirtings, Grey Madapolams, Grey T. Cloths, Grey Jaconets, and Grey Domestics, have further advanced one to three annas per piece. Bleached Goods are steady in position and value. Among Glasgow Goods, Dhories are slightly higher, while the rest of the descriptions are inquired for at previous rates. Metals.—Metals are steady in inquiry and value. A good demand exists for Copper, and Sheeting, Bracers, and Bottoms have risen in value, the rest being quoted as before. Iron is also in good inquiry, and the prices of British and Swedish Bar have advanced. Quicksilver is inquired for at improved rates. The other metals remain unaltered in value. Yarns.—The market continues active, and demand for both Mule and Water Twist is steady. There is not so much inquiry for goods "to arrive" as for ready goods. We notice an advance in the prices of counts 20, 30, 60, and 70 Mule, and 30 and 40 Water. Dyed Yarns are in excellent demand, and prices of all descriptions are slightly higher. Cochineal.—Dull, and inquired for at lower quotations, but holders are firm. Saffron continues scarce, and in good request. Beer.—There is still a large stock in the market, without any improvement in prices.

BURMAH.

RANGOON, 16th Nov.—His divine Majesty, the would-be King of Twantay, Shoay Hlab, was brought in here yesterday, together with twenty-six of his followers, having been brought in by the steamer Damoodah. It appears that the villagers, in consideration of the reward offered, i. e. 1,000 rs., armed themselves, and went in pursuit, and beat up this lot in the jungles. His Majesty did not seem to like the aspect of affairs, and looked particularly crestfallen. His costume was a dirty cloth and an old brown alpaca coat. One of the scoundrels now brought in is said to have murdered a Mr. McCrea, some four and a half years ago. I believe it is the intention of Major Phayre, the commissioner, to string up the whole of the ringleaders. Captain Ardagh, deputy commissioner, and Mr. O. Rilly, the chief magistrate, have also returned from Twantay. The Coromandel daily expected to take the 8th N. I. to Mangalore. P.S. The Australian steamer also expected to take part of the 8th. There are many sick also to go to Madras.—Madras Athenaeum.

Dec. 2, 1858.—The trial of the rebels for the late disturbances at Twantay has just been concluded, and it would appear that the fisherman, who was desirous of changing his humble occupation for the reins of power, was more "sinned against than sinning," more an instrument in the hands of designing rascals than an arch-rebel himself. Ten of the prisoners have been sentenced to be "hanged by the neck," and the remainder to take their trial for dacoity. The investigation has brought to light doings of a most discreditable character at the Twantay Court, and though these explain in some measure the cause of the revolt, they do not in any way justify the conduct of the rebels. It has been considered expedient that the extra Assistant Commissioner should be removed, or rather transferred, to another part of the province, a change which will be rather sorely felt by this official.—Hurkaru.

Occupation of Sultanpore.

Allahabad, Oct. 4, 1858.

In publishing for general information, the following letter from the adjt. gen. of the army, No. 888, dated Sept. 7, 1858, forwarding one with enclosure from Maj. gen. Sir J. Hope Grant, K.C.B., reporting the occupation of Sultanpore by the troops under the command of Brigdr. Horsford, C.B., and the passage of the Goomtee, under the Maj. gen.'s personal directions; the right hon. the gov. gen. desires to make known his high appreciation of the military skill displayed by Sir Hope Grant, during the series of operations which occupied six weeks, and ended in the passage across the Goomtee. His lordship also tenders to Brigdr. Horsford, C.B., and to all the other officers and men engaged in these operations, his warmest acknowledgments for their gallantry and efficient service.

B. J. H. BIRCH, maj. gen., Secy. to the Govt. of India, Mil. Dept., with the Govr. Genl.

From the Adj. Gen. of the Army to the Secy. Govt. of India.

Military Dept., with the Gov. Gen.

Sir,—I have the honour, by desire of the C-in-C., to enclose in original a letter dated 30th ult., No. 212, with enclosures from Maj. gen. Sir J. Hope Grant, K.C.B., reporting the occupation of Sultanpore, by the troops under Brigdr. A. H. Horsford, C.B., and the passage of the Goomtee, under the personal directions of the major general.

2. I am directed by H.E. to beg you will draw the attention of the right hon. the gov. gen., to the admirable manner in which Sir J. Hope Grant has conducted the operations of the last six weeks; and more particularly those for the passage of the Goomtee, with most imperfect means.

W. MAYHEW, Lieut. Col.,
Adj. gen. of the army.

Hd. qrs., Allahabad, Sept. 7, 1858.

To the Adj. gen. of the army.

Hd. qrs., Camp Sultanpore Cantonments,
Aug. 30, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., that under instructions received from the chief of the staff, I despatched from Fyzabad the force detailed below* under the command of Brigdr. Horsford, C.B., on the 9th inst., towards Sultanpore, to follow up the rebel forces which had been besieging Maun Sing at Shahgunge.

2. Heavy rain had fallen for some days before this force left Fyzabad, which rendered the track (there is no road) to Sultanpore, very heavy and deep in places, for the guns and the hackeries carrying the commissariat supplies. There are two considerable nuddees on this route, but by the exertions of Capt. Reid, dep. commr., they were bridged.

3. Brigdr. Horsford's despatch, detailing his operations on the 13th inst. when he drove the enemy to the right bank, and occupied Sultanpore, I have already had the honour to forward.

4. It was intended that Brigdr. Horsford should cross the Goomtee (the river Goomtee is upwards of 400 feet wide), and occupy the cantonments on the right bank, but the enemy having taken away or destroyed every boat, no bridge could be thrown across the river, and Brigdr. Horsford's instructions were not to cross without one. The right bank being in the possession of the enemy for about fifteen miles, up and down the river, it was found impracticable to bring boats from a distance.

5. In consequence of the large increase of the rebel force, amounting to about 20,000 men with fifteen guns, opposing the passage of the river, I received further instructions from the chief of the staff, to reinforce Brig. Horsford; and for this purpose I despatched the 2nd batt. of the rifle brig, and two 9-p. guns, from Fyzabad, on the 16th inst. By order of the C. in C., this entailed the following movements of the Oude force, viz.:—(1st)—the 53rd regt. from Derriabad to Fyzabad, to replace the rifles. (2nd)—the 1st B. fus. from Nawabgunge to Derriabad; and (3rd)—a wing of the 88th regt. from Lucknow to Nawabgunge, Bara Bunke.

6. In consequence of the increasing numbers of the enemy, the determined opposition shown to the passage of the river, and the importance attached to our occupying the right bank, I determined without waiting for H.E.'s instructions, to still further reinforce the Sultanpore column; and I accordingly marched from Fyzabad on the 19th inst., with the detail mentioned below.†

7. In many places along the route, the track led across cultivation, and through marshes, where the gun wheels sunk to the axle. The inf., too, were obliged to wade through sloughs frequently.

8. I arrived at Sultanpore on the 22nd inst., Brigdr. Horsford had taken up a good position, and secured an excellent point for the passage of the river. But no boats could be procured. Three small dingies were found, and of these Lieut. Raynsford had constructed a very good raft; he also had platforms for a bridge in a forward state. Three dinghies which were lying at the Biswee nuddee, nine miles distant, I had conveyed to the ghat; and three others were found sunk in the river; of these two more rafts were constructed.

9. All the preparations necessary for crossing the force on the rafts, with the exception of the heavy guns and park, were completed on the night of the 24th inst.

10. It being evident that there was no possibility of procuring boats for a bridge, until the enemy was driven from the opposite bank, I decided upon crossing without one.

* Art.—F. tr. R.H.A.; Cav.—A wing 7th hussars, detach. Hodson's horse; Inf.—1st Madras fus., 5th Panj. rifles, detach. Madras sappers.

† Art.—heavy batt. R.A.; Cav.—hd. qrs. and wing H.M. 7th hussars; Inf.—hd. qrs. and wing H.M.'s 53rd regt., detach. Madras sappers and miners.

11. The force of the enemy occupied several positions. The main position was at Hassenpore, about four miles from cantonments. In the cantonments there was another large body and eight guns; and two villages in front of the point at which I intended crossing, were also occupied. Besides the above, there was picquets along the bank of the river, and several batteries and a regiment watched the Dhera Ghat, where it was said there were some boats.

12. On the 22nd inst., I received intelligence that Bene Madho had arrived at the rebel camp, bringing a strong reinforcement, but the numbers were variously reported.

13. The heavy guns being in position to cover the operation, and keep down the fire of the enemy, the force commenced passing over on the morning of the 25th.

By 4 p.m. the Madras fus., the 5th Punj. rifles, two 9-p. guns, and a detach. of Hodson's horse had crossed, and I ordered this force to advance under the command of Lieut. col. Galway, and take and occupy the two villages in my front. On the approach of the column, the enemy fled; the villages were occupied; and I thus secured an excellent position; the river which here forms a loop, protecting the flanks of the advanced line.

14. There was much difficulty in swimming the horses across the river, and all the force had not got over till late on the 27th.

15. On the 28th, I had my arrangements made for attacking the rebels at the cantonment on the following morning at daybreak. On that afternoon, the enemy came out in strong force, and attacked my position. They were easily repulsed, and driven back; but as it was late when this was accomplished, I did not think it advisable then to follow them up. The following morning I advanced at four o'clock, but found that the cantonment was deserted.

16. The enemy retreated towards the southwest, but it is not ascertained yet what position they intend taking up.

17. This district is now clear of rebels; and the right bank of the river being free, boats for a bridge will be up in a couple of days.

18. I beg to bring to the notice of H.E. the C. in C., the efficient co-operation and support received from Brigdr. Horsford, C.B., comdg. the inf. brig.; Lieut. col. Sir W. Russell, bart., who commanded the cav., and superintended the out-post duty; and Maj. Yates, R.H.A., who commanded the art. Officers comd. regts., troops, and detachments:—Lieut. col. Hill, 2nd batt. rifle brig.; Lieut. col. Galway, 1st Madras fus.; Lieut. col. Payn, H.M.'s 53rd regt.; Maj. Horne, 7th hussars; Maj. Vaughan, 5th Punjaub rifles; Maj. Daly, C.B., irreg. cav.; Lieut. Strange, R.A.; Lieut. Lyon, R.H.A., were most attentive in superintending the crossing of their men and horses.

The two heavy guns under charge of Lieut. Warren, rendered good service.

Brigdr. Horsford speaks most favourably of his staff. Maj. Mollan, maj. of brig.; surg. Fraser, 2nd batt. rifle brig.; Lieut. Ramsbottom, 2nd batt. rifle brig., orderly officer; and Capt. Graeme, dep. asst. coms. genl., who was very efficient in keeping the troops supplied.

I have great satisfaction in bringing to the notice of H.E. the C. in C. the zeal and unceasing exertions of Lieut. Scott, field engr., and Lieut. Raynsford, comdg. the Madras Sappers, in preparing the rafts, and crossing over the troops. Everything had to be made upon the spot, and the material to be collected from houses in the town. These two officers and the detach. of Madras Sappers (who worked, as I never saw native soldiers work before) were employed day and night, with very few hours' interval during the operation.

From the civil officers attached to this column, Saint G. Tucker, esq., Capt. Reid and W. Forbes, esq., I have received every assistance; and Capt. Reid used every exertion to procure boats for a bridge; but for the reasons above stated, he was unsuccessful.

All officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of this column, have performed their various duties cheerfully and well, and deserve my full approval. I have particularly to notice the great assistance rendered by the Punj. rifles and Maj. Daly's corps in swimming across the art. and 7th hussars horses.

I beg also to mention my divisional and personal staff, Maj. Hamilton, dep. asst. adjt. gen.; Capt. the hon. A. Anson, A.D.C.; also Maj. Wolesey, who as dep. asst. q. m. gen., had the superintendence of the arrangements for crossing the river, and who performed them to my perfect satisfaction.

J. HOPE GRANT, Maj. genl.
Comdg. Oude Force.

Operations in Behar.

To the Adjt.-Gen. of the Army, Hd. Qrs., Allahabad.
Bulliah, August 26th, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to state, for the information of H. E. the C.-in-C., that, having at Dinapore, during the night of the 14th inst., received urgent despatches, stating that the post at Russoorah in the Ghazepore district was being besieged by a force said to be 2,500 strong, I determined to proceed there to relieve it. I also understand that the intention of the rebels was to cross the Ganges, and join the force under Ummer Singh. On the 15th, two companies of the 35th arrived in the steamer Jumna, and I went on board, accompanied by Maj. Sir H. Havelock, and Capt. Stevenson; sailed on the morning of the 16th, but, owing to the strength of the current, did not arrive at Bulliah, till the afternoon of the 18th. I sent a steamer to Buxar, for a party of the 84th. I had already sent orders for a force of cavalry to cross over; the troops arrived in the course of the 19th, 20th, started with the troops detailed below for Russoorah, no tents or baggage of any kind whatever being taken; halted half way and bivouacked. 21st, marched to Russoorah. On our arrival there, found that the rebels had left the day before for Rutsur, having besieged the place for two days. I enclose Lieut. Freeman's, 63rd N.I., report. At 5 p.m. marched off again for Narach, the rain falling in torrents, and the men constantly up to their middles in water; owing to the flooded state of the country, the Guide lost his way, and at 8 p.m. we found ourselves at the village of Gopalpoor, where we bivouacked; the greater part of the villagers had left, and the men were quartered in the houses. 22nd, the country was so inundated, we were obliged to march by Gurwar to get to Rutsur; halted at Gurwar, hearing here that the rebels had gone to Bansdee, I sent the cav. and Sikh inf. under Capt. McMullin to Bulliah, with orders to move north towards the enemy. 23rd, marched to Rutsur, my object being to prevent the rebels crossing the Ganges, or turning westward; heard that they had gone to Saitwar. 24th, very wet day, marched to Bansdee, heard that Capt. McMullin had come up with the rebels near Reotee, and had defeated them. I enclose his report. In the evening, a party of about 100 sepoys attacked a convoy of provisions coming from Bulliah, but were beaten off by the escort; another party passed Bansdee during the night, going westward. 25th, I intended to have marched to Saitwar, but received information that the rebels had broken up into small parties, and were going in different directions, and seeing how hopeless it was to pursue them any farther I marched to Bulliah, and the troops returned to their quarters. I am happy to say, although the men were constantly wet through, that they have returned in good health; some of the marches were very trying on account of the alternate heat and wet, and the difficult state of the country for moving in. I beg to thank all for the cheerful manner in which their duty was performed. Sir H. Havelock and Mr. Probyn, Joint Magistrate of Ghazepore, who accompanied the force, were most active in gaining information:—

- 1 officer, 50 sabres, military train.
- 1 European officer, 72 sabres, 3rd Sikh Cavalry.
- 7 officers, 194 men, 35th regiment.
- 7 officers, 180 men, 84th regiment.
- 2 European officers, 300 men, 2nd Punjaub inf.

JOHN DOUGLAS, Brigdr.

Camp Rusaarah, August 21st, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for information of the Brigdr. Comdg. the Behar field force, that the rebels came in great numbers from Nagra to Rusaarah on the 18th inst.; their sowars came in sight first at about 8-30 A.M.; they were followed by sepoys, matchlockmen and rabble. On approaching Rusaarah, they divided into two parties; one party went into a thick clump of trees in front of the serai occupied by the Sikhs; the other party went into the city on the opposite side, and behind some ruined houses, trees, &c., from which they fired occasional shots upon a party of Sikhs, whom I had detached to garrison a mosque which overlooked the serai. On the rebels first appearing, I sent two troopers of the 4th Madras L. C., with a letter to Lieut. Steward of that regt., who was in command of a troop at Mhedabad. I afterwards heard that they had been killed by a party of rebels, who had been sent in advance to intercept my messengers. Owing to the nature of the ground in front of the serai, and to my detach. having been weakened by my having to garrison the mosque, I did not venture to attack the rebels. At about three o'clock P.M., the serai was set on fire by a villager: he was shot. The bheesties behaved very well; they got upon the roof of the serai, and succeeded in extinguishing the fire. In the evening, a fakcer volunteered to take a letter to Bulliah, done up in a cake; he was caught by the rebels, and the next morning came back with his left arm cut off at the elbow, his right arm gashed, the fingers of his right hand cut nearly through at the top joints, his nose cut off, and shot in three places. I took him into the serai, and made him over to the native doctor, but he died. During the night, the serai was again set fire to in two places; the fire was, however, extinguished before any damage was done. During the whole of the 19th inst., the serai was surrounded by the rebels, but no attempt was made to set it on fire. On the 20th inst., at about 4-30 P.M., the rebels who occupied the patch of jungle in front of the serai, withdrew towards Nagra. Subadar Nehal Singh, and about twelve sepoys, made a rush from the mosque to where some rebels had been firing from behind a mound of earth, trees, and ruined houses; they say they found about fifty men cooking; they all ran away, leaving a few arms behind, which were seized by the Sikhs. During the night, all the remaining rebels left Rusaarah. I wish to bring to the notice of the Brigdr. comdg. the Behar field force, the untiring vigilance and courage displayed by the whole of the detachment under my command. It is mainly owing to the exertions of the Sikhs in fortifying the mosque with bags of earth, on the 17th inst., that the siege was not attended with a greater loss of life. The thannadars and zemindars, who had retired into the serai, were most patient and persevering in watching the loopholes night and day. To Subadar Nehal Singh, and Havildars Misur Singh and Goojar Singh, I am particularly indebted for the active assistance they rendered me on every occasion.

FREDK. P. W. FREEMAN, Ensign 63 N. I.,
Comdg. detach. 2nd Police Batt.

Camp Bulliah, Aug. 25, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Brig. Douglas, C.B., comdg., that I marched from Bulliah, on the morning of the 23rd inst., 8 A.M., with a detach. as detailed below, for Reotee, distant 17 miles. I halted at Gherowlee for a couple of hours, to enable the mil. train to have their dinner, proceeded again at 2 P.M., and reached Gaighat at 6, where I found that the rebels in force had occupied a village about a mile and a half this side of the Reotee. H.M.'s 2nd batt. mil. train; 1 officer and 49 men under Lieut. De Vine; 3rd regt. Sikh cav.; 6 officers and 21 men under Lieut. Battye; 2nd regt. Sikh Pol. batt.; 6 officers and 252 men under Capt. Mullin. A large jheel covered the right of their position, and thick fields of Indian corn extended round the other sides. I ordered out 50 Sikhs as skirmishers, who, on reaching the village itself, were unable to effect an entry. I then advanced with the remainder of the Sikhs, and at their head stormed the position, cleared it, and followed up the enemy for a quarter of a mile, when, night coming on, I was compelled to halt.

The mil. train could not follow up the advantage we had gained, the lateness of the hour and the very high-standing crops completely hiding the hurried retreat of the rebels. They were, however, of great assistance in enabling me to bring forward the whole of the Sikhs out on rear-guard.

Our loss, I regret to say, was rather heavy, but to be expected, owing to the strong position and large numbers of the enemy, who, I should say, could not have counted less than 500 Sepoys, 25 of whom were killed, and about 40 wounded, among the former one native officer.

Several Cabul, Sutlege, and Punjab medals were found on the bodies of the killed.

Night having completely set in even before the village had been cleared, I bivouacked in a tope on the Reotee side of it for the night. It rained heavily from midnight till 11 A.M., the following day, when, on receipt of intelligence that the enemy had made off across country in the direction of Huldee and Bulliah, I returned with my wounded (a list of whom is enclosed) to the latter place.

I beg to bring to the notice of the brigadier the services rendered by Mr. Probyn, jt. magistrate, Lieut. Champain, engr., and Mr. Dunne; these officers rode on some miles ahead of the detachment with a few Sikh sowars, and brought me back intelligence of the enemy, having ridden up close to their position.

J. R. McMULLIN, Captain.
Comdg. Detach.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, Jan. 21, 1859.

THE LATE CAPTAIN SHEPHERD.

CAPTAIN JOHN SHEPHERD was the second son of the late Rev. Robert Shepherd, a clergyman of the Church of Scotland, and was born in the year 1796. He entered the maritime service of the East-India Company at the early age of fourteen, and was appointed to the command of the ship Berwickshire in the year 1821, which command he retained until 1827.

He was elected a Director of the East-India Company in 1835, and was chosen deputy-chairman in April, 1843, and chairman in the following year. He again filled the office of deputy-chairman in 1849, and that of chairman in 1850, and, on his vacating office in 1851, was immediately re-elected chairman for another year. His services on the occasion of the outbreak in India, and the extraordinary demand which consequently arose for means of transport for troops, were recognised by an unanimous vote of thanks from the Court of Directors.

On the transfer of the Government of India to the Crown, he was one of those chosen by the Court of Directors from their own body to form one of the Council of India; and on his recent retirement, in consequence of the state of his health, he had the gratification of receiving a resolution, unanimously passed by the Council, expressive of their regret at the loss of his services.

Captain Shepherd also for some years held the posts of Deputy-Master of the Trinity Corporation, and Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company; and he was likewise a Royal Commissioner of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and a member of the Commission last year appointed to inquire as to the manning of the navy.

He married Anne, second daughter of the late James Stevens, Esq., of the Bombay Civil Service, and lost three sons in the service of the East India Company. The eldest two were in the Bengal Civil Service, and fell early victims to the climate of India. His third son entered the Bengal Cavalry, served during the last war in Burmah, and was one of the garrison of Lucknow, but was killed during the siege.

THE MADRAS UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

WHEN it is known that no fewer than thirty-five thousand natives are employed in the Uncovenanted Civil Service of the Madras Presidency, it can hardly be matter of surprise that both the local and home Governments should be anxious to impart the highest degree of efficiency to such a large body of public servants. If careless, incompetent, or unscrupulous individuals were to compose the majority, the amount of malversation, and consequent oppression of the poorer inhabitants, would be almost incalculable. It is, therefore, quite as much to the interest of the people as to that of their rulers that the intermediate officials should be selected, in the first instance, with the utmost discrimination, and encouraged, by the prospect of advancement, to discharge their respective duties with zeal, intelligence, and integrity. With the view to obtain this desirable result, the Madras Government lately submitted for the sanction of the Court of Directors a series of rules and regulations for the general improvement of this important branch of the public service.

The Uncovenanted Service appears to be divided into three grades, the lowest comprising all appointments under Rs. 75 per mensem, and subdivided into three sections; 1st, all below Rs. 25; 2nd, from Rs. 25 to 50; and 3rd, from Rs. 50 to 75. The second ranges from Rs. 75 to 250, and is subdivided into two classes; namely, from Rs. 75 to 150, and from Rs. 150 to 250, while the third grade embraces all appointments drawing higher salaries than the above-mentioned. The scheme of examinations proposed by the local Government has since been modified and rendered more simple, at the suggestion of the Court of Directors, and the system generally has been put into easier working order than was at first contemplated. The chief difficulty now on the part of candidates for Government employment is to get admitted into the service, even in the lowest grade. Having once obtained a footing, it is a man's own fault if he do not rise to the highest posts in his department. No fixed period of service in any particular grade is required to be passed before promotion to a higher one is practicable. A man's success will depend as entirely upon his own merit as can be provided for by any human arrangements. The subjects of examination are divided into "essentials" and "non-essentials." In the former category are placed a knowledge of the vernacular language of the district in which the candidate seeks employment, arithmetic, the elementary principles of law, the Acts and Regulations of Government, and the judicial or revenue administration of the Presidency, according as the candidate selects the one or other of these branches. The "non-essential" subjects of examination—an acquaintance with which, however, is certain to lead to distinction—are English, arithmetic, and book-keeping in the English manner, history, geography, political economy, and certain branches of science. The Court of Directors wisely set their faces against the proposition to class a knowledge of the English language among the essential subjects, and the reasons they assigned for so doing are highly creditable to their sagacity.

"We do not think"—say they—"that the time has arrived when, with due regard to the efficiency of the public officers and the satisfactory despatch of the business of the many millions of native subjects in India, you can require a knowledge of English from every person in your employ drawing a salary of more than fifty rupees a month. A rule of this kind would have the effect of throwing appointments into the hands of individuals educated at English schools to the exclusion of a larger number of persons to be found throughout the Presidency who, notwithstanding their ignorance of English, may prove very valuable public servants. It may be well to encourage lads of superior abilities to learn English, and we could have no objection to your giving a knowledge of English a high place in the list of 'non-essential' subjects for all candidates, but those to be employed in offices in which such knowledge is indispensable, but we feel satisfied of the impropriety of a rule which requires from every Moonsiff and Tahsildar a high proficiency in English as an indispensable qualification for office. We may further remark that the inevitable tendency of surrounding our covenanted officers with men conversant with English, will be a neglect on the part of the former of the languages of the country, a result which, for the sake of our native subjects in general, we should deeply deplore. We consider it of far greater importance that our European officers should be able to converse in the native languages with the people of the country, and to read with ease and to scrutinise all documents so written, than that the native officers should be acquainted with the language of their European superiors."

Not less sensible are their remarks upon the necessity of considering a candidate's general capacity and character as more important than the extent of his scholastic attainments; the object being to obtain intelligent, well-educated, upright, practical men, and not mere book-worms or brilliant meteors. It is also provided that Heads of Offices may select from among the passed candidates those who seem to them best calculated for any particular duty, without reference to their standing on the examiners' lists. With regard to promotion the directors express a reasonable belief that by means of ordinary discernment and strict supervision, assisted by the register of the official career of every member of the Uncovenanted Service, no Heads of official offices should experience any difficulty in ascertaining the character and qualifications of individuals in that public employ, and in confidently deciding upon their claims to promotion. This new scheme was to come into play on the first day of the present year, and certainly appears to be singularly practical and free from utopian absurdities. Of its ultimate success there can scarcely be a doubt.

THE ENAM COMMISSIONS.

OUR Indian contemporaries are unanimous in expressing their astonishment at the infatuation of their rulers in reviving and extending their vexatious inquiries into the titles of the enamdars. An enam differs from a jaghire in this, that, while the latter requires military or other State service from the holder, the former implies the most entire and absolute possession. "The title deeds of an enamdar," said Mr. Warden before the Colonization Committee, "are much more copious than any title deeds in this country. They give a man the land, the trees, the water, the treasure on the surface, and the treasure below—in fact, language is exhausted in its attempt to convey to him the proprietary right in the soil." On the conquest of the Mahratta country Mr. Elphinstone, then Governor of Bombay, appointed a commission for the equitable adjustment of private claims and for the general settlement of the district. "The rule was, that any man, who had official possession of an enam, that is, whose enam was found recorded in the Peshwah's records, and also actual possession, got his enam confirmed to him; if, on the other hand, it was found that he had not official or actual possession, then his enam was taken away from him." After a time it was discovered that ten or twelve villages had been overlooked which, according to the Peshwah's records, ought to have been resumed. This fact being ascertained, those enams were very properly cancelled, but the Government, excited by the hope of further spoils, was not to be satisfied with legitimate success. In 1827 an Act was passed depriving the Peshwah's subjects of the privilege of suing the Government for the recovery of enams in the ordinary courts of justice, that is, "before the revenue authorities, with special appeals to the Sudder Court and to her Majesty in Council." In other words, there was no redress to be obtained for a wrong judgment except by appeal from the decision of an Assistant Commissioner to the Commissioner himself, and from that functionary to the Governor in Council, but without the appellant being allowed to appear in person or be heard by counsel; the Government thus acting as plaintiff and judge in the last instance. Nor was this all. It was further enacted that "Enjoyment for thirty years is a sufficient title to exemption from the payment of public revenue, and such enjoyment for twelve years only antecedent to the date when the territory in which the land is situated came into the possession of the British Government is equivalent to enjoyment for thirty years." As Mr. Warden sensibly observes, "It might have been expected that the East India Company, when they did proceed to the adjudication of titles to land in the Deccan, would have done so before the lapse of time had established prescriptive titles." On the contrary, it was not until the exigencies of Government in 1852 caused them to look around all sides for further sources of revenue, that any investigation was instituted into the title-deeds of the enamdars. The old regulations had by that time grown almost obsolete, and outlived the object for which they were instituted. The lapse of time alone had established a prescriptive right to the enams granted by the Peshwah. But Government was not thus to be foiled. "Necessity, the tyrant's plea," prompted them to a most unjust and iniquitous exercise of despotic power. It was now enacted that sixty years' enjoyment should be required, instead of thirty, to constitute a prescriptive right, and that these sixty years must have been antecedent to the introduction of the British rule, and consequently ninety-five years previous to the institution of the suit, so that at the present day a title to be valid must be upwards of a hundred years old. It was the fashion last session to inveigh against Lord Canning's Oude Proclamation, but that was embued with the milk of human kindness compared with this act of spoliation. Prescription, moreover, was declared "not to arise from the efflux of time only, but (to be) dependent likewise on what should appear in the bills of mortality; and females were altogether deprived of their inheritance." And when it is remembered that in all other parts of India twelve years' possession before the British accession was held to constitute a sufficient title, the injustice of this special provision with regard to enams will appear in a still more glaring light. Quite consistently with this arbitrary requisition, a mean and dastardly attempt was made to conciliate priests and impostors of either creed by excepting all enams granted to mosques, idolatrous temples, Mahomedan moulvies, and Hindoo astrologers. Finally, as the sans of injustice, the onus probandi is thrown upon the defendant. The Government, in fact, call upon every enamdar to show cause why he should not summarily be deprived of privileges which he and his ancestors have enjoyed without molestation for at least forty years, and in many instances for double that period. It is worthy of note, too, that, while professing the most tender regard for native customs and usages, the Government has never scrupled to set them at naught when they interfered with the annexation of states or the collection of revenue. Thus the Hindoo custom and rite of adoption has been summarily suppressed, and in the case before us females also have been declared incapable of inheriting. Is it wonderful, then, that the natives should no longer exhibit that confidence in the good faith and strict justice of their Christian conquerors that was formerly such a noble testimony to the moral superiority of the latter? And for what great object is the risk to be borne of causing dissatisfaction and distrust throughout the Deccan? Of what value is the addition already made to the annual revenues of British India? It is estimated that, up to the outbreak of the mutinies, 6,002 cases had been adjudicated out of 100,286 recorded; and that the probable accession to the revenue from the resumption already made will be about £43,000, of which rather more than £27,000 will not be recoverable until after the lapse of one, two, or three lives! This is the tangible result of a Commission sitting continually for four years, and to obtain which the Government has thought it worth while to excite discontent in the northern and southern divisions of the Bombay Presidency, and to unsettle men's minds throughout the peninsula of India. This most unpopular movement is, besides, unnecessary and superfluous. As the Government grants no fresh enams, and adopted heirs are not recognised, in the course of time the enamdars would disappear of themselves. Experience has shown how rapidly jaghires lapse to the Government from want of heirs, and it is not likely that the holders of enams are subject to a different law of nature. It has been computed that if all enams were at once to be resumed, the revenue would benefit to the extent of one million sterling per annum, and it is urged that it is very unfair to exempt any class of citizens from bearing their proportion of the burdens of the State. A million sterling per annum is, in truth, a dazzling temptation, especially with an income unequal to the annual expenditure; but we trust that it will not yet avail to turn the balance against the national honour and the good faith of Government. We cannot believe that Lord Stanley will sanction the perpetuation of this undoubted wrong and grievous scandal. The revival of the Enam Commission in the Bombay Presidency, and its extension to that of Madras, is certainly at variance with the spirit of the Royal Proclamation, and the promise to respect "the feelings of attachment with which the natives of India regard the land inherited by them from their ancestors;" nor is it more consistent with the expressed will of the Sovereign, that "due regard be paid to the ancient rights, usages, and customs of India." If the exigencies of the local Governments render them blind to the consequences of their acts, provided only they can gather money for immediate necessities, we doubt not that the Secretary of State for India will restrain them in their disgraceful and fatal fatuity.

ISTHMUS OF KRAW CANAL.

An impression is entertained that by a water cut of twelve miles across a particular part of the Malayan peninsula, a saving of 1,175 miles might be effected in the distance between Calcutta and China. At present the voyage from India to Canton involves a long détour by the Straits of Malacca, the whole of which would be avoided if a transit could be effected at a spot called the Isthmus of Kraw, situated at the southern extremity of the kingdom of Siam. According to Siamese official statements there is a navigable river on this side of that isthmus, separated only by twelve miles from another river on the eastern side, which, without falls or rapids, runs through a well-inhabited country abounding in rice and cattle, into the Bay of Siam. Sir John Bowring also has stated that the direct passage across the isthmus is about fifty miles, and that from information furnished to him, it would appear that "a few miles of canalisation are alone required to unite these navigable communications as they now exist." The subject was brought to the notice of the late Government by Mr. Henry Wise, and instructions were forthwith given by Lord Clarendon, in order that the exact capabilities of the route should be ascertained. This examination has been delayed by the illness of Sir Robert Schomberg, the British Consul at Siam; but it is now hoped that an early mail will bring detailed intelligence. Meanwhile the Chamber of Commerce at Bombay have expressed a strong opinion of the importance of the question, and their desire to promote its success. The following communication has also been received from Sir John Bowring:—

"Government-house, Hong Kong,
Nov. 11, 1858.

"Sir,—I have received with much pleasure your favour of the 18th of September, with its inclosure, on the subject of uniting, by a ship canal, the two bays of Bengal and Siam.

"In the success of this project I feel the deepest interest. It had for many years occupied my attention, and I rejoiced in the opportunity afforded me while negotiating the Siamese Treaty of frequently discussing the subject with the Kings and Ministers at Bangkok.

"These friendly conferences were not, I believe, without effect in removing some of the objections and difficulties which existed at the Siamese Court.

"I have had the opportunity at different times of examining the topic with our naval authorities, and hoped ere now that her Majesty's surveying ships in the Gulf of Siam would have been able to make a report. The serious indisposition of the consul, Sir Robert Schomberg, has, however, delayed the prosecution of the local inquiry. It is not necessary I should add that her Majesty's Government have given instructions to have the matter thoroughly investigated; on my part I shall be but too happy to lend a cordial co-operation.

"I have the honour to be, sir,

"Your most obedient humble servant,

"Henry Wise, Esq., Lloyds."

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA.

The directors of this company state, in their half-yearly report just issued, that they have the satisfaction of informing the proprietors that the surveys of 117 miles of the second concession (Bombay Extension) from Surat to the Veturnee River, have been completed, and have received the sanction of the Bombay Government, in the following terms:—"Government derive much gratification from the information which these papers convey, of the line which has been laid out from Surat to the Veturnee River, through a country which it was feared would present very serious engineering difficulties. The line, as regards its curves and gradients, is unexceptionable; and the advantage which it secures in these respects has been gained without any considerable departure from the direct course, passing near all the chief towns in the district." They considered that the shareholders would appreciate this expression of the Government's approval of the line as laid out, when they were reminded that the ruling gradient over the whole length of the line from Ahmedabad to the Veturnee River did not exceed 1 in 500. The directors congratulate the proprietary on the prospect of the imme-date opening of the first portion of the line. The section from Surat to Baroda, a distance of eighty miles, would, with the exception of the two bridges now in course of erection over the Taptee and Ner-budda Rivers, be completed and ready for opening in February next. Up to the 2nd of October last the authority of the Bombay Government had been given for taking continuous possession of the land for thirty-two and a-half miles of the line, from Surat southwards, and the construction of the earthworks was progressing. Three subsequent sanctions, dated in November last, had placed land in the possession of the company for about sixty-six miles of railway in the aggregate south of Surat. A call of £4. 10s. per share upon each share in the original capital of the company was made on the 10th of December last, and as the works are being vigorously pressed forward with a view to opening at the earliest possible date the Bombay Extension Line, it would be necessary, ere long, that further calls should be made. The capital account showed that £833,994 had been received, and £671,704 expended, leaving balances of £125,702 in the hands of the Secretary of State in Council for India, and £36,588 at the bankers, and in India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONFIRMATION OF THE PRINCESS VICTORIA OF COORG.—Her Majesty having expressed a wish that her goddaughter, the Princess Victoria Gowianna of Coorg, should be confirmed, the ceremony took place on Monday last at Kew Church, and was performed by the Lord Bishop of Winchester. The Princess was accompanied by her father, the Rajah of Coorg, the Dowager Lady Hardinge, and her guardian, Sir James Weir Hogg, Bart.; also by Sir John and Lady Login (under whose care her Majesty has now placed the Princess), and a numerous circle of friends. After the ceremony the party returned to the residence of the Princess, Church House, Kew, and partook of luncheon.

THE ISLANDS OF JAPAN.—With his usual enterprise Mr. Wyld has published an excellent map of the Islands of Jesso, Nippon, Sikoke, and Kinsin, which constitute the empire of Japan. Mr. Wyld has so accustomed the public to expect immediate delineations of every region, city, mountain, river, and fortress, as soon as it becomes an object of passing interest, that we have ceased to marvel at the extraordinary rapidity—combined with accuracy—of his numerous publications. The map now before us is, in every respect, worthy of his high reputation as a cartographer.

TRADE, &c., OF CEYLON.—In 1856 (the year to which all our statements have reference) the total population of Ceylon (besides the military) numbered 1,691,924 souls—viz., 873,939 males and 798,181 females, together with 19,804 aliens and strangers. The area of Ceylon is 24,700 square miles. There were 41,611 births, 14,655 marriages, and 30,730 deaths. There were 23,348 males and females under course of instruction in the different schools of the island. 560,025 persons were engaged in agriculture, 49,367 in manufactures, and 70,886 in commerce. The revenue amounted to £504,175, and the expenditure to £457,137. Customs yielded £151,067; land sales, £23,946; land revenue, £57,324; rents, £37,434; licences, £73,324; stamps, £31,024; sale of Government property, £75,752; and miscellaneous, £18,091. As regards the expenditure £54,950 were appropriated to civil, and £40,996 to judicial establishments; £7,562 to education, and £20,890 to police and gnaols; works and buildings took £24,732, the commissariat, £53,872, and the military force, £24,000. 3,276 vessels, of 345,592 tons, entered inwards, and 3,308 of 335,479 tons, cleared outwards. The value of the imports was £2,714,565, and that of the exports £1,663,612. £537,934 worth of goods was imported from the United Kingdom, and £872,178 exported thither. The exports include areca nuts, cinnamon, coffee, cotton goods, cocoa-nut oil and specie. In 1856 there were 771,170 acres of land under crop, 345,932 under pasture, and 5,037,303 acres uncultivated. The produce of the crops was 5,106,477 bushels of paddy, 876,889 bushels of fine grain, 643,584 bushels of coffee, 3,831 bushels of pepper, 22,566 bushels of Indian corn, 15,500 bushels of gingely, 147,088lb. of cotton, and 3,606,235lb. of tobacco. There were 3,180 horses, 785,078 horned cattle, 55,792 goats, and 47,916 sheep. Domestic labour fetched 6d. per day, or £1 to £2 per month; predial service, 15s. to £2. 10s. per month; and trades, 6d. per day, or £2 to £3 per month.

MR. BUTT, M.P.—It is understood that Isaac Butt, Esq., Q.C., M.P. for Youghal, will shortly proceed to India for the purpose of prosecuting against the local government of Bombay the claim preferred by Ali Moorad Khan, one of the four amiers of Upper Scinde, to the inheritance of which he considers himself wrongfully deprived.—Cork Advertiser.

MR. MURRAY IN PERSIA.—The Teheran Gazette, which is as veracious, and, perhaps, more so, than its London namesake, makes the following amende to Mr. Murray in one of its recent numbers:—"When his Excellency Mr. Murray, the British Minister at this Court, first came to Persia, only a short time elapsed before a coolness arose between him and the chief servant of the Government, and certain unsuitable imputations were then directed at his Excellency. This even went so far as to be published in the Gazette, and in a Book of History which has been circulated in the country. On inquiry being made and the facts re-examined it has become clear that these statements were entirely without foundation, and that they were pure inventions and calumnies. Therefore, for the purpose of clearing up this matter, we have now caused this statement to be published in the Gazette of this week, so that it may be evident and known to all its readers that his Excellency Mr. Murray and the opposite party [this refers to the wife of Hashem Khan] are entirely free from these charges and imputations. This announcement will also be published in the History of Persia, in order to remove all doubts."

BOOKS.

My Escape from the Mutinies in Oudh. By a Wounded Officer. In two vols. London: Richard Bentley.

This very pleasantly told story of a soldier's life in India is slightly misnamed. It is true the most elaborate and interesting part of the tale relates to the imaginary wanderings of three officers fleeing for their lives from their maddened and deluded sepoys, but the space actually occupied by those thrilling accidents by flood and field is less than half a volume. However, we are not disposed to quarrel with the author about the title of his work, and every publisher knows full well that there is very much in a name, and that a rose would have a decided oniony flavour if it were called an "ingen." Besides, Captain Gibney's object—for the incognito has long ceased to be kept—was evidently to describe the career of an officer in the Company's service from his birth to his marriage; the latter momentous event occurring after some twelve years' campaigning. We are not certain, indeed, that lady readers will not prefer the account of the hero's school-boy adventures and his subsequent love-passages when at home on sick leave, to the more stirring and weighty events and reflections that belong to his Indian experiences. To these, however, we cannot further refer than to recognise the artistic manner in which the plot generally is constructed and carried out. Our business is rather with the judicious observations on several Indian matters casually introduced into the thread of the narrative, and which evince a shrewd sense and sound judgment. It is thus the author condemns the "hutting" allowances made to non-commissioned officers and sepoys, though withheld from the European officers.

"It has always appeared to me a most invidious distinction to make between the native officers and men and the European superior. Often have I been asked by sepoys why the Government give to a subadar thirty-seven rupees to build a hut that they know does not cost him twenty, and yet neither give nor lend one anna to the white officer, although they know that few, if any of them, have anything but their pay, and that they must borrow at ruinous interest, from either natives or a bank, to save themselves from the almost certain death that exposure to the hot winds and rains would entail should they not build. I could not tell them why it was, and why many other things were given to them, such as extra pay when marching, tents found and carried for them, and six months' leave of absence almost every two years; to say nothing of their home remittances being at sight, and their officers' drafts being always at ten days.

On the laxity of discipline that had crept into the service, Captain Gibney has much to say, nor does he deal sparingly with the Brahmanised Dunderheads in command of regiments. His reflections on the annexation of Oude are singularly pertinent, and worthy of consideration. Of the measure he approves in unequivocal terms, though he deprecates the weak, blundering, self-complacent, and presumptuous manner in which it was executed. But at this moment we would especially direct public attention to the following extract, for which alone we can make room. We trust, however, that Captain Gibney will not rest satisfied with his first success, but rather be encouraged to try his hand in a bolder line.

"What do the men care for all that about Sebastopol?" said Stumps (alluding to the grandiloquent proclamation on the conclusion of the Crimean war), "they don't understand one-half of it."

"No, that they don't," I replied. "I spoke to some of the men about it as I came home, and all they said was bheant tope, lots of guns. I don't think they quite believe it, and the language it is written in is so fine that they cannot understand it."

"I saw yesterday," said Waller, "this proclamation stuck up in our quarter-guard, all over the bazaar, and in the native city; and every bit of it was printed in the Persian character, and crammed with hard Arabic words. Why do not the Government issue a thing that the poorest and most ignorant can read and understand? Here in India there are one hundred and fifty million Hindoos, more or less, understanding the Nagari character and plain Hindustani; and yet they print off thousands of these proclamations in Persian character, using Arabic words and numerals, whereas there are not ten million Musulmans in India, and they only use these letters."

"I do not know," I replied, "about the proportion of Hindoos to Mussulmans; but believe it is at least fifteen to one. But don't you see how everything, even the answers to sepoys' petitions, is wrapped up in this so-called court language? Why, they emanate from the civil authorities, who are surrounded by cringing Mussulmans, and in those courts nothing else but this gibberish is talked. It used to be the court language; and all the rulers being proud of their descent, endeavoured to prove it by the large admission of Persian and Arabic words. We adopted the system, and as a civilian likes to talk fine, and to show off his acquaintance with Hafiz, he permits Persian to be almost entirely used in his court, and Government, which is, after all, all civilians, believe it is the language of the country."

"I have often thought of this," said Stumps, "and consider it very unfair to the poor man, who probably does not understand one word that is said to him, besides being bullied by every blackguard Mahomedan in the court. If he is a Hindoo he is not likely to have anything explained to him, and the Huzoor is far too great a chief to let the half naked man before him know that the gabbled Persian he has been listening to, is evidence for or against him, and that grada hurdee adab, 'more is disrespectful' means the little word bus, or 'enough,' in his own tongue."

"Our courts are iniquitous, I think," I said. "I have been down day after day to the collector or deputy, or whatever the man calls himself, about the robbery of brass pots that took place in our bazaar, and never saw such a prostitution of justice. Prisoners and witnesses jumbled up anyhow; every blackguard, from the head nigger down to the chuprassie, can ask what questions they like, either of witnesses or prisoners; and actually the evidence of witnesses is taken down in writing, not in the presence of the judge. Yesterday the two fellows that were caught were brought up, and the chief witness against them was Seu Nerain, sepoy. To my surprise Seu Nerain's evidence was read out to the deputy in language that neither the sepoy nor his father before him ever used or understood. He was then asked if this was what he said, 'Ham, yes,' replied Seu Nerain. 'Then,' said the deputy, turning to the prisoner, 'bolo, speak;' and after the poor wretch, first looking at one hairy, turbaned Mahomedan near him, who had probably threatened him with torture by the chilly, then to another who had perhaps tried what effect stones and mud on his stomach had had—replied, 'Ap maaf ke jish, please excuse me, sir,' and was then sentenced to two years."

Oude: its Past and its Future. By L. E. R. Rees, F.R.G.S. Longman and Co.

Mr. Rees has acted judiciously in reprinting for the benefit of the home public the burden of certain papers formerly published in the Calcutta Review and in Saunders' Magazine for all India. A more striking contrast could hardly be presented than the sombre painting of the condition of Oude under a native government, and the bright sketch of its possible future under a just and firm administration. In the old time, or rather during the latter years of its independence, nine-tenths of the arable land in Oude were permitted to lie untilled, and in addition to the great Terai forest nine hundred square miles were occupied with belts and patches of jungle. It must not be supposed that the word "jungle" is applied only to lands unfitted for culture. A large portion of these wastes, for instance, contained the best soil in the kingdom, but as a means of defence they were oftentimes more valued by the landholders than the richest and most fruitful fields. "In Oude, to be safe, one was obliged to be strong, and always prepared to recur to force. In these jungles, which are mostly intersected by ravines and nuddees, or running streams, they built the strongholds whence they were able to defy all attempts at coercion by the late king's government, and which during the present campaign have proved such obstacles to our tranquillising the country." Some of these belts or patches were of great extent, varying from 20 to 150 square miles, and often contained several forts belonging to the same family. Secure in their strongholds, the talookdars, or farmers of the revenue, seldom consented to pay their respective quotas to the king's officers until compelled by superior force. As a natural consequence, the revenue decreased every year, and large tracts of land were frequently thrown out of cultivation. For the sake of example, we may mention the Toolseepore estate, with its rent-roll of £25,000 reduced to less than £10,000 through the feuds of father and son. The Bondee estate, again, which once yielded 182,000 rupees, could not have paid 25,000 rupees in 1856, and that of Rehwa fell from Rs. 55,000 a-year to Rs. 4,000, in both instances owing to the devastations of Rughhur Sing.

"The district of Banghor," says Mr. Rees, "is one of the most flourishing in Oude; the best cultivated, and the most populous. It was also the one which yielded the least to the Oude Government. Strange as it may appear, the reason of both these circumstances is the same. In Banghor all the landowners were strong and powerful, and so firmly leagued together, that if any one of them were in open resistance to the king's troops, all the others joined the refractory zemindar. The sound of a gun brought together, within the short space of a couple of hours, thousands of armed men, well equipped, trained to fighting, and ready and able to resist, and often to rout, the strongest force brought against them by the local authorities, who were therefore obliged to restrain their inclination to oppress them. Many a time have the Government troops been defeated by these bold marauders, for such almost all the landowners in this district are."

The manner of collecting the revenue is thus described:—

"The farmer general or contracting Governor generally fixed an arbitrary valuation. Though, however, he contracted for holding the district for a certain sum, a bad season, the rebellion of landholders, or other local causes, enabled him to make good excuses for not keeping his engagements. Often the landholder with his tenants escaped into the jungles; and if the culture of his fields was attempted on the part of any other person, he attempted to prevent it by his armed retainers. These fields, for perhaps three, four, or more years, then lay waste, and were only cultivated on the Governor's yielding to the landholder, promising to restore him, to content himself with less than had been demanded, and giving him, besides, a good allowance, often a permanent one, as compensation for damage done by the treading of feet."

But no mismanagement or oppression has been able to diminish the great natural capabilities of this fertile province. Magnificent forests abound with timber of the most valuable descriptions. All kinds of grain, and pulse, and tropical fruits are produced in the highest perfection. Hides, horns, and tallow are procurable to almost any extent. Saltpetre is found in large quantities, and even gold-dust has been obtained from the sands of the Sona Nuddee. All that is wanted is security for person and property, and improved means of communication between different parts of the province. Let the jungle be cleared away, and the country covered with a network of good roads and railways, and there can be no doubt that Oude will become an Oriental paradise.

"The Indus and its Provinces" is really as interesting to the general reader as it is essential to the merchant, the trader, the politician, and the historian."—Morning Chronicle, May 27, 1858.

"Not contented to repose on his laurels as the early advocate for the construction of Railways in India, Mr. Andrew has steadily persevered in developing his original idea, and now, after twelve years of incessant application, we find him concentrating his energies on the improvement of land and river communication in Scinde and the Punjab, though with ulterior views, extending far beyond the immediate benefit of those Provinces."—Allen's Indian Mail, June 12, 1856.

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPÆDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocquer's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocquer for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS,

A WEEKLY SUMMARY OF BRITISH AND FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

This Newspaper presents a comprehensive and perfect view of British and Foreign affairs, with special reference to those subjects in any way interesting to residents in India, or those at home having connections there. The Intelligence is brought down to the latest possible moment prior to the departure of the Mail. The various departments are so arranged, and the intelligence analysed, as to form a weekly register of permanent interest and value, which subscribers will be glad to preserve.

The weekly issue of "THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS" renders it as eligible a newspaper for Anglo-Indians resident at home as abroad.

Families should send it to their friends abroad.

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE

is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—Air-variations in the temperature—dryness and moisture of the atmosphere—chiefly produce disease. They not only affect the health, but the perfection of the species. Hence, the noblest of the human race in the Caucasian, because a medium temperature ever there prevails. In England, but too frequently, Russian cold and Italian heat divides the day, excessive changes which few can bear with impunity. Colds, influenza, consumption, fever, dysentery, are the diseases usually springing from our variable climate; these, in their early stages, may be readily cured with Holloway's remedies, which neutralise in the blood the morbid products of the changeable and impure atmosphere, brace the relaxed frame, prevent inflammation in the robust, and annul fever.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor of fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. ## SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our Calcutta files to the 23rd December, and from Madras to the 28th. The intelligence, however, brought by this Mail has been forestalled by the last one from Bombay. The only additional information relates to the movements of two distinguished personages—the Governor-General of India, and the ex-King of Delhi. The former was expected shortly to arrive at the Presidency, having abandoned his previous intention of visiting Lucknow; Mr. John Peter Grant abdicating the chair of the President in Council. The other, the fallen descendant of Timour, has arrived at Rangoon, his last abode, and not the Cape of Good Hope, as was previously stated. It probably little matters in what region of the earth the wretched old man will be permitted to pass the evening twilight of his existence; otherwise, it might have seemed preferable had he been removed to a greater distance from Hindostan, while still seething with discontent.

From Oude there is no intelligence of a more recent date than has already appeared in our columns—a remark which equally applies to the erratic movements of Tantia Topee and Prince Feroze Shah. Nor is there anything to report from the sister Presidencies unless it be an official notification that within fifteen months from the 18th December, 1858, the Tanjore debt will be liquidated at par.

The China news is not less "flat, stale, and unprofitable." Lord Elgin had not yet returned from the Yang-tse-Kiang, and it was rumoured at Shanghai that the British squadron had been fired upon by the rebels at Nankin.

Baron Gros, the French Plenipotentiary, having signed the Tariff Regulations, sailed for Hong Kong on the 27th November, on board H.J.M.'s steamer La Place, which went ashore on the Taishan Islands. The British steamers Nimrod and Opossum, however, subsequently got her off, and his Excellency returned to Shanghai in the former; finally reaching his destination in the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Aden. The American Minister, Mr. Reed, has also taken his departure.

At Canton tranquillity appears to prevail, and even ladies venture to ride about the adjacent country without fear of molestation.

In the Indian Public Works Department we observe unmistakable signs of future activity. The construction of the line of railway from Lahore to Delhi has been wisely assigned to the Punjab Railway Company, so that we are not likely to hear of any unnecessary delay in the completion of this important undertaking. The Madras Irrigation Company, again, having deposited the requisite amount in proportion to its capital, has received the usual guarantee accorded by the Council of India to public enterprises recognised as beneficial to that country.

We are happy to learn that E. B. Eastwick, Esq., late Professor at Haileybury College, has been appointed an Assistant Secretary in the Secret Department at the India House. Mr. Eastwick's knowledge of the native languages cannot fail to prove of great service to that department.

A short time since we announced that Lord Stanley had thrown open to public competition eight vacancies for writers on the Home Establishment, with salaries commencing at £80 per annum. No fewer than 700 applicants appeared to claim these humble prizes, and 430 actually went up for examination. The doctrine of public competition has, in this instance, assuredly been pushed to the verge of the ridiculous, nor can we think that the public interests will be benefited by such finical adherence to abstract theory.

On the other hand, only 37 candidates have presented themselves to compete for 51 appointments in the Indian Medical Establishment. As the names of the successful competitors have not yet received the confirmation of the Secretary of State in Council, we forbear to give them to the public. It is strange, however, that the profession of an army surgeon in India should appear so little desirable, when we take into account the chances of civil employment.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

GOLD COINAGE FOR INDIA.

It has always been the practice for Eastern Sovereigns to celebrate their accession to the throne, or their conquest of a kingdom, by the issue of a new coinage in their own name. We propose that the assumption of the British territories in India by her Majesty be celebrated in like manner by that desideratum for this country, the issue of a gold coinage.

It will hardly be necessary for us to point out the great advantage of gold coinage for India. There is not a European in the country, from the commissioner to the deputy-collector, from the commander-in-chief to the ensign, from the wealthy merchant to the shopkeeper, who has not over and over again felt the inconvenience of the present cumbrous and bulky silver currency. We believe that the extravagant and thriftless habits of so many of our countrymen in India is to be attributed in a great measure to the peculiar nature of the currency. A man cannot keep his own money, he must hand it over to the care of a servant, a thing unheard of in private life among the middle classes at home, where a man can lock up his twenty, thirty, fifty pounds in a cash-box conveniently. When men do not keep their own money, they are apt to acquire careless habits, and think much less of it than they do when every time they make a payment they take it out of their own purse, and see the contents diminishing before their eyes. But we need not dilate upon the convenience of a gold coinage; it would be one of the greatest boons that could be conferred upon the country; we do not think there will be a single dissentient voice to this among the whole European population of India. We cannot imagine that the natives, averse as they are to change and improvement in any shape, could do aught but welcome the introduction of a more convenient circulating medium. The present is undoubtedly the most appropriate time when we want to mark in every possible way the close connection between India and the British Crown.

We would suggest the coinage of ten rupee gold pieces, and not the reintroduction of the old gold mohur. The latter is an inconvenient amount, whereas the ten rupee pieces would assimilate more to our own pound sterling, and give greater facility for reckoning. By the latest accounts from England, we see that they are complaining of a surplus of gold bullion in the banks, whereas the usual drain of silver for the East continues unabated. Notice should be given that at a certain time, say the 1st January, 1860, or before, if desirable, a gold currency will be issued from the mints of the three Presidencies; the coin should resemble in every way the English sovereign, and an order of Government should lay down its legal value. Meantime, bullion might be shipped from England, and the issue should take place on the day specified, and care should be taken that neither of the two favourite Post-office stamps, so applicable, as the Friend of India observes, to all the measures of the present Government, "too late" and "insufficient," be acted on in this instance.

The accession of her Majesty Queen Victoria to the throne of Hindostan would thus be inaugurated in a way, that Asiatics of all kind and degree would fully understand and appreciate.

There is something to be said, no doubt, in favour of the gold mohur, natives being so much in the habit of reckoning by fours, and the thing itself being familiar to the people. We do not much care about the exact value of the proposed gold currency, though we should be in favour of ourselves of the ten rupee coin. But this is a matter of detail, which may well be left for subsequent discussion and arrangement; let us but know that we are soon to have a gold currency in circulation, and we shall be satisfied.—Delhi Gazette.

THE RE-INTRODUCTION OF OATHS.

When arguing, a fortnight since, against the re-introduction of oaths, we were scarcely aware of the extent to which their abolition had increased perjury. In the five years before 1840, the year in which they were abolished, the number of persons tried was—

Madras ..	..	..	..	423
Bombay ..	..	..	..	657
N. W. P. ..	..	..	..	332
Total ..	..	..	..	1,763
In the five years succeeding the number was—
Bengal ..	..	..	..	661
Madras ..	..	..	..	283
Bombay ..	..	..	..	989
N. W. P. ..	..	..	..	510
Total ..	..	..	..	2,473

The practice, therefore, had increased thirty per cent. Moreover, when in 1847 the principal Sudder Ameens of the North West were asked their opinion as to the effect of that measure, they one and all pronounced it injurious, and pleaded for the restoration of the ancient oaths. This also was the opinion of the great majority of officials consulted on that occasion all over India.

We mention these facts in fairness to the Legislative Council, which we attacked for reopening a worn out question, and not as modifying our own opinion. Our trust as before is solely in punishment, in a law making perjury inconvenient and dangerous. We do not say with some of those who replied to the questions of 1847 that no oath can bind a native of India. But we say that it will not bind the majority, and that those whom it will bind, refuse to take it. By abolishing all oaths, therefore, we re-introduce some respectable testimony, while we weaken none of that which we already obtain. It is in swift punishment working on the fears of the timid that alone we see a hope of securing straightforward evidence. Even that is but a hope based rather on the fact that natives occasionally do elicit the truth from one another than on any experience of our own. Like most Europeans, we are under the conviction that we never yet succeeded in any one case in extracting the whole truth from our own household.—Friend of India.

THE KING OF DELHI.

After all, Rangoon is the destination of the ex-King of Delhi and family. The following extract from the Rangoon Times of the 11th Dec. announces the arrival of H.M.S. Megara with the State prisoners:—

On Wednesday H.M.'s steamer Megara arrived from Calcutta, bringing with her a "passenger," whom but a very short time ago we little expected to see in this remote quarter of the Empire, and whom, to tell the truth, we are not particularly well pleased to see here now, the hoary arch-miscreant of Delhi, whom ages yet to come will execrate as the author, directly or indirectly, of the blackest atrocities that human nature in its greatest debasement ever executed or conceived. At four o'clock on Thursday he was landed with his attendants, and under a European guard taken to the main guard-house, where it is said he is to remain for the present, pending an opportunity of despatching him to Tounghoo, which, according to rumour, has been selected as the place of his future residence. The selection does not seem to us by any means the best that could have been made; the Andamans would have pleased us much better, but for purposes of mere safety we should imagine Tounghoo almost unobjectionable. There, companionless and destitute, far removed from all that he has learned to regard as the world, lost to kindred, and country, and people, the wretched old man can do no further mischief—so there, perhaps, it would be as well to let him remain to drag out the miserable remnant of his days. If all feelings are not dead within him, there will be but little enviable in his future life.

And thus loaded at once with years and ignominy, a convicted and banished felon—his life only spared contemptuously as a worthless thing—the object of universal detestation and scorn—thus closes his career, the last of the "GREAT MOGULS!"

We think this is a great mistake, a repetition of the blunder made in fostering the family at Delhi, where it increased and multiplied until the members became a nuisance and a burden to the State, daily increasing. These princes never forgot their rank, and we had Sultans at Delhi at last whose income amounted to four rupees a month,—the original sum granted to a progenitor having been divided and subdivided amongst descendants until there did not remain enough to keep soul and body together.

Thus we had a body of dangerous enemies daily increasing in the palace of Delhi, sinking into the most abject penury. How unequivocally they showed their rage and hatred when they had the opportunity we need not now repeat; but we are sorry to observe that we are now planting another nest of enemies in a very ill chosen spot. This family of State prisoners is too near India. They are still amongst orientals, and their descendants will lose none of the traditions of their former state and greatness, nor of their claims to be kings of Hindostan. At the Cape of Good Hope in time, they would have learned many new things and forgot many things which it would be better for them to forget. They might even have amalgamated with the free people of the Cape and become landed proprietors of importance. There would have been much hope in the future for the descendants of the younger members of these prisoners; at Rangoon there is none, except that they may die out and be forgotten.

We have heard, since writing the above, that the people at the Cape refused positively to allow the State prisoners to be landed there. They declared that they cared not whether it was king or coolie, Kaiser or thief, the principle was the thing, to the principle they would stick. We regret this decision still, and think that the Cape people need not have been so dreadfully correct in their virtue. The great advantage to the British Empire in the East might have been a consideration worth making the principle bend a little. The reasons we have given above will show why we continue to think it a misfortune that this King and his family could not have been landed at the Cape of Good Hope. We hope some more suitable country will yet be found for the Great Mogul. Australia might admit a State prisoner, and give the advantages we expected for the family at the Cape.—Englishman.

OUR NATIVE ARTILLERY.

If there was one point in the vast imbroglia of Indian politics considered settled, it was the extinction of native artillery. An order came out from home, prohibiting their enlistment in Bengal. It was believed that even in Madras and Bombay the native artillery would gradually become European. In all discussions as to the future the fact that our guns were at last in English hands has been enumerated among the elements of our security. At home the substitution of Europeans for natives in this important arm is regarded as an accomplished fact, about which discussion is superfluous. It is therefore with as much surprise as annoyance that we learn it is intended to keep up native batteries of artillery at least to the number of those in the Punjab. The only argument assigned for this resolve is, we are told, contained in the remark, "you cannot place European artillery alone among native troops in isolated stations."

Why not? If you expect the natives to be faithful, the artillery may as well be among them as anywhere else. If that is not your expectation, what business have you to commit her Majesty's stations to troops whom you know you cannot trust? Even if such confidence is the painful but avoidable necessity we deny it to be, the argument offered is disproved by all experience. The history of the mutinies proves that European artillery, surrounded by native troops in isolated positions, is there, as everywhere else, in a position it can hold. At Sangor, for instance, matters might have ended in a massacre like that of Jhansee, and a complete brigade of two regiments and a battery have been added to the rebel force, but that the guns of the battery were in the safe keeping of 60 odd Europeans. At Mhow, the lives of all the Europeans present were saved by Captain Hungerford, with a battery manned by some 60 Europeans, and who can say what might have been the result had that battery been native, and the brigade on its first outbreak been in a position to coerce Holkar? At Benares the artillery, supported, it is true, by 200 Europeans, but still acting by their own fire, swept the mutineers off the field, those mutineers apparently including a Sikh regiment, and kept Benares quiescent, and the district safe from plunder. When the 6th N. I. broke out at Allahabad, the fort, the key of the north west, was saved by the few conductors and Europeans who manned the walls, and performed, however imperfectly, the function of artillerists. At Mooltan, only the other day, the disarmed brigade was beaten back in helpless rout by the artillery alone, before assistance had fairly arrived. In all these instances European artillery, surrounded by native troops, and in isolated posts, saved and maintained the authority of the State. It matters little how few the Europeans may be. If they be but armed, and decently led, their presence of itself suffices to crush all opposition. Whole brigades did not stop or punish mutiny at Meerut, while the whole country from Lahore to Peshawur was held by a few hundred Europeans and three guns. For long periods the European garrisons of Jullundur, Phillour, Umballah, and Mooltan comprised scarcely a hundred white men, yet all these places were isolated, and without hope of reinforcements. The revolt in the district of Gogaira was put down by a force of seventy Europeans, a detail of artillery, and three guns. Behar was saved by eighteen Europeans shut up in a house, and isolated not only from the army, but from food and water. Isolation, indeed, has been the rule, and when all is said, the smallest and most distant garrison in India was less isolated than Clive when he won Plassey, and laid the foundation of the Empire. His, indeed, was isolation. In front of him forty thousand picked soldiers, and a superb artillery, all round him a passive population, and behind him the sea, which, even if he could communicate with Madras, could bring him no assistance for nine weeks.

Isolation for Europeans in the midst of enemies is the very condition of our rule. The magistrate rules, and the collector taxes a district as large as most English counties, practically alone. At least he has no European assistance. How many Europeans could the collector of Dinagore, or Burdwan, or Rungpore rally to his standard if he had to strive for life? Every one of us, indeed, is isolated, surrounded by natives, outnumbering us by a hundred to one? To fear simply for that reason, is to abandon our trust in that indefeasible superiority of intellect and energy over numbers which is the vitality of our rule. Even now when the armed classes have risen, and we have seen what they can accomplish, a single complete regiment with a battery would march from the Sutlej to Comorin, and find its only obstacle in the speed at which its adversaries could fly. To keep up native artillery, lest European artillery should in isolated posts be overmatched, is a precaution as sensible as to abolish police in Alsatia lest the swindlers should overcome them.

The precaution, though unnecessary, might be pardoned. But to maintain even a single native battery is to keep up the traditional native acquaintance with artillery. Their instinctive knowledge of the arm is already as wonderful as their courage in employing it. It will be hard enough, as it is, to induce men who have buried guns, dug them up, and used them after a hundred years, to forget so favourite an art. But it will be harder still if every year a few men are to return to their villages, able to give instruction, to keep up the hope of one day employing the buried weapons to teach their sons and neighbours the secret which equalises cowardice and courage. Our object is not simply to keep ourselves strong against the event of another mutiny; it is to render mutiny impossible, to extinguish the very art and recollection of war, to retain in our hands that strength of civilisation before which numbers and fanaticism are alike impotent. The first and last essential to this great end is the extinction of native artillery.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONFESSION OF A FEMALE PANDY.—A correspondent sends us the following "Confession of a Female Pandi," named Mooleah, by caste a "Gwalin;" it will be found not devoid of interest:—"I was at Nowgong when the sepoys of the 12th N.I. and a bullock battery mutinied in June, 1857; from there I went with them to Calpee; having remained here ten days, we marched to Cawnpore, being sent for by the Nana. We encamped near the canal; all the Europeans had been killed before our arrival. From Cawnpore we proceeded to Futtehpore. Close to the latter place we met a European force, had a fight with them, and lost all our guns; Tania Topee commanded our army; we had a great number killed and wounded, and the sepoys returned to Cawnpore very much disheartened. I left with a sepoy named Mahadeo Sing, of the 12th N.I., and five others, towards Banda, and Tania Topee and the Nana went with a large force in the direction of Bithoor. At Banda we met Koer Sing's party, including the Dinapore mutineers; we remained here a month, and then returned to Calpee, where we halted for twelve or thirteen days; from this place we proceeded to Cawnpore. At Calpee we were joined by the Gwalior Contingent. When we reached Cawnpore the Nana ordered Koer Sing to proceed with the Dinapore Brigade to Lucknow—the Gwalior Contingent remaining at Cawnpore to attack the Europeans. We stopped at Lucknow a month. Our sepoys received their pay whilst there from the B gun, and were ordered by her to proceed to Fyzabad or Azodea, where we remained twelve or thirteen days, and then went to Azinghur. On our road we had a fight with the English. At Azinghur we fought for fifteen or sixteen days, and when the larger European force arrived from Lucknow we ran away. We fought every day till our arrival at Sheopore Ghaut; the pursuit was so hot, that sometimes we had not time to drink water, and the sepoys were so totally exhausted that they could not have gone much further. Koer Sing travelled in a palkee. We got boats at the ghaut, and as Koer Sing was crossing in one, he was wounded in the arm by a grape shot: he cut his arm off with his own hand, and threw it into the Ganges; he went to Jugdespore, and died there in a Thakoor dawa, and was buried in this temple. When we attacked the Europeans who come out from Arrah, we first began to run away, but when we heard that the Feringhees were tired, and were retreating themselves, we returned and attacked them a second time, following them close up to Arrah, and killing a great number. This is the report I heard from the sepoys. There was a great 'tamasha' that night at Jugdespore, on account of the two guns, &c., having been captured from the Europeans. When the large English force arrived at Jugdespore, the sepoys ran away, and remained about the jungles, fighting for a good many days. Thence we went and hid about 'Gahmer,' but as soon as we heard that the English had left the jungle, we returned to it, and remained there till driven out a second time. During the interval the sepoys had many small fights with the British in different parts of the district. When driven out of the Jugdespore jungles about a month ago, we went to the Rhotas Hills, and there suffered the greatest privations, many of them having had jungle fever like the rest of the prisoners you took with me. A child that was born to me at Jugdespore before our flight died on the road, and Mahadeo Sing, the sepoy I was with, was shot a few days ago by your soldiers in the Hills. I have often heard the sepoys talk about this mutiny; the cartridge had nothing to do with it; that was all a 'bahnao.' They had got conceited, and were fighting for their 'deen,' and thought they could drive the Feringhees out of the country. Now they perceive their folly and mistake, and curse and swear against themselves, and the men who led them astray."—Delhi Gazette.

PUNJAB ITEMS.—We (Lahore Chronicle) hear that it is in contemplation by the supreme government to locate two more European regiments at Meeran Meer, in consequence of the Punjab being converted into a lieutenant-governorship. We hope it is true, as the permanent location of two additional regiments will be a considerable accession to our European strength. * * * A party, consisting of 120 troopers, lately recruited at Peshawur, for Hodson's Horse, arrived here yesterday, and are proceeding to join their head-quarters in Lucknow. * * * The steamer Frere and Flat Sukkur, which left Kurrachee on the 13th November, arrived at Mooltan on the 9th December, with 8 officers and 400 men for the Royal Artillery, 7th Dragoon Guards, 52nd Light Infantry, and 81st, 94th, and 98th Regiments. The party is commanded by Captain E. Todd, 81st Foot. * * * We learn that Sir Jno. Lawrence, after visiting Rjoat, on the right bank of the Chenab, the jagher of Rajah Tojah Sing, went a little way higher up to Aknoor, which is in the boundary of the Chief of Jummo, where he was met by that potentate. He is now expected to be back at Lahore about the 15th Dec., after an absence, from the capital of the Punjab, for upwards of six months. Notwithstanding the assertion in another quarter to the contrary, we have very good grounds for stating that Sir John positively proceeds to England by the end of January or beginning of February next, as his medical advisers are of opinion that if he prolongs his stay in this country for another hot season his health will be seriously undermined. Mr. Cust has just come in from the district of Sealkote, whither he had been on a tour of circuit, and is again going towards Googaira for a short time. Mr. Arnold, the Inspector of Public Instructions in the Punjab, has proceeded to Delhi on a tour of inspection; his deputy, Lieutenant Forbes, is going to Mooltan and other districts with the same view.

ARMY CHAPLAINS.—According to a correspondent of the Friend of India there are twenty-one chaplaincies in the Punjab recognised by Government. Of these, fifteen are filled up, and six are vacant, viz., the 2nd chaplaincies of Umballa, Meer-Meer, Sealkote and Peshawur, Nowshera, which is at present without troops, and Hoshiehpore. There are six other stations at which European troops are quartered, for which chaplains should be provided, viz., Umritsar, Phillour, Dera Ismael Khan, Attock, Campbellpore and a 2nd chaplain for Delhi. It is calculated that about one-fifth of the ecclesiastical department are generally absent on furlough or sick leave,—and at least three of the fifteen chaplains in the Punjab would go away on furlough were that boon now open. There are, therefore, fifteen chaplains more required for the Punjab alone, viz., six for the recognised stations, six for the other six stations requiring chaplains, and three to supply the vacancies caused by men about to take furlough.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—The annual meeting of the senate of the Calcutta University took place this morning, Dec. 11, at the Town Hall, the Honourable Sir James Colville, C. J., Vice-Chancellor, in the chair. Sir James spoke for nearly an hour upon the subject of education in India, the difficulties with which it was surrounded, and the progress made under the auspices of the University. He was repeatedly cheered during his speech, and at its conclusion a vote of thanks to the Vice-Chancellor was proposed by Mr. Ritchie, seconded by the Lord Bishop, and carried unanimously, with a request that the address might be printed. Two native gentlemen received their degrees (we believe the first) as Bachelors of Arts, and were congratulated by Sir James upon their acquisition. The Hall was crowded with Europeans and natives, and we hope the example set by the two students we have alluded to will be followed by many more of their countrymen during the coming year.

THE GRAND JURY.—The Calcutta papers are full of complaints of the unfair manner in which men are summoned to sit on the grand jury. There are about 300 grand jurors, and each man, if summoned in his turn, would sit about once in four years. As it is, many are summoned to serve twice a year. Calcutta needs a public prosecutor instead of a grand jury.

CAWNPORE.—A correspondent of the Englishman asks if Cawnpore is to be left always desolate. The European houses stand roofless, the new barracks are uncompleted, and the church remains in the condition in which the rebels left it. Meanwhile the native city is clean, neat, and thriving, its inhabitants having recovered completely the effect of the two sieges.

HOWRAH HOSPITAL.—The foundation stone has been laid of a general hospital at Howrah. The hospital was projected some four years ago, and Rs. 14,000 collected for its construction. Government gave a site, and the hospital is to be a double-storied building, 168 feet long by 73 feet wide, with an average height of 50 feet. It is calculated to contain 100 Europeans, and will require Rs. 20,000 more.

AN ENLIGHTENED HINDOO.—The sentence of four months' imprisonment passed upon Joykissen Mookerjee, the enlightened Zemindar of Ooterparah, for abducting a ryot has been confirmed. The baboo of course appeals to the Sudder. The chief evidence, it appears, is that of the Gomastah who produced his master's written order for the imprisonment. The baboo of course denies the genuineness of the order.

BRIGADIER PARKE'S VICTORY.—It was not till he reached Charwah, in Nimar, says a contemporary, that Brigadier Parke ascertained the direction taken by Tantia Topee; when he did so, however, he commenced the march which is without parallel in military annals. With two 9-pounder guns of the Bombay Artillery, 50 men of the 8th Hussars, 50 of the 2nd Light Cavalry, Lieutenant Moore's Aden Horse, 125 Guzerat Horse, some of Guicowar's Contingent, and 100 of the 72nd Highlanders on Sandhee camels, he marched in nine days 241 miles, crossing the Nerbudda. Tantia Topee, after his defeat by Major Sutherland, marched 60 miles without stopping, mounting all his men on fresh horses, which he seized in the villages on his road, and exchanged for his own tired ones. Day by day, Parke's force reduced the distance betwixt himself and the rebels, and at last caught them on the 1st of December near Chota Oodeypore. The last forty miles lay through dense jungles, through which Lieutenant Moore led with the Aden Horse. On the morning of the battle this energetic officer signalized himself by surprising Tantia Topee's cavalry pickets. When the force issued from the jungle they debouched within 600 yards of the enemy, 3,500 strong, outside of Oodeypore, on ground full of large trees, brushwood and huts, and so broken as to be utterly unsuited for the movements of cavalry and artillery. Parke deployed with his infantry and guns in the centre, the Southern Mahratta Horse on his left, with the Aden Horse and some Southern Mahratta Horse on his right. Kerr, of course, commanded the latter. The enemy, from their numbers, quite outflanked the column, which hardly covered 200 yards. Our guns opened at 600 yards, and the enemy then attempted to outflank us with their cavalry, both on the right and on the left. They were met on the right by a brilliant charge from the Southern Mahratta and Aden Horse, and were driven from the field with the loss of sixty killed, and more wounded, and sabred for five miles. On the left a similar attempt met with a like fate, and Lieutenant Bannerman cut up and drove the enemy into the Orsang river, killing with his own hand four men opposed to him, and being himself slightly stunned with a blow from the butt end of a musket. Mr. Ramsay, C. S., also furnished a small charge, and cut up a number of the rebels. The Southern Mahratta Horse captured the standard of the 58th Bengal Irregular Cavalry. The Artillery and Enfields of course committed great havoc amongst the ranks opposed to them. The rebels, separated after the action into three bodies, were rallied by Tantia Topee, who marched on to Baroda, but he was turned from thence by a force sent out against him by Sir Richmond Shakespear. He was on the 5th past Dohud, at a place called Limree, on his way to Khooshall Gurgul, and doubtless intended to move through Bandawarra to Oodeypore. After the battle of Chota Oodeypore the brigadier issued the following order:—"Brigadier Parke congratulates the troops under his command on the successful result of yesterday's engagement with the rebel army under Tantia Topee and the Rao Sahib. The troops not only displayed great gallantry and steadiness when exposed to the enemy, but during the fatigue of the late forced marches their discipline, perseverance and cheerfulness have been most conspicuous. In the last seven days, between the morning of the 23rd November and daylight of the 1st December, they have marched upwards of two hundred miles, in part through the densest jungles; effected the passage of the Nerbudda river; and, without the co-operation or assistance of other troops in front or flank, have outmarched in pursuit, and defeated an enemy notorious for the rapidity of his movements. The brigadier's thanks are due to all officers and men, but particularly to Lieut. Heathorn, of the Bombay Artillery, whose whole conduct and exertions in overcoming every difficulty during the late laborious operations shall be brought to the notice of the Commander in Chief."

REWARDS TO NATIVES.—The Government has presented a gold watch with chain to Jummead Ally, gomasta of the opium factory at Cawnpore, for his loyalty, and in recognition of the services rendered by him to the State in protecting the Government treasure when the factory was threatened with an attack by the rebels. The Governor General likewise has presented a khilat of Rs. 1,000 to one Salamut Rai, deputy collector of Allyghur, in consideration of his services in the late outbreak. His lordship has also rewarded the Cutwal of Bareilly with landed property paying Rs. 2,000 during his life: a sword and pistols of the value of Rs. 500, and a confiscated house in Bareilly, and a suitable khelat, for rendering good services to the British Government.

CALCUTTA CABS.—The Phoenix complains of the extreme independence of the Calcutta cabmen. They compel every applicant to haggle for twenty minutes, and then accede to their terms. Those terms, fair if you take them by the day, are most exorbitant if you want to go only a short distance. The cabs themselves are dirty, rickety, dangerous vehicles, usually broken down office hacks, often with one spring broken, and almost always with galled horses. The time has arrived for a stringent cab act, fixing fares, compelling civility, and regulating the stands. Eight annas an hour would in Calcutta be a liberal rate.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—Sir J. Lawrence, whom a large number of officers from this station (Sealkote) accompanied, proceeded towards Jummo, and on nearing it, was met by the young Maharajah Runbeer Singh and his cavalcade; both moved on to Jummo. The Surae of Dyan Sing was allotted for the chief commissioner's quarters, as well as for the accommodation of the British officers. The next day Sir John and staff visited the Maharajah at his palace, the Sheesh Mahal, and made some presents to his Highness on behalf of our Government, which I believe consisted of a lac of rupees and other things; but the Maharajah refused to receive any thing in cash, and wished something else in value, any British manufactured article, which was considered of more value in that country. The Maharajah, in return, made presents on his behalf to the Chief Commissioner and the other officers. Amongst other things a pearl necklace, said to be worth Rs. 10,000, to Sir Alexander Lawrence, the son of the lamented Sir H. Lawrence, and something of value to Colonel Richard Lawrence; but of course all were given up to Government. With Sir John there were Mr. Secretary Temple, Colonel R. Lawrence, Military Secretary, Sir Alexander Lawrence, Dr. Smith, and a lot of other officers from this station. There was the usual nautch and tamasha. The Maharajah paid a return visit to the chief commissioner at Tow in our boundary line, where a detachment of the 7th Dragoon Guards and H.M.'s 52nd were encamped with their respective bands. They played all day alternately, at which the young Maharajah appeared much pleased. The chief commissioner and his camp returned to this place on Tuesday last, and his highness Runbeer Singh returned to his capital. At Jummo there were some 200 shops for the manufacture of fire-arms; the two guns which were brought up to its gates to fire a salute on the occasion of the chief commissioner's visit were newly cast of brass. Two regiments of cavalry had been newly raised, in the ranks of which many Poorbeas were to be seen. Sir John was the guest last night of the officers of H.M.'s 52nd, and was after dinner at their theatre. He appeared to be much pleased with the performance. The same acts were re-enacted which were played last Saturday. Sir John with his camp moved off to Bujwat, north west of this (Sealkote), Rajah Tejah Sing's jaghere, and does not return before Friday, I believe. I understand Col. Rd. Lawrence and Mr. Kirke, the superintendent of the chief commissioner's office, will accompany the Rajah of Puteallah to England, the Rajah taking 20 lacs of rupees to defray the necessary expenses that will attend his visit.—Lahore Chronicle.

A SINGULAR COVENANT.—The covenant of Mr. J. Naylor, a mechanic engaged for putting together the iron frame work for barracks, furnishes a convincing proof of the aversion of the late Court of Directors to the settlement in India of Europeans not in Government employ, a fact which Mr. Mangles was at much pains to contradict. The services of Mr. Naylor have been engaged for the above purpose for a period of three years, at the end of which time by the terms of the contract it is imperatively necessary that he should return to England at his own expense, and should he decline, he is to be compelled to do so six months after his dismissal, Mr. Naylor receiving pay up to the date of his arrival in England.—Englishman.

THE STATIONERY DEPARTMENT.—We (Englishman) hear that the Government has it in contemplation to establish an office of audit over the Stationery Department. In the Military Department there are offices of audit over the Pay, Commissariat, Ordnance, Clothing, Public Works, and other departments where public money is disbursed on account of the State, and where the departments concerned are the custodians and distributors or issuers of public stores. In the Civil Department likewise there are also officers of audit over the Pay, Customs, and other departments, constituted on the same principles as in the military branch of the public service. We do not see any reason therefore why there should not be an office of audit over the Stationery Department, where public money to the extent of nearly eight hundred thousand rupees is annually disbursed, partly in the purchase of stock and partly in the expenditure of stores purchased and received from the home authorities for the use of public departments. Every mercantile firm are auditors over their own monetary transactions. The banks have their auditors, too, and, but from the last year, auditors have been appointed over the disbursements of the municipal commissioners. It is thus apparent that the advantages of audit and check are fully recognised by private individuals and corporate bodies, as well as by Government. To what extent the offices of the commissariat, the ordnance, the clothing and the public works auditors are beneficial to the State, by preventing useless and unauthorised disbursement of public money, it is not possible rightly to conjecture. The executive or disbursing officers are no doubt the best supervisors over the accounts of their subordinate agents; but saddled as they are with executive duties, and as their attention has in a greater measure, and first of all to be directed towards executive arrangements, they have but little time left them to exercise that minute check and control over the accounts of their subordinates without which it is not possible to detect errors and overcharges in them. The savings effected by the check which the offices of audit exercise over the expenditure of public money cannot be correctly estimated. For these not only do not fail to bring to notice and to disallow overdrawings and unauthorised charges, but also act as a preventive against overcharges being made by subordinate agents for fear of their being detected by the offices of control and audit, and for fear of a repetition of their carelessness being visited with penalty by executive officers, to whom they (the subordinate agents) have to account for the expenditure of public money and stores.

OUR NUMBERS.—One of the many fallacies by which the influence of Europeans in India has been undermined is the misrepresentation of their numbers. In all official reports it is estimated at about 300. In the census of 1851, which included all Englishmen throughout the world, they were excluded, we fear deliberately. At least it is difficult otherwise to account for the report which the India House presented in 1852, and which gave 317 as the total number of independent Europeans beyond Calcutta. The Rev. J. Mullens, perhaps the most accurate of our statisticians, took great pains to explain this point to the Colonization Committee. "The returns of 1852 set down the number of extra-official Europeans beyond the three presidency towns in all India at 317. But this statement is very much below the mark. I have no good information of a late date respecting Bombay and Madras; but in the presidency of Bengal, before the rebellion broke out, the case stood thus:—Of indigo factories, there were 320 concerns, about 900 factories, and 420 managers and assistants. Then as to the coal, there were 8 concerns; 18 collieries and 16 managers and engineers. As to rum distilleries, there were 6 managers. With regard to silk filatures, there were 25 concerns and factories, and 35 managers and assistants. As to sugar, there were 7 concerns; and, as to tea, there were thirty-seven plantations and fifty-five managers and assistants. Excluding the English regiments, and the officers of native regiments not on staff employ (the latter being about 1,000 in number), the English and East Indian population in the country parts of the Presidency amounts to 5,400 grown men in both public and private employ. Of these, 1,950 are not connected with the Government. They are principally missionaries, English semindars and planters; and engineers, contractors and superintendents on the railway. They are all grown men, but as many of them are not married, they would represent, probably, a population of above 6,000 persons, unconnected with Government. The whole English population in the Mofussil would, at the same rate, amount to about 17,000 persons. The English and East Indian inhabitants of Calcutta itself, in all kinds of employ, amount to 4,256, and represent a population of about 16,000 persons. Deducting the English regiments, therefore, we had in the Presidency of Bengal, before the mutiny, an English population of about 34,000 persons. The value of land now held by Europeans is reckoned by the Planters' Association at four millions sterling. In Ceylon the population is thus described in the latest returns: whites, military, 1,216 males and 206 females, in all 1,422; non-latest returns: whites, military, 1,216 males and 206 females, in all 1,422; non-military, 2,704 males and 2,262 females, in all 4,966; making a total of 6,388. Of coffee estates there were 404; of cinnamon estates, 56; of cocoa-nut estates, 166. Adult Englishmen, not belonging to the army, navy, or civil service, 600." These numbers, if we may judge from the excessive pressure for house room in Calcutta and some other facts, are rapidly and permanently increasing. Every mail brings out a few adventurers, every mile of railway gives new scope to their energies, every new steamer, new mine, new plantation, and new public work attracts half a dozen, and in ten years we may have something like twenty thousand adult male settlers in Bengal alone.—Friend of India.

MR. JOHN CRACROFT WILSON.—Mr. John Cracroft Wilson, late of the Bengal Civil Service, for we learn he has just resigned, is now in Calcutta on his way to another land, to quit India for ever. Remembering as we do this gentleman's services, not only during the revolt in the north-west, but as the hunter down of Thugs, and the queller of corrupt officials (native), we did expect to have seen some farewell notice either in general orders, or some mark of the appreciation of his services by Government. We know of none, nor can we ascertain if anything has been said to himself beyond the usual official acceptance of his resignation. Such is the rumour, for we have had no communication with himself, directly or indirectly. Mr. Wilson not only protected the Moradabad districts, and saved Captain Gowan and other Englishmen from the hands of the rebels and mutineers, but he gathered together a strong force of horsemen, over whom his influence and winning powers were so great, that he boldly scoured not only his own districts but the neighbouring ones, with them overawing the disaffected, and protecting the loyal. He also accompanied the various columns which pressed into Rohilkund, and marched down the Doab, rendering great services to them from his knowledge of the country and influence amongst the men of property. All this is well known to the members of the military and civil services. We can only give a hasty sketch from memory and hearsay, but we know how all he has done is admired by those who were with him. We remember him as the man who had escaped the benumbing effects of native flattery and adulation, and who astonished the old Indian gentlemen of the Sadar Court of Agra, when he confounded all their notions of regularity and disconcerted their habits of official business, by accusing their whole establishment of native officers and pleaders of every kind of corruption conceivable, and how the red tapists opposed him. A history of that whole proceeding would do more to enlighten the English on the native officials than all the letters that special correspondents could write in a year, or than the evidence of a cloud of witnesses in colonization committees. We regret the course this Government takes in these matters, and willingly seize the opportunity of reminding the public of such men as John Cracroft Wilson, whose like we shall not soon see under the cold shade of a Government carried on on the principles of Lord Canning's. We will bid Mr. Wilson farewell, and trust he will meet in the country of his adoption a comfort and success which will be a solace to him. He will hereafter remember his services in India with a satisfaction to himself, and though neglected by Government, his name will long be remembered in the North West Provinces as the energetic magistrate who routed out Thugs, protected the oppressed of our own courts, and was the saviour of many officers and gentlemen who would never have escaped from the rebels but through his noble exertions.—Englishman, Dec. 16.

MR. LANDSAY, B.A., formerly Professor of Literature at the Devon College, has been permanently appointed Second Uncovenanted Assistant in the Military Department of the General Treasury, on a salary of Rs. 350 per mensem, in place of Mr. Tulloh, promoted to a higher post in the office of the Civil Auditor.

THE INDIAN MINTS.—During the month of Oct., 1858, the value of the silver coined at the Calcutta Mint amounted to Rs. 33,15,368; at Madras to Rs. 1,72,862; and at Bombay to Rs. 19,09,657.

PUNJAB RAILWAY.—It is stated by the Agra journals that the reason why the works on the Umritsur and Mooltan Railway have been stopped by the Supreme Government is, "that no instructions had been received from home regarding the line, nor any information as to the engagement entered into between the railway company and the Home Government." Preliminary works, such as demarcation, fixing stations, sinking wells, collecting materials, &c., are still going on in anticipation.

CALCUTTA FREE SCHOOL.—The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Calcutta presided at the exhibition of the Free School on the morning of Dec. 17. The proceedings commenced at 11 o'clock, a hymn was sung by the children, after which the Rev. J. Coley offered up prayer. The prizes were then delivered to the children. The reports of the examiners, some of which were read, mention the favourable state of the institution. His lordship, in addressing the children, expressed his intention of paying frequent visits to the school. The business was closed by the children's singing "Rule Britannia."

MYNPOORE, 7th Dec.—I send you the following intelligence in order that travellers may be warned through the medium of your paper (Delhi Gazette) that the Grand Trunk road from this downwards to Cawnpore is quite unsafe at present. A large body of rebels under the Nana, Ferozshah, Waleed Khan and others, were at Aroul and Meerun-ki-Sirai yesterday; a portion of the force had arrived on the evening of the 5th. They have only one gun with them, having lost one in crossing the Ganges. The whole of the road below Meerun-ki-Sirai is entirely in their hands, and all communication between Futteghur and Cawnpore is consequently stopped. A portion of H.M.'s 64th from Futteghur and all the police levies have been sent down to prevent the rebels from coming up the road; troops have also gone from here. It is said that the object of the rebels is to move via Etawa into Bundelcund; but as Brigadier Showers will be certain to move out to the support of Etawah, they may take a different route, and perhaps be forced to go in another direction.

THE MINISTER FOR INDIA'S FIRST DESPATCH.—Lord Stanley's first despatch to the Queen's Government of India is dated the 22nd September, and embraces two important subjects. The first of these is finance. His lordship reminds the Indian authorities that the recent Act for the better Government of India requires an account of the preceding financial year containing the receipts and disbursements both in India and in England to be laid before both Houses of Parliament in every month of May. He also requires an annual statement showing the moral and material progress of India in each presidency. Who is to draw up this document? The education and criminal reports will now probably be made use of and very little else. The best proof of progress which could be given would be the abolition of all the Company's Mofussil Courts, with the trickery and corruption, fraud and perjury which they permit if they do not encourage.—Englishman.

CLASP FOR LUCKNOW.—The Calcutta Gazette contains a notification stating that "the Queen has been pleased to give directions that a clasp in addition to those already awarded for the defence and relief of Lucknow shall be granted to the troops who were engaged from the 2nd to the 16th of March last, in the operations before that city, which resulted in its capture."

NATIVE LEVIES.—The Englishman states that the project for raising 10,000 station guards for Bengal is still in suspense. The Supreme Government sanction the levies in five divisions, but object to the Behar guard as a bad class of sepoys. The enlistment of Coles and Sonthals is to extend to 3,000 men, and Sonthals are to be promoted as quickly as possible. They will be armed with carbines and swords, and well dressed. The expense of the levies proposed will be a little under five lakhs a year.

EXPORTS.—(Calcutta, Dec. 23.)—The produce market has continued in an unsatisfactory state, and buyers do not willingly meet holders of goods. Business, particularly for Europe, has been done only for actual requirements of ships' loading, and under engagements. Holders of goods, on the other hand, who are principally natives, evince considerable firmness, notwithstanding the continued unfavourable advices from home, and the large supplies of some articles. In Indigo we have had no private transactions. Rice still dull and lower. Sugar only in demand for Bombay. Saltpetre in large supply and less demand. Jute in neglect and value lower. Linen in small inquiry. Rope and other seeds in moderate demand. Some business in progress for the home markets in Rice. Corals again in neglect since arrival of the mail. Hides in small supply and well sustained. Safflower bare of stocks. Catch—large transactions at lower prices.

IMPORTS.—(Calcutta, Dec. 23.)—We have to report a very quiet market in Piece Goods and Furms, caused by the unfavourable accounts lately received from up-country markets. It must be borne in mind that large quantities of goods have been sent up the country for some time past, which will undoubtedly keep buyers back for fresh transactions, and consequently prices are likely to be still lower here. The arrivals during the past fortnight have not been larger, but several vessels are due and their cargoes will feed the market for some time. Grey Shirtings.—The brisk demand has fallen off gradually, and prices generally are about two annas lower, particularly for heavier goods. We quote 39 inches 50 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 3-14 to 4-0; 54 reeds at 4-6; 56 reeds at 5-4; 60 reeds at 5-12; 64 reeds at 6-8; 45 inches at 4-12 to 7-4; 54 inches at 10-8. White Figured Shirtings and Brocades are rather dull, and they have sustained a decline of about two annas per piece. We quote 40 yards at Co.'s Rs. 6-1 to 6-2; 54 yards at 8-0. Brocades at 6-8. Grey Madras pollams.—In good and steady demand at higher rates, say 1 anna per piece. We quote 32 ins. 48 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 3-4; 50 reeds at 2-6; 56 reeds at 2-8 to 2-9. Cambrics.—In moderate demand at a decline of 2 annas per piece. We quote 60 ins. 24 yards at Co.'s Rs. 4-10; 60 ins. at 5-10. Lapets.—In improved demand at rather higher prices. We quote Co.'s Rs. at 1-8 to 4-0. Mull Mulls.—There is a good demand for all kinds. We quote Grey 39 ins. at Co.'s Rs. 1-6 to 2-10; 45 ins. at 2-14 to 3-4. White 39 ins. at 1-10 to 2-4; 45 ins. at 2-4. Black Mulls.—Slightly better. We quote No. 1. at annas 14 to 15 per piece. Turkey Red Goods.—Demand improving at better prices. We quote 24 in. Cambrics at 0-3-3 to 0-3-6 per yard; 33 in. at 0-3-9 to 0-4-3 per yard. Metals.—Copper.—Market, no demand at all, and value again lower. We quote Sheeting Copper at Co.'s Rs. 39 to 39-8. Iron.—No alteration. We quote assorted Flat Bars, &c., at Co.'s Rs. 3-10 per md. Spelter.—In good demand at Co.'s Rs. 13-12. Tin and Tin Plates.—Plates in regular demand at Co.'s Rs. 17 to 17-4.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MADRAS ITEMS.—This is the season in Madras when the various educational and charitable institutions hold their annual meetings. All of them appear to be in a very flourishing condition, with the exception of the Doveton Protestant College, which from some cause unexplained, appears to have fallen off to the extent of 20 per cent. in the number of pupils as compared with the number last year, in public estimation. The only fact of interest to readers at a distance in connection with these gatherings is one that was mentioned by the Rev. Mr. Braidwood at the meeting for the distribution of prizes to the scholars of the Free Church Mission Schools. In alluding to the habeas corpus case recently before the Supreme Court, the reverend gentleman remarked that the boy Narainasamy, who it will be recollected was restored to his father, was allowed to take his meals with the family and, not treated as an out caste. This is a gratifying fact, because it shows that the apprehensions entertained as to the boy being ill-treated, that he would be put into a dungeon and so on, were unfounded. It also goes far to support the opinion of the Supreme Court that a minor was incapable of doing any act which would make him an out caste, for, had the boy become one by eating with Christians, most assuredly his Chetty caste father would not have allowed him to pollute his family by afterwards eating with them. Colonel Browne, the Military Secretary to Government, goes home by the Clarence, which leaves Madras this week. His amiable private character and great benevolence have secured for him universal esteem. A meeting has been held of his friends, at which it was determined to present him with a sword, and his lady with a silver tea and coffee service. The electric telegraph has been completed to Cochin on the Malabar coast and is now open to the public. The only other matter in connection with Madras affairs that remains to be noticed is the passing of Mr. Forbes's Bill for the recovery of arrears of revenue in the Ryotwar districts of this presidency. The object of the Bill was to enable collectors to sell either the personal or real property of defaulters for arrears of revenue. The principal thing aimed at in the Bill was the personal property, and at the last stage words were inserted exempting from seizure agricultural implements, bullocks, &c. As these articles generally constitute the whole of a ryot's personal property, their exemption has taken the sting out of the measure.—Athenaeum.

INLAND WATER COMMUNICATION.—The following is an extract from a despatch by Lord Stanley, dated 13th October, 1858:—"Two plans for the connection of Cochin and Bepore have been proposed. One is by means of a railway, the other by the improvement of the inland water communication between the two places. The former is recommended by the Cochin Chamber of Commerce, and by adopting the suggestion of constructing a branch line from the present railway at a point near the Ponany Bridge, the length of new railways would be reduced from ninety-two miles, the distance between the ports along the coast to fifty-two miles, the cost of which at Rs. 60,000 a mile would amount to Rs. 31,20,000. The latter plan it is estimated can be accomplished for Rs. 3,00,000. Under these circumstances, and presuming that you concur in the opinions which were expressed at the time Bepore was selected as the western terminus of the railway, with regard to the improvements of which the harbour at that place is capable, I do not hesitate to adopt your recommendation in favour of the plan for carrying out the contemplated inland water communication for effecting the object in view, a portion of which scheme has already been sanctioned and commenced upon, but he'd over in consequence of the suspension of most public works." Government on the 26th Oct. ordered paragraphs 4 and 6 to be communicated to the Department of Public Works, and also to the Cochin Chamber of Commerce, with reference to Extract Minutes of Consultation, dated May last, No. 238.

THE PIER.—The following is an extract from a despatch by Lord Stanley, dated the 27th October, 1858:—"In this report the Committee admit the contractors' estimate of the cost of the several additions suggested in the erection of the pier to be reasonable, and they consider that it will be cheaply purchased for £103,616. The offer of the contractors for its construction for that sum has been formally accepted, with the understanding that their original specification is to be modified, so as to include the several alterations proposed by the Committee; and further, that the whole work shall be completed within two and a half years from the date of commencing operations at Madras."

MR. THORNTON WARNER has been appointed emigration agent at Madras, for the Island of Trinidad.

MADURA, 13th Dec., 1858.—A gloom has been cast over our little society by the sudden death of an esteemed member of it. Major Marshall, of the 18th N. I., doing duty as Civil Engineer in the P. W. Department in this division, had been out in the country a few days on duty. On getting up early on Saturday morning to return home to this place where his family resided, he was taken with cholera. He resolved, however, to attempt to ride in as it was only twelve miles. He had not gone far before he was obliged to stop and to send in his horsekeeper for his bullock coach. Some native, who knew him, seeing him in this predicament, persuaded him to get into his cart and press on; he did so till he met his own coach two or three miles from this, and into that he was transferred, and got home at 10 A. M. At 12 he was a corpse, such was the violence of the attack, and the service has lost in him a zealous diligent officer, and society an amiable warm-hearted member of it. He was buried yesterday evening.—Athenaeum.

THE MADRAS CIVIL ORPHAN ASYLUMS.—The annual distribution of prizes to the orphans educated in these institutions took place on Monday, December the 20th, and from the Madras Spectator we learn that Sir C. Rawlinson presided on the occasion, Lady Rawlinson, Lady Bittleston, and Sir A. Bittleston were present. Sir C. Rawlinson spoke of the marked improvement that had taken place in the children, in intelligence and demeanour. He added, that "there could be no doubt of the value and importance of these institutions; they were not the least amongst many other excellent establishments of which Madras might justly be proud—and being the only institution in which the destitute orphans of civilians of all grades could find a home in this presidency, he considered that they were entitled to claim and receive the liberal support of the European community." A vote of thanks to Sir C. and Lady Rawlinson for the interest they had always taken in these institutions was passed by the meeting.

A PRINCIPAL SUDDER AMEEN'S COURT was to be opened at Mangalore on the 1st January.

REGISTER OF CHARACTER.—In future a register is to be kept by the head of every military office or department, the establishment of which is paid by Government, of the merits and characters of all public servants therein employed, in order that new heads of departments may become readily acquainted with the past conduct and qualifications of their subordinates.

UNCHARITABLE RESTRICTION.—A meeting of the officers of the King's Dragoon Guards was held at Bangalore, at the mess house, to take into consideration the application from the secretary of the Lawrence Asylum at Ootacamund for support and subscription for the institution. A letter was read from the Commander in Chief disapproving of the exclusiveness of the institution in not admitting any but soldiers' children of the Protestant religion; it was unanimously agreed that no subscription or support should be given to the Lawrence Asylum at Ootacamund as long as children of the Roman Catholic religion were inadmissible.

A CASE FOR THE NEXT SESSIONS.—The following, it is said, are the facts of a case which is now under investigation at the Royapettah Police-court. The son of the Dewan of the late Nabob having sent to the Chepauk Agent's office for 200 Rs., the money was paid to the messenger, a Mahomedan, and a servant of the Dewan. The messenger not having returned to the Dewan's house within a reasonable time, his non-appearance gave great uneasiness to his master and his friends, and later in the day the people in the neighbourhood of the house, which is in Triplicane, were startled by the report that a highway robbery had been committed by two armed men, who had attacked a poor man, had almost beaten him to death, and plundered him of some property he had with him; that the robbers had escaped, leaving their victim lying near the compound-wall, bleeding from wounds on the head, and quite unable to move or to speak. A sympathising crowd soon collected round the unhappy man, and sought eagerly to learn the particulars, when it appeared the Dewan's messenger and the object of their solicitude was one and the same person. He could not speak for some time, but after a short interval he related the painful story, that two men, having seen him receive the money at the Agent's office, pounced upon him unawares, put a stop to his crying out by holding a knife to his throat, threatening to use it if he offered the least resistance, relieved him of the money, and disappeared, but not before they had struck him several blows about the head with a heavy stick. A sister of the man, while returning thanks to the Prophet for interfering to preserve the life of her brother, was loudest in abuse to the ruffians. But the bystanders could not bear to witness the sufferings of their ill-used friend, and one of them suggested his removal to the dispensary. To this both sister and brother objected. The brother would have him go home, and the sister would see that he wanted for nothing: with the help of their prayers and good wishes he would soon be all right again. This was not permitted, and the wretched sufferer was taken to the Royapettah Hospital without further delay. The doctor examined the wounds, and, to the infinite disgust of everybody, he made the astounding revelation that they were all self-inflicted! The wounds were scratches produced by a knife, and they could not have been inflicted by anyone but himself. "Cut my head off," said Moideen, "if my tale is false!" But the police got scent of the matter, and in half an hour the true state of the case was brought to light. The over-honest servant had lodged the 200 Rs. with his sister, and had cut himself about the head with a knife, with the object which is now evident. The money has been recovered, but whether the party from whom it was got back owes any additional obligation in being omitted in the charge about to be sent up against her brother, is not known. She ought at least to be indicted as the receiver, and punished more severely.—Times, Nov. 24.

INDIAN CADETS.—Sir Patrick Grant, in a General Order, directing all Indian cadets at Madras to do duty for the first six months with Queen's troops, adds, "The Commander in Chief earnestly requests Commanding Officers to receive the young officers who may be thus appointed under the operation of this order, with the same consideration as if posted permanently to the regiment; carefully instructing them in their various duties, and affording them on all occasions such friendly advice and assistance as may be necessary; advantages of themselves of the highest importance in their effects upon a young soldier's future career. The Commander in Chief persuades himself that these young officers will be unhesitatingly welcomed to the benefit of the mess library, and all such institutions of the regiment to which they may be temporarily attached, as regular paying members, but without their being called upon for entrance donation or contribution."

TAKING IT EASY.—A correspondent of a Madras contemporary complains that on the 28th November notice was given by the officiating chaplain at the Cathedral "limiting the time for celebrating the rite of baptism to the first Wednesday in the month at evening service." The Bishop of Madras is said to be the author of this measure.

OOTACAMUND ASYLUM.—Up to the 6th December, the donations to the Ootacamund Asylum amount to Rs. 28,702-6-0; the annual subscriptions to Rs. 3,561; and the monthly to Rs. 349, or Rs. 4,158 per annum. Amongst the contributions there are three following each other, viz., Faith, Rs. 50; Hope, Rs. 100; and Charity, Rs. 150.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MADRAS.—The annual meeting of the senate took place on Saturday, December 11, and from the Madras Spectator we learn that the director of public instruction proposed two resolutions: "the first to the effect that, in addition to the division into two classes which is now made, of candidates at the entrance examination; those placed in the first class should be arranged in order of merit, instead of alphabetically, as has hitherto been the case. The second, that those who are in the first two of the three classes in which candidates for the B. A. degree are to be hereafter placed, should be arranged in order of merit." These resolutions were seconded by the Rev. Mr. Symonds, and they were supported by Messrs. Mayne, Fowler, and Braidwood; they were opposed by Messrs. Richards, Hally, and the Vice Chancellor, the last-named gentleman remarking that "it had been long settled at Oxford that men not examined in the same subjects could not be classed in order of merit. This principle was even carried so far that it was considered impossible to compare with each other men who had used different authors in the same language. Oxford men were merely put into a first class, a second class, &c.; and nobody ever asked whether a man had a good or a bad position in his class. If he were a first-class man that stamped him." For the resolutions there were nine votes, and against them nine; the Vice Chancellor gave his casting vote against the resolutions, so that they were lost.

NATIVE GIRLS' SCHOOLS.—The Examination of the Native Girls' Schools, in connection with the Free Church Mission in Madras, took place on Friday. There was a very large and encouraging attendance of ladies. Mrs. Morehead filled the chair. Mrs. Walter Elliott was also present, as was Colonel Brown and lady, the Director of Public Instruction, Mr. F. Agnew, and a large number of missionary and other gentlemen. About 400 girls were in attendance. These, Mr. Braidwood explained, were the scholars of four separate schools—the Boarding School for girls, presided over by Mrs. Anderson, where the children were all Christians, lived and were brought up together as one family as far as this was possible, the Madras Day School, the Triplicane Day School, and a branch of the Madras Day School in Black Town. In the three latter the girls were of different Hindu castes, and about forty were Mahomedans. In August last, seven of the girls of the day school, fully impressed with the truths of the Gospel, came to the missionaries and sought protection. Two went back, and were not seen again. Two were very young, and were sent to their friends. One, after remaining some time, expressed a desire to return to her parents, and left. Another, after having resisted the entreaties and persuasion of her friends for a short period, was at length overcome, and left the school. One continued steadfast and remained. Another girl, after an absence of one year, returned to the school, and was now with them.

Mr. Braidwood said that he had to report some progress during the past year. The senior classes were prepared to be examined in Scripture, history, geography, arithmetic, grammar, and dictation. They were taken in some of these studies, and for native girls, and children of their tender years, ranging between seven and eleven, acquitted themselves with a readiness and an intelligence for which the writer was not prepared. . . . The proceedings were brought to a close shortly after two o'clock, having been opened and concluded with prayer. The senior class of Mrs. Anderson's girls sang two or three hymns, at intervals, with very fine and pleasing effect. The intonation was free from the harshness peculiar to native singers, and would have been considered creditable for English girls.—Spectator, Dec. 6th.

THE LATE LIEUTENANT COTTAM.—We regret to announce the death at Trichinopoly on the 19th Dec., from cholera, of Lieutenant William James Cottam, of the Madras Artillery. He is much regretted at the station, for although he had only been there a short time, his quiet gentlemanlike manner, and his great good nature and affability, had made him a general favourite. He was playing rackets on Friday afternoon the 17th, apparently in good health; on Saturday morning he got up for parade, but went to bed again saying he felt unwell. About twelve o'clock symptoms of cholera manifested themselves, and his sufferings were very great until about eight P.M., when he quietly sank.—Madras Spectator.

LITERATURE IN SCINDE.

We are delighted to report the successful progress of institutions like the Kurrachee General Library and Museum; and we mean to devote a portion of our space to-day to a glance at the short but encouraging history of the efforts made in the capital of Scinde to provide useful information and harmless intellectual recreation for European residents, in the hope that we may thus stimulate similar movements elsewhere, and rouse up latent energy wherever these have not already been initiated. Seven years ago, we learn from the last report of the committee, there existed in Kurrachee few resources for the literary recreation or improvement of the community. There was one small station library for the civil and military gentlemen of the station, but for the general public there was none. It was then that the general library and museum was called into existence, and its progress up to the present time has been sufficient to realise the just expectations of its founders. Within two years from its commencement it absorbed the station library, and from starting with a constituency of forty-six subscribers, paying ninety rupees per mensem, it now possesses the following:—

1 Life Subscriber.
15 Subscribers at 8 annals each . . . . .	7 8
13 ditto " 1 rupees do. . . . .	13 0
1 ditto " 1½ do. do. . . . .	1 8
84 ditto " 2 do. do. . . . .	168 0
33 ditto " 2½ do. do. . . . .	82 0
147 with a monthly income of Rupees	272 0

This shows an increase over the previous year alone of thirty-one subscribers, paying Rs. 53-8 per mensem. Much of the increase is owing to the large numbers of European troops which have lately arrived at the station, but a great deal more to the hold which the library has obtained on public opinion, and which leads all classes to support it. One of the peculiarities of Indian life, viz., that few European residents stay long in one place, has been well exemplified by the registers of the library during the past year. Of the 116 subscribers at the beginning of the year, 72 are not now in the station, and the number of changes amongst their successors is equally remarkable; 122 having ceased to subscribe principally on account of quitting the station on duty, or ill-health, and a few by deaths, and 153 having joined and re-joined during the year. The number of books issued and re-issued during the past year is as follows:—History, 518 vols.; Drama and Poetry, 109; Novels and Works of Fiction, 3,590; Biography, 318; Voyages and Travels, 454; Theology, 53; Arts and Sciences, 116; Statistics, Commerce, and Manufactures, 13; Medical, 8; Military, 20; Magazines, 3,363; Miscellaneous, 638; total, 9,200.

Those who hold strong opinions on the uselessness, if not mischievousness, of works of fiction, will not be pleased with these figures, which show that of the entire volumes taken out in the course of the year about seven-ninths belonged to the category of light literature, if we include the magazines in this, while such solid pabulum as "history" can only be digested by one-eighteenth of the readers, "biography" and "voyages and travels" by a still smaller number, "theology" seems to have been marked dangerous, "statistics, commerce, and manufactures" pronounced indigestible dishes, and "arts and sciences" barely tasted by a select few, and passed on. We do not believe, however, that the relative proportions of patronage bestowed by the subscribers to the Kurrachee Library on the different classes of literature would bear an unfavourable comparison with the majority of public libraries at home, whether used by aristocratic, middle-rank, or humble readers. We do not intend at present to discuss the effects likely to be produced on the national character by the indulgence of an appetite for works of fancy and imagination. Suffice to say, that a taste for this sort of literature exists, and is on the increase, and that grave statesmen and other public men, instead of trying to lecture down the taste, as they formerly were wont to do, begin to admit that it may be gratified with advantage. Mechanics' Institutes on the basis conceived by Dr. Birkbeck proved lamentable failures, with their heavy "courses" on pneumatics, political economy, and hydrostatics, and libraries from which were excluded everything less light and entertaining than "Lardner's treatise on the Steam Engine," the "Mechanics' Magazine," and the "Penny Cyclopædia." Now at these institutions the lectures are designed to make the audiences laugh, not yawn or sleep; and the books are mostly of the kind which furnish light and easy reading—a change which has recently received the approval of Sir George Grey, Lord Brougham, Lord Stanley of Alderley, Lord John Russell, and Mr. S. Herbert.

If, therefore, members of the Kurrachee Library err in partiality to novels and romances, they sin in company with very respectable people. We learn from the report before us that the number of volumes in the library at present is 4,431, being an increase of 455 over the number possessed last year; 400 of these were purchased, and 55 presented. From the account current appended to this report, it appears that the funds of the institution have been liberally expended in the purchase of books, and subscribers find that all available means are taken to promote the efficiency of the library. Amongst the steps which have been taken with that view, may be mentioned an arrangement lately effected with Messrs. F. and J. Rivington, London, to select and despatch books to the library to the extent of £15 monthly. The managing committee report that the first instalment has arrived, consisting of fifty-six volumes.

The leading English periodicals and the Bombay and Calcutta quarterlies are supplied, and several newspapers subscribed for, or gratuitously forwarded.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FOURTH CRIMINAL SESSIONS.—The fourth criminal sessions of this year were dissolved on the 9th Dec., the cases having been disposed of by the Puisne Justice, Sir Matthew Sausse, in the course of five days. There were in all twenty-three cases, involving twenty-nine prisoners, of whom nineteen were Hindoos, seven Mahomedans, two Christians (one European and one native), and one Parsee. The ages of the prisoners ranged from sixteen to fifty-five years. The grand jury found true bills against all the prisoners. Of the twenty-nine prisoners committed, nine were acquitted and discharged after trial, and twenty were sentenced by the presiding judge. Of these ten pleaded guilty of the charges preferred against them, and the rest were convicted after due investigation. Of the latter, eighteen were sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour in the House of Correction as follows:—Two for six months, two for nine, six for twelve, six for fifteen, and two for eighteen months. Two were transported to the Straits Settlements; one, a Marwarree, on a charge of perjury, for a period of five years; and the other, a Mahomedan, for attempting to administer poison with intent to murder, for a period of seven years. It is pleasing to notice that the number of prisoners this sessions was nineteen less than at the last sessions in September.

WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.—On Friday, Dec. 3, an application was made in the Supreme Court before the Judges in Chambers, by Mr. White, on behalf of Mr. Goolam Mahomed Rogay, a Mahomedan merchant, for a writ of Habeas Corpus to be directed to Futtay Beebee, his mother-in-law, to produce the person of his infant daughter. The affidavit on which the application was grounded stated that Mr. Rogay in 1841 married his late wife Fatma Beebee, by whom in the year 1845 a daughter was born to him, named Khatheza Beebee, who up to the time of her mother's death, 1850, resided in her father's house, but subsequently by her father's sanction went to reside with her maternal grandmother, Futtay Beebee, where she still remains. That since the month of June, 1857, Futtay Beebee prevented the daughter from visiting her father at his house, and at the same time refused access to the father to her house for that purpose. That several applications were made to Futtay Beebee requiring her to give up the daughter in order that she might be prepared for the marriage ceremonies called Roosum Shalee, the girl having been betrothed to the son of one Mahomed Syed Rogay, but these applications were refused on the alleged ground that she was of full age, and, being her own mistress, did not wish to reside with her father, but preferred to live with her grandmother. That this was not true, the girl being not of full age, and consequently not competent to decide for herself as to her residence; and the applicant accordingly served a formal notice upon Futtay Beebee to deliver over to him his infant daughter, whom she had unlawfully detained in her custody. The notice was not complied with, which led to the present application. The Court granted a rule nisi to show cause why the writ of Habeas Corpus should not issue in this case; cause to be shown within ten days. It has transpired that the young lady has been married by her grandmother to the son of another Mahomedan gentleman, Mr. Mahomed Syed Parkar, she having had a repugnance to the young man to whom she had been betrothed by her father. This affair has caused a great sensation among the Mahomedan community, and the legality of the marriage is to be tested in a court of law.—Times.

NEW RAILWAY PROJECTS FOR INDIA.—Among the new undertakings recently launched upon the London share market is the following:—"The Berar and Eastern Coast of India Railway Company, Limited." The proposed capital of this company is £3,000,000, but only 2s. per £20 share is to be called, until a guarantee is obtained from the Government. In the event of the negotiations for this object proving unsuccessful, the undertaking will not be proceeded with. The line is to run from Coringa, at the mouth of the Godavary, to Nagpore, with a branch to Hyderabad. From Coringa to Nagpore is 400 miles, and the cost of construction is estimated at £8,000 per mile. The principal grounds relied upon by the promoters for urging forward this project, are two—the facilities which the proposed line will afford for the speedy conveyance of troops, and the impulse which it will give to the development of the resources of India. On the latter point we are reminded that the commercial advantages to be derived from opening out the Valley of the Godavary, and the Berar and Hyderabad territories, were pointed out to the local authorities many years ago by the late Lord Metcalfe, when resident at Hyderabad, and more recently by Colonel Cotton, of the Madras Engineers, in his valuable publication, "Public Works in India." In the "Appendix to Minutes of Evidence taken before Select Committee on the government of Indian Territories," in 1853, at page 164, it is stated, "If, by means of railroads, the great cotton field of Berar, situated within the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad, were placed nearly on an equality, in point of facility of transport, with the maritime cotton districts, then a breadth of land, sufficient for the growth of a quantity equal to the full demand of Great Britain, might at once be made available. It is, however, only by means of a railway that the territory of Berar can be placed in a position to become a cotton-exploring country." Cotton, the great staple of Berar, would by the proposed line be brought down to a port of shipment at a very reduced rate of charge. That grown in the vicinity of Chanda is considered the best in India. Among the considerations which will be pressed upon the Government, in order to induce it to grant its guarantee, is this important one—that when the branch line above indicated, and the trunk lines of the Madras and Bombay Railways have been constructed, there will be a complete chain of communication from south to north, and from east to west, through the centre of India. Among the directors are Messrs. R. J. B. Campbell, M.P., G. Clive, M.P., W. Jackson, M.P., J. Pilkington, M.P., and we observe that a portion of the shares are reserved to be taken up in India.—Bombay Gazette.

THE ROYAL & THE INDIAN ARMY.—An extraordinary story is floating about in military circles, to the effect that Lieut. Col. Call, of the 18th Royal Irish, at Nuggur, refused to allow the interpreter appointed to his regiment by the Government, Lieutenant Innes, of the 22nd N. I., to dine at the same table with himself. Lieutenant Innes, not exactly approving the arrangement which placed him at a side-table, sent in a remonstrance to head quarters, and an intimation has been conveyed to Colonel Call, that as he does not know how to treat an interpreter, he can perhaps do without one; and Lieutenant Innes has been relieved from his duties. Now if the facts really are as stated, it seems to us that a very grave mistake is made, in leaving the matter in its present state. We have no wish to say one word that could be construed into a reflection upon the royal army. We are persuaded that the "snobbery," of which such conduct is an expression, is so intense that it must disgust all sensible men of both services. Who in the name of the comet is this Colonel Call, that he could not dine at the same table with his interpreter? Let it be that he is a son, or nephew, of the great Sir W. P., the chief partner in a third or fourth rate banking house in London; what then? Is the atmosphere of the counting house so excruciatingly genteel, that the son of a private gentleman and an officer in her Majesty's Indian army, is not refined enough to dine with the establishment? The service may well blush for such intense and offensive snobbery. Man for man, you will find the soldiers of the East India Company the equals of their brethren in the royal army in every respect. If there are fewer scions of the aristocracy in the ranks of the former, there are fewer of the parvenu class also; while the fact remains, that from greater opportunity for distinguishing themselves, the one army has produced a score of men of world-wide fame, where the other has produced one. The presence of such men as Parke and Call in our army is an unmitigated misfortune, and were the interests of the country, or the service consulted, a quiet hint would be given to them both, that we can dispense with them. It is hardly six months since the hero who flogged the thakoor of Bhurr,—"the eyes" of his interpreter before the officers, and was permitted to apologize, when he should have been gazetted for leave to Europe. The army promises to be distinguished by a very high tone of feeling by and bye, under Sir Henry Somerset's care.—Bombay Times.

SUNKERSETT'S FAIR AT GOWALLA.—Vast crowds of people of all classes and creeds gathered on Monday evening (20th Dec.) to witness this fair, held at the country-house and temple, at Gowalla, of Jugunnath Sunkersett, Esq. On the road were innumerable shops, glittering with the costliest and rarest toys, and all surmounted by a white canopy. Over one of them was a transparency, with the inscription "God save the Queen." European ladies and European and native gentlemen, to whom invitations had been sent for the occasion, were accommodated on a gallery. One of the inner entrances to the spacious gardens was decorated with a huge transparency, with the royal arms and the inscription "Victoria welcome to India." The tastefully-arranged walks and seats about the gardens; a beautiful large fountain playing in the moonbeams; fruit trees on all sides, with the branches drooping with the weight of their delicious burden; flowers shedding their grateful perfume to regale the senses of those who reposed awhile near them; flags and Chinese lanterns waving in the air; Hindoo devotees washing their hands and faces, here and there, on the steps of the tank in the gardens; rockets whizzing and paper balloons rising to the clouds from different directions; while the strains of music enlivened one's spirits, and moonlight enhanced the charms of the spectacle—each and all made for the beholder a fairy scene. The rush of the crowd into the gardens was immense, when the fireworks commenced, soon after midnight; and the zeal of the spectators had not diminished, even up to two o'clock in the morning.—Bombay Times.

MILITARY UNDRRESS.—The Commander in Chief at Bombay has followed up his order about dress by settling the costume to be worn off duty. It is to be a blue frock coat, double breasted, with a stand-up collar, and closed from breast to chin. This dress is ornamented with two rows of brass buttons, and a red sash, and when worn on a hot day makes the officer feel as if he were broiled, and look like a railway guard. In England an officer may dress as he likes, provided he dresses like a gentleman.

GENERAL JOHN JACOB.—Lord Elphinstone has paid the following tribute to the memory of the late Brigadier General John Jacob, C. B.:—"The Right Honourable the Governor in Council announces with very deep and sincere regret the decease on the 5th instant (Dec.), at Jacobabad in Upper Scinde, of Brig. General John Jacob, C. B., Commander in Chief of the Scinde Horse, Political Superintendent of the Northern Frontier of Scinde and Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. The Governor in Council is well assured that throughout the army, in all its ranks, the untimely loss of this gallant, devoted, and lamented officer, distinguished alike as a soldier and an administrator, will excite one universal feeling of true and lasting sorrow."

ENTERPRISING NATIVES.—The Bombay Standard notices the rapid increase of Parsee and Mussulman connection with England. Jaffer Sulliman, the coachbuilder, now visits England periodically. Several Parsee firms have opened branch houses in Liverpool and London. A Parsee doctor, a few months since, took home his wife and family. A Mussulman lawyer has already been admitted to practice in Bombay, and Parsees are competing for assistant surgeoncies.

NAWAB OF BANDA.—It is stated that the allowance of the Nawab of Banda was, till the mutinies, £40,000 a year. This, with his palace and treasure, has been forfeited by his treason. The man himself, when carried into General Michell's camp, looked a low debauched native.

BRIGADIER COGHAN.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier pleads the claim of Brigadier Coghlan to the honours of the Bath. This officer has been commandant and political agent at Aden during the whole period of the mutinies. The news of the outbreak stirred the Sultan of Lahej to hostilities, and when aid was demanded from Aden, the station was menaced from without by 1,000 men with artillery, and from within by a fierce Mussulman population. Brigadier Coghlan had only a wing of H.M.'s 86th, and some artillery, but he at once despatched the former, who were the first reinforcements received in Bombay. No outbreak followed, and the station has continued to increase in wealth, population, and comfort.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL G. H. ROBERTSON, of the 25th Regiment N.L.I., serving in the Gwalior division, has been compelled by severe indisposition to relinquish the command of his corps, and to leave Gwalior on medical certificate. Brigadier C. S. Stuart, C.B., commanding the 1st brigade in the Gwalior division, to which the 25th Regiment is attached, has issued the following order on the occasion, containing a well-merited eulogy on the gallant officer above named:—"Camp Morar, 30th of November, 1858.—Brigadier Stuart, C.B., announces to the 1st brigade Gwalior division, with great regret, that Lieut. Colonel Robertson has, from severe indisposition, been obliged to relinquish the command of the 25th Regt. N.L.I., and leave the brigade on medical certificate. Brigdr. Stuart takes this opportunity of expressing his warmest acknowledgments to Lieut.-Colonel Robertson, for the gallantry, indefatigable zeal and intelligence which he has displayed on all occasions; and the high state of efficiency and discipline in which he has maintained the distinguished regiment he has commanded during a trying crisis and protracted field operations. Lieut.-Colonel Robertson has on several occasions distinguished himself while in command of light columns detached from this brigade, which his intelligence, experience, and knowledge of the language and the habits of the natives, well fitted him to command. Brigadier Stuart sincerely hopes that a change of air to a more genial climate, and cessation from harassing duties will soon restore the Lieut.-Colonel to perfect health, and not long deprive the State of his valuable services."

A ROCK SNAKE.—On Monday afternoon, Dec. 20, while the ship City of Palaces, from Singapore, was being unloaded, a magnificent specimen of rock snake—the only type we possess of the Bon Constrictor—was found alive in the hold. It was close on seven feet in length, and marked with the most extraordinary distinctness and beauty. The ship had left Singapore on the 20th of August with a miscellaneous cargo, arrived in Bombay on the 28th November, and had thus been about 100 days out, during which time the creature, which had secured for itself a free passage, appeared to have lived much to its own satisfaction, considering the excellent condition in which it was found. Captain Jones very considerably had it sent immediately on shore, and it now occupies a position it could never have contemplated, and probably, if consulted, would not have aspired to, on the shelves of the Museum of the Grant Medical College.

CHINA.

SUMMARY OF NEWS.

No authentic details have been received of the progress of Lord Elgin up the Yangtze-kiang, but reports were rife among the Chinese at Shanghai, to the effect that his squadron had been fired on by the rebels at Nanking, and that, afterwards, he had held communication with them at Woohoo. Baron Gros, the French Plenipotentiary, left Shanghai, for this place (Hong Kong) on the 27th Nov. in the steamship La Place, but next day that vessel ran ashore on one of the Chusan Islands; and fears were entertained for her safety. By aid, however, of H.M.'s vessels Inflexible, Nimrod, and Opossum, she was got back to Shanghai without having received material damage, and Baron Gros came down to Hong Kong in the Aden, a vessel of the P. and O. Company. Mr. Reed, the American Minister, left this on the 8th December in the Minnesota for Bombay, from whence he intends to proceed to New York via Egypt and Europe. The Governor of Macao is said to be about to proceed to Siam, with the view of forming a treaty between that country and Portugal. In Canton a fair amount of business is reported to have been done in imports; but though settlements of teas have been made, there seems to be some difficulty in completing the lading of vessels nearly full. The season's supply will probably not much exceed 230 chops. The city and surrounding country are perfectly quiet, and ladies even ride fearlessly through the streets in all directions, and have gone out eight to ten miles into the surrounding country, where they are invariably treated with respect. Some false rumours have been spread about the approach of a large rebel force to Canton, and that they had encamped immediately behind the White Cloud mountains; but General Straubenzee and a small party, we are told, lately rode out a distance of twenty-five miles in that direction, without seeing or hearing anything of them, and it has since been ascertained that they are, and in no great numbers either, still on the borders of the province. Indeed, accounts are said to have been received of a victory gained over them by the "Braves of the Ninety-six Villages," whose courage had been stirred up to the fighting point by the promise of a grant in dollars and the plunder of the rebel camp. Some of these braves, while on their march past Canton, found their way into the city, and caused some alarm to Peh-kwei, lest they should get into trouble with the foreigners; but fortunately nothing of the kind occurred, and they quietly left after satisfying their curiosity. The harvest has been the most plentiful known for many years, and so cheap are provisions, that we are informed a coolie can live in the country for eight cash (about three farthings) a-day. A party from Macao went up the river last week to the hot-springs of Yong-mak, and visited several other parts of the interior, where they were astonished at the immense supplies of grain stored at the numerous farm-houses. The rice is piled up in immense wicker-baskets, carefully protected from the weather by a thick covering of straw. The party was everywhere well received, and slept two nights at one of these houses, which are large and commodious, but without the slightest pretensions to comfort, being all of one story only, and without flooring of either wood or tile. They would prove dangerous habitations for Europeans, though the natives seem to live healthily enough in them. As to local matters, there has been a successful expedition against some pirates in the neighbourhood of Macao. Sir John Bowring was staying with the Governor of Manila, by latest accounts from that place. Ma-chow Wong, the notorious pirate informer and employer of pirates, has been removed from Hong Kong and despatched among a batch of convicts to Labuan.—Overland China Mail, Dec. 15.

THE FRANCO SPANISH EXPEDITION.—The Spanish ship Bella Galea arrived here (Manilla) on the 1st December, bringing news of the Franco-Hispano encampment at Turon up to the 18th November. The Admiral had given orders to prepare two months' provisions for eight hundred men, who, it is conjectured, were to be sent in the Spanish s.s. Eleano, and five gunboats at the beginning of this month against the fort of Saygon, kingdom of Cambodia, for the purpose of destroying it. It was believed that the troops selected for this expedition would be three companies of Spanish chasseurs, and four hundred French soldiers. Saygon would be about a hundred leagues from the encampment, and it is expected that by this movement the attention of the enemy will be sufficiently drawn to that distance, so as to enable the allies to fall upon the Empire of Hue. The entrance to the river of Hue had been reconnoitred, and a fort destroyed that was situated at its mouth. The French steamer Primauguet had effected this, and sounded the entrance of the river, which was found sufficiently deep (nine feet) for the passage of the gun-boats. It is affirmed that inside this river there was a Cochinchinese squadron, consisting of four merchant brigs armed with more guns than war-brigs of the same size, and also a steamer; and undoubtedly these vessels would be the choicest prey of the first gun-boat that penetrated into the river. A sentinel of the French advanced post, situated at the mouth of the river of the Isthmus of Friancha, had been surprised by some of the enemy, and notwithstanding that the Spanish and French troops stationed there immediately rushed to the rescue, they could not avert the assassination of the sentinel by the enemy, who carried off his carbine, and one of his hands which they had cut off. The French and Spanish advanced troops fired on and dispersed them, wounding several, and taking two prisoners. All the merchant vessels that had been freighted to take provisions there had arrived, and also the rest of the Spanish Expedition, and a large quantity of ammunition and stores. Many camarines or large sheds of bamboo, cane, and nipa thatch, had also been taken there, by which the encampment was much improved. The admiral was greatly applauded by all parties for his zeal in the preservation of the army. On the 1st November, the Spanish troops ceased to be supplied with rations by the French, and nevertheless, the admiral had ordered new bread to be served out to them every day, and also fresh meat very frequently. It is stated that the sanitary condition of the Spanish troops may be called excellent. On the 12th, they commenced using the hospital huts, which had been set up for trial near the Luneta Barrack. The Spanish ship Maria Louisa left Manila for Turon on the 6th Dec., with a full cargo of provisions and other necessaries—the private speculation of a Spanish merchant.—Correspondent of China Mail.

CEYLON.

SUMMARY.—During the past fortnight the weather has been a good deal broken, and the preparation and shipment of coffee have not progressed so rapidly as those interested could wish. The exports have been 25,538 cwt., in the proportions of 9,248 plantation and 16,290 native. The plantation has gone chiefly in a vessel to London; the native in two vessels to France and one to Calcutta. The exports of plantation from 1st of October are 43,000 cwt., a quantity less by 16,300 cwt. than that exported to the same period last year. Native, on the other hand, is far in advance, being 41,000 against 22,000. The aggregate, 84,947 cwt., is in excess of the previous three years. The export of cinnamon and oil are scarcely up to the average. The weather promises now to be dry, and we have little doubt that the first fortnight of the new year will show a largely increased export business. The Legislative Council having closed its sittings, and the Governor being away on his travels, the most interesting event of the fortnight has been a meeting of the Planters' Association, at which Mr. George Wall was nominated a member of the Immigration Commission. This took place on the 27th. The merchants had previously chosen Mr. C. Shand; the Governor had appointed Mr. Churchill; and Mr. Doyme will no doubt act on behalf of the railway. The commission is therefore complete; and a body of rules must have been prepared in anticipation, for the Governor intimated his readiness to hold an Executive Council on the 31st December to confirm them; and another in January, if necessary, before he commences his second tour. Meantime it would seem that no selection of coast agent or secretary has yet been made. The railway works are showing signs of progress, and the chief engineer has announced that 8,000 more labourers are to be employed. We observe that the average circulation of Oriental Bank notes in November had closely touched on £90,000, the figures being £89,218. "Judicious management" has enabled this institution to fill and more than fill the place previously occupied by Government in this respect. It seems probable that the round sum of £100,000 will be reached before the conclusion of the coffee season. Grain continues excessively dear, and at Jaffna they have had something like grain riots. Cases of cholera occur occasionally amongst the natives in the drier parts of Colombo. Our obituary includes the names of Mr. Thomas Affleck, of the Bogambra Mills, Kandy; and Mr. George Urquhart, for many years a planter.—Overland Observer, Dec. 29.

CENTRAL ASIA.

On the 5th Nov., Dost Mahomed Khan received a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan from Balkh, stating that the King of Bokhara, after having conquered Kogand, had arrived in Shehr Subz, and sent him Vakeel with a present of some horses and other things intended for the Dost to him. The Dost has written to Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan to send the presents to Cabul without further delay. On the 8th, the Ameer wrote to Shah Murv Khan, ruler of Jellalabad, informing him that he would soon reach Jellalabad, and ordering him to go to Peshawur and ask the Commissioner for the matchlocks which were due to him. On the 11th, Sirdar Mahomed Shureef Khan, ruler of Cabul, went out at night in the disguise of a poor person, and gave two pice to a grapeseller and asked for grapes. The grapeseller gave him six chittacks of grapes for the pice, on which the Sirdar asked for eight chittacks, and said that Sirdar Mahomed Shureef Khan had ordered that article to be sold at that rate. The grapeseller used some harsh language to the Sirdar, and even went so far as to abuse the Dost and his ancestors. Next morning the Sirdar sent for the grapeseller and fined him two hundred and forty rupees. The Dost has left Cabul for Jellalabad. On the 12th, a letter from Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan, of Candahar, was received, stating that a few men of Sirdar Rehmdil Khan had arrived from Mushed, from whom it was ascertained that Rehmdil Khan was well honoured by Hisam-ood-dowla, who recommended him to the King of Persia to assist in restoring his (Rehmdil's) territories. The King of Persia replied that this cannot be done until he returns to Teheran, when it will be taken into consideration. On the 13th, the Ameer went to the house of his son, Sirdar Wullee Mahomed Khan, who was suffering from diarrhoea, and was very ill. While there he sent for Futteh Mahomed Khan, Belooch, and ordered him to go to Candahar, where his pay would be given him. Futteh Mahomed Khan at first refused to go, as his object to get the government of Kelat was not complied with. The Ameer said that on his reaching Candahar he would be accommodated with what he wished for, and having bestowed khilats permitted him to go. On the 14th, a letter was received from Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, of Ghuznee, stating that he had marched for Candahar, and left his son at Ghuznee, whom the Ameer may summon to Cabul whenever it pleases his Highness. He had also ordered his force to go to Cabul and remain there during winter. On the 15th, a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan was received, stating that thousands of the inhabitants of Cabul had run away to Balkh and other places, the cause of which he did not understand. On perusing this paper, the Ameer was greatly enraged, and said that Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, Mahomed Ameer Khan, and Mahomed Shureef Khan were the causes of all this, for they have collected all stores for their own use, and left nothing for the people. On the 16th, a letter from Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan, of Candahar, stated that he had heard from Sirdar Sooltan Mahomed Jan, who wrote that he had received news from Persia, to the effect that the British have occupied Kelat Belooch, and are levying forces there. The same letter also stated that the King of Persia turned out this Prime Minister from his dominions, on suspicion of his being friendly to the British. On the 17th, Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan bestowed his sword on Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan, in presence of Sirdar Peer Mahomed Khan, Sirdar Mahomed Oosman Khan, Gholam Mahomed Khan, Mooktar, and Ubdool Wahab Khan. A letter from Mahomed Usleem Khan was received, stating that on arriving at the mouth of Dureh Ekka Oolung, he was opposed by the men of Meer Mohib Ally, ruler of that place, and after a hard fight, in which some men were killed on both sides, he had repulsed them from their own fort, and that he was now in possession of the Dureh. On the 18th, another letter from Mahomed Usleem Khan stated that Meer Mohib Ally had run away, and his brother had paid homage to him. On the 19th, eight copies of the Queen's Proclamation were received, one of which the Ameer sent to Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan, of Candahar, one to Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, one to Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan, and kept one for himself. The remaining four were sent to Nawab Foujdar Khan. On the 21st, the Peshawur Dawk was received, which was opened and read in presence of a few confidential courtiers. A Purwanah to Nawab Foujdar Khan was also read, in which it was stated that the Russian agent should not be allowed to come to Cabul. The Ameer was greatly pleased with this, and said that he was of the same opinion as the British. On the 22nd, he sent a message to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan of Herat to the same effect, with a copy of the Purwanah, and requested him not to allow the Russian agent to come to Cabul.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE STRAITS.

PIRACY.—Some of the trading prahus which have recently arrived from the eastward report that there are a number of large Lanun pirate prahus cruising in the Carimatta passage and the neighbouring waters. A Bugis prahu, from Sumbawa, bound to Singapore, was attacked off Carimatta, by twelve of these pirate prahus, and maintained a most obstinate combat with them for many hours. At last, after the nacoda and most of the crew had been killed, the survivors scuttled the prahu to prevent her falling into the hands of the pirates, and one or two of them succeeded in reaching one of the adjacent islands. It is supposed that several trading prahus bound to this, have fallen into the hands of these pirates.—Singapore Free Press, Dec. 21.

SUICIDE IN JAPAN.—Suicide is looked on in Japan with great honour. The usual means adopted is to open the abdomen in the shape of a cross with a small sabre, and if the person has strength enough to cut his throat by a third cut, he is looked upon as a hero. When a functionary or a private individual has committed anything which will bring him before a court of law, he anticipates his sentence by committing suicide. The trial is then cut short, and his heirs enter into quiet possession of the property of the deceased, and the son takes the office thus vacated by the father. If, on the contrary, the person waits his trial, and is executed, he is dishonoured, and his family ruined by having all their property confiscated. In case of an insult, which in European countries would lead to a duel, the person receiving it seeks out the other in some public place, and rips up his own abdomen in the presence of the bystanders. The insult is obliged to do the same, or he and his family would be for ever dishonoured. The old custom of ripping open the body is, however, in some cases modified. The person intending to commit suicide merely inflicts on himself a slight scratch, but a friend who is standing behind him cuts off his head by a single blow with a well-tempered sabre. The system of suicide is so engrained in the habits of the Japanese of a certain class, that a handsome dress is kept for the purpose, open in front, and when the deed is to take place the friends of the person are invited to be present, and have a sumptuous banquet served to them. There are even professors, whose business it is to teach the use of the sabre in a manner so dexterous that the wound shall not have the appearance of having been inflicted by a journeyman butcher. We may remark, that this tendency to suicide, which seems to have prevailed in Japan from a very remote period, has apparently lost ground within late years, as the missionary writers (Jesuits), who gave an interesting account of the country, state that it was the custom of the Japanese, when any one of them was informed that he had incurred the displeasure of the emperor, to at once wipe out the disgrace by self-destruction. The number of deaths which occurred each year in that way was extraordinarily great.—Journal des Débats.

FOREST TREES IN OUDE.—The whole kingdom is studded with magnificent trees, whose dense foliage and beautiful blossoms add a charming feature to the general aspect of the surface of this country, so favoured by nature, but so ungratefully treated by man. The banyan with its ever-spreading branches, producing numerous offspring of the parent tree, round which they cluster, ever multiplying, ever increasing; the mango, with its yellow and luscious fruit; the sheesha, resembling our oak in stateliness; the tamarind, thickly shaded and covered with its red bean-like produce; the jamun, with its purple plum-like berries, beautiful to look at, but sharp and acid to the taste; the peepul, with its round thick leaves and shady branches; the bale, with its cocoa-like nuts, whose hard shell contains the sweet, juicy fibres, along with the sloe-like bitter of its manifold kernels; the wild fig; the cotton-tree, with its snow-white blossoms so charmingly relieved by the surrounding green; the jack, with its huge trunk and its curious rough surfaced monstrous oval produce; the mahooa, from the fruit of which a spirit is distilled; the owla (phyllanthus); the neem, with its long thin zigzag shaped leaves so useful to native medical practitioners; the sandal, and other handsome trees, are everywhere discernible, either in fine groves or standing in solitary grandeur, looking proudly on the rich fields beneath, or appearing to protest by their verdancy and beauty against the violence which desolates the country around them.—Oude; its Past and its Future.

Operations of Lord Clyde.

Allahabad, 10th Dec., 1858.

The rt. hon. the Gov. gen. has much satisfaction in directing the publication of the following despatch from H.E. the C. in C:—

To H.E. the Visct. Canning, Viceroy and Gov. gen.
 Hd. Qrs., Camp near Doundeakera,
 25th Nov., 1858.

My Lord,—I had the honour to announce to your lordship in a despatch dated 23rd Oct., 1858, addressed by the chief of the staff to the Sec. of Govt. in the Mily. Depart., that I was about to take the field for the purpose of assuming the personal direction of military affairs in the Byswarra country.

2. Accordingly on the 2nd Nov. I rode to Pertabghur, where my camp had preceded me.

3. Much care had been previously given to the exact calculation of time. The column under Sir Hope Grant, which had recently been ailing the advance of Col. Kelly from Azinghur, that under Brig. Pinckney at Pertabghur, having been alike combined in their movements for the reduction of the country through which they passed, and to compel the submission of the Rajah Lall Madho of Amathee, if possible, without loss of life.

4. During these movements, Sir Hope Grant had an affair with the enemy in the neighbourhood of the Goomtee, and took some guns, and Brigdr. Wetherall stormed the fort of Rampoor Kussea.

5. On my arrival at Pertabghur these officers had respectively reached the points indicated for a general operation against Amathee.

6. It was my earnest wish to carry into execution the instructions I had the honour to receive from your lordship on the 1st Nov., in completion of the Queen's proclamation. I accordingly gave every chance to Lall Madho, who had peculiar claims on your lordship's clemency, in consequence of the protection afforded by him to British fugitives at the time of the outbreak.

7. His allegiance was not willingly rendered, and I was obliged to close my forces round Amathee, before he would consent to come into my camp. His fort was then evacuated and his guns secured; the former has since been destroyed, his land and property having been assured to the Rajah.

8. From Amathee I moved without delay to Shunkerpore, the fort of Beni Madho, the most influential leader of the Byswarra, where I arrived on the 15th inst. He was summoned to lay down his arms with his followers, on which event taking place, life and liberty to go home were to be secured to the latter, and a careful consideration of his own claims to the former. But he was told in explicit terms that to treat with the rebels in arms was absolutely forbidden by your lordship, while, in trusting to your lordship's clemency, he had nothing to fear.

9. In order not to alarm him, and so to cause a conflict between the piquets, and prevent the acceptance of the terms by the conduct of his followers, the three brigades under Sir Hope Grant, Brigdr. Pinckney, and Brigdr. Wetherall, were placed on the north, south and east of his fort, but out of sight, although he was quite aware of their presence. Col. Eveleigh, who had been advancing by my order from Poorwa to the west, was not quite in time to complete the investment, he having been delayed by the difficulty of cross roads. During his advance, he had taken the fort of Simree and disposed a body of rebels.

10. The Rana Beni Madho, taking advantage of my extreme forbearance, evacuated the Shunkerpore fort on the night of the 15th instant, led his troops, about 10,000 in number, to the westward. Very early in the morning of the 16th, Sir Hope Grant was despatched to the northward to Roy Bareilly, for the neighbourhood of which place, viz., Peroo, the Rana was supposed to be making. On the same morning, Brigdr. Wetherall's brig., now transferred to Col. Taylor, 79th hussars, was ordered to move by forced marches to Fyzabad, to commence the Trans-Gogra movement. I remained for two days at Shunkerpore with Brigdr. Pinckney's brig., now under orders of Col. Jones, carabins., to enable the civil authorities to complete their arrangements when I moved towards Roy Bareilly.

11. On the 17th, while Brigdr. Eveleigh was pursuing his advance according to his orders, he came across part of the Rana's force, numbering about 5,000 men, which he dispersed, taking three guns. At that time it was reported that Peroo on the Sye, was still held, and Col. Eveleigh was ordered to advance on that place. Reports were most conflicting as to the direction taken by the Rana. Col. Eveleigh was directed to send in his heavy guns and encumbrances to Roy Bareilly, and then to march toward Doundeakera with all despatch, to which we believe the Rana would now repair. He was desired to give no rest. I myself moved at the same time to Bachraon in one march, with the intention of intercepting the fugitives when struck by Col. Eveleigh, whatever might be their direction. The followers of the Rana had again gathered round him at Doundeakera. I accordingly joined Brigdr. Eveleigh at Nuggur, on the 23rd inst., having marched sixty miles in three days, and have reason to congratulate myself on having done so, as the enemy had again mustered in considerable force at the strong position of Doundeakera, under the Rana in person. The position, consisting of enclosures of jungle flanked by the fort of Doundeakera, and the village of Buksur, is very strong.

12. I attacked him early in the morning of the 24th inst., with the two brigades composed as noted below,* completely broke and dispersed the rebel forces, inflicting a very heavy loss upon them, and taking all the guns (seven in number) which still remained in possession of the enemy. The pursuit was pressed with great vigour till near midnight.

13. It is probable that the Rana Beni Madho left early in the action. He is a fugitive with a few followers, and it is supposed he has again turned northwards. I am now waiting for some exact information, before taking further measures. Urgent instructions will be given to the various officers commanding posts, to act with the greatest promptitude towards preventing the rebels from again gathering together.

14. I am happy to be able to inform your lordship, that in consequence of these movements and the hopelessness of the rebel cause, which has now become apparent to all, the Talookdars and Zemindars of the Byswarra country are everywhere giving in their submission.

15. The force that had left Shunkerpore under Sir Hope Grant did not stop at Roy Bareilly, but advanced according to instructions to Jugdespore and the Goomtee. Sir Hope Grant himself having been ordered to Fyzabad, to take charge of the operation proceeding from that quarter, put the brigade that he had been with under Brigdr. Horsford, who is now moving leisurely up the right bank of the Goomtee towards Lucknow, and is engaged in destroying forts and reducing that part of the country.

16. Thus I think I may assure your lordship, that the first half of the Oude campaign has been brought to a conclusion, in conformity with the plans I have had the honour to submit for your lordship's consideration. Although extending over a length of more than two hundred miles, each movement and each apparently isolated attack has been made to defend and to support what was going on to the right and left. The advance in line, stretching from the confines of Rohilkund to Allahabad and Azinghur, has compressed everything like rebellion in a large sense of the word beyond the Gogra, with the single exception of the Sectapoor district, which is about being settled by the advance of Brigdr. Barker. He is already across the Goomtee. The late proceedings of that officer and of Brigdr. Troup (the latter having taken Mitowlee, and beaten the rebels opposed to him in two or three actions) in the north-west, in giving execution to their several instructions toward the general plan of campaign, have been very satisfactory.

17. It is to be expected, when rebellion has been so long dominant in a very extensive country, that chiefs whose acts have placed them beyond the pale of mercy, and bodies of plunderers, will still continue to give trouble. I trust, however, that the late operations will have so far carried out your lordship's policy, as to reduce the remaining difficulty to a matter of police, rather than of military combination in that part of the province which has now been subdued.

I am about to march to Lucknow. A movement on Byramghat and across the Gogra, in aid of that conducted by Sir Hope Grant from Fyzabad, will ensue very shortly.

Clyde, General.

C. in C., East India.

P.S.—In these operations the conduct of the troops had been admirable, as usual, and I shall have much pleasure hereafter in bringing to your lordship's notice the names of those officers and soldiers who have more particularly distinguished themselves.

Defeat of the Rebels near Bunkagaon.

Allahabad, 11th Nov., 1858.

The Rt. Hon. the Gov.-Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter, from the Adj.-Gen. of the army, dated 23rd Oct., 1858, forwarding a despatch from Brigdr. Sir Thomas Seaton, K.C.B., Comdg. at Shahjehanpore, reporting the complete rout of the enemy under Khan Bahadoor Khan, in an action near Bun-ke-gaon, on the 8th Oct., 1858.

The Gov. Gen. highly commends the conduct of Sir Thomas Seaton, and offers his best thanks to all the officers and men under his command, for their gallantry on this occasion.

From the Adj.-Gen. of the army to the Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Mil. Depart. with the Gov.-Gen.

Sir,—I have the honour, by direction of the C. in C., to forward a letter in original from Brigdr. Sir T. Seaton, K.C.B., comdg. at Shahjehanpore, dated 11th Oct., reporting the complete rout of the enemy in an action near Bunkagaon, under Khan Bahadoor Khan; and I am to beg you will bring to the notice of the Rt. Hon. the Gov.-Gen. the promptitude of Sir Thomas Seaton on this occasion, and the excellent conduct of the officers and men under his command.

W. MAYHEW, Lieut.-Col.

Adj.-gen. of the Army.

Hd. Qs., Allahabad, 23rd Oct., 1858.

From Brigdr. Sir T. Seaton, K.C.B., Comdg. at Shahjehanpore, to Maj.-Gen. Sir W. Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff.

Shahjehanpore, 11th Oct., 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of the Rt. Hon. Lord Clyde, C. in C., that, on the 6th inst., information reached me that Khan Bahadoor having advanced to his old position at Rajgaurh, on the Oude frontier, not far from Powaen, and that parties of his cav. were ravaging that territory, plundering and burning the villages, I directed a squad of the Mooltanee regt. of cav., under Lieut. Prendergast, to proceed at night to Powaen, to communicate with Lieut. de Kantow, comdg. the Rohilcund auxiliary police levy there, and, acting in concert with him, to reconnoitre the country, and, if possible, to destroy some of their parties.

The squad, reached Powaen in safety, before day-break on the morning of the 7th, and these officers proceeded with their united force to carry out my wishes.

They found, however, that Khan Bahadoor Khan had advanced close to Powaen, and his cav., which was very numerous, ready to receive them. As they could effect nothing, Lieut. Prendergast withdrew into the town of Powaen, which was immediately besieged by Khan Bahadoor's force.

On the news reaching me I determined to march to the relief of Powaen; but I was afterwards assured that Khan Ali Khan, with his force, had advanced from Pusgaon, that a large body of his inf. was on the banks of the Sooketta nullah (the boundary of this district), that parties of his cav. had surrounded the police force at Gowree, eight miles distant, had plundered and burnt that village, and were burning Bun-ka-tura, and other villages considerably nearer.

As this move on the part of the rebels seemed to me to be designed either to keep the force at Shahjehanpore in check, whilst Khan Bahadoor laid siege to Powaen, or to make a rush at Shahjehanpore, if I left it to relieve Powaen; and as I knew the latter place could easily hold out for several days, the Rajah and his people being encouraged by the presence of British officers, and aided by their troops, I determined to march on Khan Ali's position, and subsequently to turn my attention to the relief of Powaen.

Accordingly I marched with the troops as detailed below,* on the morning of the 8th, at two o'clock.

On the road I heard that the parties who had burned our villages had fallen back, and that they were at a village three miles from the Sooketta nullah, called Bun-ka-gong.

As we neared their village we fell in with their picket, and in about a quarter of an hour afterwards, the sound of a cavalry trumpet at some distance on our left announced the presence of the enemy.

I sent out a party to reconnoitre, and followed shortly myself, when from a small mound I observed the enemy drawn up in front of a village, with his guns in the centre of a line of inf., with cav. on their flanks.

The action may be very briefly described. The enemy opened upon us with shot and shell, and their cav. made a movement forwards on both flanks; but a few admirably planted shots from the artillery, under Capt. Cookworthy, dispersed their inf., and silenced their guns. The cav. on their left was dispersed by two of our guns, and a well-directed fire from the rifles; and the cav. on their right was kept in check by the Mooltanee horse, and sent sharply to the right-about by the light com. 82nd regt.

I advanced at first with some caution towards the front of the rebel position, as it was covered by a jheel, and in the grey of the morning the fort in the village appeared to have been newly repaired, but as no shots were fired from it, I sent three guns and the Carabineers in the direction the enemy's guns had taken, to the left, followed by the 82nd, whilst the 60th rifles swept round the other side of the village.

On again discovering the rebel guns, and main body of fugitives, I sent the whole of the cav. and three guns in pursuit.

Two guns were captured, and three-hundred of the enemy killed. The latter part of the action was entirely confined to art. and cav.; the inf. had not a chance, for not only the rebels fled so soon and fast, but the whole front of their position was covered by a succession of jheels and ponds, deep water cuts and holes.

I have never seen a stronger position. All round Bun-ka-gong is a heavy jungle, with numerous swamps and deep drains, more embarrassing to a force ignorant of the localities than the enemy, who despaired, and hid themselves in the jungle, where, as I subsequently learned, they abandoned two more guns, unyoking and driving away the bullocks.

But for these difficulties I should have been enabled to bring to a more satisfactory conclusion an action that has not been altogether profitless. I have received information from a spy, who was in the village when the first shots were fired, that the enemy numbered a little over 4,000, of whom 600 were sepoys. They had four guns; Khan Ali commanded in person; and we hear that after the action he was mortally wounded by a sepoy; but this requires confirmation. The rebels have retired on Nuwringabad, and Khan Bahadoor, repulsed at Powaen, has retired to that place also.

My thanks are due to the troops for their great exertions and excellent conduct on the march and in actions, and also to my staff and commanding officers; Capt. Tedlie, maj. of brig.; Lieut. E. H. Budgen, 82nd regt., acting as my orderly officer; Capt. Cookworthy, comdg. the art.; Lieut.-col. Constance, C.B., comdg. wing, 6th carbns.; Capt. Cureton, comdg. Mooltanee regt. of cav.; Capt. Maguire, comdg. 1st batt. 60th royal rifles; and Lieut.-col. Hale, C.B., comdg. 82nd regt.; Lieut.-col. Clarke, comsr. of Khyrabad district, Oude, accompanied the column, and rendered me efficient service.

T. SEATON, Brigdr.,

Comdg. at Shahjehanpore.

Defeat of the Rebels at Sundeela.

The Rt. Hon. the Gov. Genl. is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from the Adj. Genl. of the army, dated the 16th Oct., forwarding a despatch from Brigdr. Chute, comdg. at Lucknow, reporting the defeat on the 6th and 8th Oct. last, of a large body of rebels near Sundeela, by the troops under the command respectively of Maj. Maynard, H. M.'s 88th Regt., and Brigdr. Barker, C.B.

The ability and vigour which has characterised the operations of Brigdr. Barker have deservedly obtained the marked approval of the C. in C., in which the Gov. Genl. fully concurs.

The Gov. Genl. has also perused, with great satisfaction, the report on the conduct of Maj. Maynard and Lieut. Green and Chamberlain, on this occasion.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. Genl.,

Secy. to the Govt. of India, Milly. Dept., with the Govr. Genl.

From the Adj. Genl. of the army to the Secy. to the Govt. of India, Milly. Depart. with the Govr. Genl.

Sir,—I have the honour, by direction of the C. in C., to forward for the information of the Rt. Hon. the Gov. Genl., a letter in original from Brigdr. J. Chute, comdg. at Lucknow, dated the 10th inst., with its enclosures, reporting the defeat of a large body of insurgents near Sundeela, by the troops under command of Maj. Maynard, H. M.'s 88th Regt., and subsequently of Brigdr. Barker, C.B.

2. The C. in C. desires to draw the attention of his Lordship to the ability and vigour which have characterised Brigdr. Barker's attack and pursuit of the enemy, the results of which have been so signal; and Lord Clyde recommends that officer and Maj. Maynard to special notice.

3. I am also to request marked attention to the gallantry of Lieut. Green, of the Rifle Brigade, who has been dangerously wounded; and to the active part taken by Lieut. Chamberlain, of the Oude police, in this, as in other operations in which he has been engaged.

W. MAYHEW, Lieut. Col.

Adj. Genl. of the army.

Hd. Qrs., Allahabad, 16th Oct. 1858.

To the Chief of the Staff, Allahabad.

Lucknow, Oct. 10th, 1858.

Sir,—On the afternoon of the 4th inst. I received intelligence from the Chief Commissioner, that the police force at Sundeela, under Capt. Dawson, was threatened to be invested by a large body of rebels, with a request that a small force might be sent with two guns to assist him. Accordingly at ten o'clock that night, a force under Maj. Maynard, 88th Regt., as below mentioned, proceeded from Lucknow towards Sundeela:—

Two guns No. 12 batt., two 5½-inch mortars, 88th Regt. 120 bayonets, Police Inf. 600 bayonets, and Police Cav. 278 sabres.

The following morning a message was received by the Chief Commissioner, that Capt. Dawson was in a serious position, his force being completely invested, and the enemy's numbers said to be increased up to 12,000 men.

Fearing, therefore, that the force sent on the previous night would be hardly sufficient, under these circumstances, for carrying out the operations they were intended to, I deemed it advisable to despatch a large additional force.

Brigdr. Barker, C.B., having proffered his services, I gladly availed myself of them, and at 9 P.M., a column, as below noticed, marched for Sundeela, under his command.

2nd Drag. Gds. 200 sabres, Hodson's Horse 25 sabres, 88th Regt. 200 bayonets, 3rd Batt. Royal Brig. 100 bayonets, and two guns of No. 12 batt.

I have the honour to enclose the following despatches:—

1st. From Maj. Maynard, comdg. the force sent on the 4th inst., which relieved Sundeela on the 6th inst., and caused the enemy to retire some distance, with a loss of one gun and 150 men killed.

2nd. From Brigdr. Barker, C.B., who attacked the rebels strongly posted about three miles beyond Sundeela, on the 8th inst.

The force under this distinguished officer completely dispersed the main body of the rebels, taking four guns, and killing upwards of a thousand of the enemy.

The country round Sundeela is now reported to be completely clear of the rebels, who have retired across the Goomtee.

I beg you will bring to the favourable notice of his Lordship the C. in C. the valuable services of Brigdr. Barker, C.B., and M.J. Maynard, 88th Regt., as also the officers mentioned in their despatches.

J. CHUTE, Brigdr.,

Comdg. at Lucknow.

Lucknow, Camp Sundeela, 7th Oct., 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Brigdr. Chute, comdg. troops at Lucknow, that according to instructions I marched from Lucknow with the force as below mentioned* on the night of the 4th inst., and arrived at Mullabad about seven the following morning, where I was joined by 460 of the 2nd Oude po. cav., halted there till half-past three o'clock P.M., when I again proceeded towards Ruheemabad, which place we reached about seven P.M., and there halted for the night.

The following morning, the 6th inst., we marched for Sundeela, and as we approached the city about six A.M., discovered the enemy's cav. picquets in our front. I threw forward my cav. in skirmishing order, supported by the inf. and guns in line, showing as strong and extensive a front as possible. In this order we advanced for some distance driving in the picquets, and on nearer approaching the city were assailed by a heavy fire from inf. and art., from the northern and western sides of the city, and the topes and gardens around, and our left flank threatened by the enemy's cav.; the latter were charged with success by the 5th, and part of the 2nd Oude po. cav., who succeeded in capturing one 3 pr. gun, and sabreing a considerable number, while I brought up my guns and mortars to bear upon the gardens and enclosures occupied by the inf. Perceiving that the enemy's cav. was again menacing our left in considerable force, I removed my guns, and directed my fire upon them, which I kept up for some time, and then a second time our cav. charged them, obliging them to retreat with loss.

After this the cav. of the enemy again re-formed in our front in very extensive masses, and to all appearance as if they intended to hold their ground, when I ordered our guns and mortars to advance, supported on either flank by the detach. of the 88th Regt., in extended order; our fire proved most effectual (the Enfield rifles doing considerable execution), and this time the enemy were driven back in complete disorder, our cav. in pursuit.

Their inf., which had hitherto been keeping a heavy fire upon us from the city and neighbouring enclosures, at the same time retreated rapidly in disorder, threatened by the 7th po. inf., who followed them well up, our guns being brought to bear upon their left flank; the ground was such that cav. could not pursue.

Owing to the inability further to advance my guns on account of the obstacles presented, such as thick topes and bad ground, and the hard work the Europeans and horses had undergone in the heat of the day, I did not consider it prudent farther to follow up the pursuit.

We were engaged from six in the morning till twelve at noon, previously having had a march of eight miles.

The enemy's force from the best information may be computed at about 12,000 cav. and inf., the cav. preponderating; their loss may be put down at about 150 killed. I annex a list of casualties.

The conduct of both officers and men is deserving of the greatest praise, and I beg to bring under the notice of the Brigdr., that of Capt. Dowell, comdg. detach. Ben. art.; Lieut. Chamberlain, div. comdt.; Lieut. Brown, Royal art.; Capt. Hall, comdg. detach. 88th Regt.

P. MAYNARD, Maj.,
88th Regt. Comdg. Force.

To Brigdr. Chute, Comdg. at Lucknow.

Camp Sundeela, 9th Oct., 1858.

Sir,—On the day of my arrival at Sundeela, information was received that the main body of the rebels, who had been recently investing this place, and had only been driven away the day before by the advance of Maj. Maynard's party, was still within four miles at a place called "Jamo."

Accordingly at daybreak the following morning I started with the force, as below noted,* leaving a small force for the protection of the town and camp. I divided the cav. into two columns to act upon either flank, so as to cut off the enemy's retreat when driven from their position. The left column, under command of Maj. Seymour, 2nd Drag. Gds., consisted of one squad, 2nd Drag. Gds., and 300 po. cav.; the right column of the same strength was under the com. of Capt. Stapylton, 2nd Drag. Gds.

I advanced myself with the inf. and guns against the enemy's position at "Jamo," having the po. inf. under Capt. Dawson on the right.

The enemy's position was admirably chosen, the village being situated on high ground completely commanding the whole plain over which we had to pass, and surrounded with "dhauk" jungle and numerous jheels. Fire was opened upon us from four guns about the village, and from numerous jingalls and matchlocks in the jungle. Our guns were immediately brought into action, the rifles being thrown out in skirmishing order to the right and the 88th to the left, leaving one company in support of the guns. The 7th po. inf. were for the time kept in reserve.

The troops advanced steadily through the jungle, the right being well forward. The party of the rifle brig. under Lieut. Green gallantly rushed up the high position in front of the village, and captured a 6-pdr. gun; at the same time Capt. Dawson, with the 3rd and 6th po. inf. passed round the village and completely turned their left flanks, by which they were thrown into disorder, and commenced a precipitate retreat. The Oude po. here captured three guns, and killed a great number of the enemy, who were at first encountered in good formation.

At one time the rebels made a show of turning our left flank, but the advance of the 88th prevented it, and they then dispersed through the jungle in full retreat.

The arrangements for cutting off the retreating enemy were completely successful; each column of cav. came upon them in their retreat, and killed large numbers of them.

The total loss of the rebels is estimated at upwards of 1,000 killed, but it was impossible to judge accurately, owing to the great extent and very difficult nature of the ground passed over during the pursuit. They have, however, received a lesson which will keep the country clear for some time.

I much regret that our casualties were, necessarily, somewhat heavy, though chiefly among the native troops; but it was impossible to avoid the troops being rather dispersed, owing to the extremely difficult nature of the country.

Among the wounded (and I am sorry to say he is dangerously so) is Lieut. Green, of the Rifle Brig., who was attacked by a number of sepoys, whilst leading his men through a thick piece of jungle. He received nine severe sabre cuts before his men could destroy the whole party, some twenty or thirty. This officer had behaved so gallantly all through the day, that I most deeply lament this misfortune.

It is my pleasing duty to record my thanks to Lieut. Chamberlain, comdg. the Oude police. I am much indebted to him for his active assistance during the engagement, and I owe to him the suggestion of the plan of attack which was so successful.

To Capt. Orr, assist. commsr., I am much indebted for the very valuable and accurate information he obtained as to the position and intention of the rebels. To Maj. Maynard, comdg. 88th Regt., Maj. Seymour and Capt. Stapylton, 2nd Drag. Gds., comdg. respectively the left and right columns of cav., and to Lieut. Green, comdg. detach. of Rifle Brig., great praise is due. Maj. Seymour speaks highly of the conduct of Capt. Carnegie, 2nd Drag. Gds., the squad leader; and of Lieut. Graham, comdg. the police cav., with the left column, whose zeal and intelligence rendered him of the greatest assistance; and also of Lieut. Hawkins, serving under him.

Maj. Seymour also speaks most highly of Lieut. Green and Ensign Richards, of the Rifle Brig., who, getting near the cav. in the pursuit, most effectually cleared that part of the jungle for them. Maj. Seymour was with Lieut. Green when he was wounded, and was himself struck by two sword cuts, but was fortunately not much injured.

Capt. Stapylton speaks in praise of Lieut. Calvert and Ormsby, 2nd Drag. Gds., and most highly of the dashing conduct of Lieut. Drummond of the po. cav., whose tact and discretion in the management of his men enabled them to render valuable service. Capt. Barrow also did good service with this column. This officer speaks highly of Serg. Maj. Ward, and trumpeter Smith, 2nd Drag. Gds.; the latter, a mere boy, engaged a sepoy, and had his horse shot under him.

Of Capt. Dawson, comdg. the Oude po. inf., it is impossible to speak too highly; his dashing gallantry and the admirable tact which he at all times displays, renders the troops under his command most valuable assistance to an European force.

Capt. Dowell, comdg. the art., performed good service with his guns at the commencement of the action, but from the nature of the ground it was afterwards impossible to make use of the art.

To Lieut. Biddulph, Royal art., my brigade maj., I have to offer my best thanks; his energy and intelligence at all times renders him a most valuable assistant.

Lieut. Lawford, Hodson's horse, with a small detach. of his own regt. and a few po. cav., accompanied the centre column, and did good service, cutting up some 150 of the enemy.

I would also mention Lieut. Worsley, comdg. 7th po. inf.; but the good services of officers of the Oude po. will be more prominently brought to the notice of Government by Lieut. Chamberlain, through the Chief Commissioner.

Four guns were captured, but one has not yet been brought in, having been abandoned for the moment during the pursuit, and has not yet been found.

Several hackeries of ammunition were blown up, and much baggage taken. One elephant was also captured by the Oude po.

It is reported that two or three men of rank are amongst the killed, of whom the Moulvie is said to be one.

The force immediately opposed to us was about 5,000 men with four guns; but some distance in rear there was a large body of about 2,000 men with four more guns. These, however, retired across the Goomtee at the very commencement, and were untouched.

The Assist. Commsr. reports the country perfectly clear up to the Goomtee, with the exception of two or three small forts.

Brigdr. comdg. at Sundeela.

Recent Operations in Rajpootana.

From Maj.-Gen. Roberts, Comdg., Rajpootana F. F., to the Adj.-Gen. of the Army, Poona.
Camp near Sanganeer, 9th August, 1858.

SIR,—I have the honour to report, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., that from many reports I had gathered, it appeared likely the rebel army would cross the Neemuch and Nusseerabad road. As soon therefore as the heavy rains would admit, and the river became fordable, I moved on as quickly as I could, and reached Bunnara yesterday morning, after a long and very heavy march.

2. I soon found that the rebels had reached and were congregated about this place and Beelwara; as soon, therefore, as the men had had their breakfasts, and other circumstances would admit of, I marched with the troops as detailed below.*

3. On nearing Sanganeer, some thirty-five of the Guzerat irreg. horse, with some Belooch horse, under Rissaldar Meer Mahomed Allee, whom Capt. Alban, deputy judge adv. genl. was good enough to accompany, being in advance, came on a strong picquet of the enemy, being about 100 in number; these retreated, but were followed with all speed, up to the town through which they passed, and our party halted, finding the enemy in great force beyond it. They had wounded and taken one man, whose uniform showed the buttons of the 44th B.N.I.

4. On my approach about five p.m. I found that the body of the enemy, who were west of the city, were crossing to the right bank of the river. From further observations, the enemy appeared in great force, extending from near the river in a semi-circle far to the right, and for upwards of two miles, my front occupying 400 yards.

5. Capt. Brown, with three guns of No. 8 light field batt., soon brought them into action, and having broken the enemy's right, and caused much confusion amongst them, I crossed the river with the inf. under fire of two of the enemy's guns, which were well-directed. Having forced the enemy's right to retire and close to their left, I brought my force on, left thrown forward, and directed a party of H.M.'s 83rd to storm and occupy the small hamlet of Rowaree, on an eminence on our right. This, of course, was gallantly done, and I then brought forward the art., and which, with the Enfields of H.M.'s 83rd, opened fire again on the enemy's left.

6. I had one 8-inch howtzer. with me, and which was close up during the whole march yesterday of near thirty miles, and Lieut. Vibart, who has shown great energy, brought it into action on high ground on the left of the hamlet, but the enemy retired out of even its reach after the first discharge.

7. In the meantime the art., with a portion of H.M.'s 83rd, under Col. Steele, and 13th N.I., under Maj. Lye, had driven the enemy's left in, and all were completely out of range, and fast retreating towards Beelwara, and the dark of night coming on, I recalled all and bivouacked for the night on this high ground, a better position than it accidentally afforded us can hardly have been conceived.

8. I have the pleasure to report that not one single casualty occurred on our side; the enemy's loss was not great, about fifty or sixty in all killed and wounded.

9. The greater part of the rebels are cav., and have belonged to different regts. of the Bengal army; but more arrant cowards I have never seen; and there appears little credit in having beaten so large a body, averaged at 5,000 men, with the small number of 800 of such men as I had the honour to command.

10. The enemy had 5 guns, but I think only two in action, an 8 and a 6-pdr., with some elephants; and it was obvious, that had I had any cav., the whole of the materiel must have been captured and numbers destroyed. You are aware I had sent all my available cav. in pursuit of the enemy from Tonk with Col. Holmes.

11. I need not inform you of the good conduct of the troops, such being a matter of course. I am indebted to every officer with me for valuable work, and to every man in the ranks for a patient endurance and contempt of fatigue, which enabled me to bring the enemy to action after marching close on thirty miles.

12. My personal staff rendered me all the assistance that any general officer could desire.

13. The enemy at once left Beelwara, and I have heard of them this morning a good way off, retreating still with all speed towards Bagore, from whence the line of march is at present unknown.

14. I have intelligence from Col. Holmes, dated 8th; he also was pushing on after the enemy to Beelwara, and would reach to-day, so that the enemy have had a very narrow escape.

15. I cannot conclude this despatch without expressing my grateful thanks to Capt. Eden, of the Madras army, political agent at Jyepoor, who has accompanied me throughout, and acted on my personal staff; and it has been through him that I have been enabled to procure supplies, and that which was almost as necessary, good information; he was good enough also to send some very intelligent men with Col. Holmes.

Secret Department.

Sir,—I am directed by the rt. hon. the gov. in council, to transmit to you, for submission to the rt. hon. the Gov. Gen. of India, the accompanying copy of a letter, dated the 3rd inst., from the adjt. gen. of the army, with its enclosure, from Maj. gen. Roberts, comdg. the Rajpootana F. F., detailing the result of an encounter with the Gwalior rebels on the 14th August last, as also transcript of a resolution passed by this govt., under date the 9th inst.

H. L. ANDERSON, Secy. to Govt.

From the Adj. Gen. of the Army, to the Sec. to Govt., Secret Depart., Dapoorce.
Adjt. Genl's office, Hd. Qrs., Poona,
3rd Sept. 1858.

Sir,—I am directed by the C. in C. to request, you will submit to the rt. hon. the Gov. in Council, the enclosed despatch, dated the 16th ult., from Maj. gen. Roberts, comdg. the Rajpootana F. F., detailing the result of an encounter with the Gwalior rebels, on the 14th idem.

2. H. E. desires me to express the exceeding pleasure with which he has perused the account of the successful pursuit of these rebels and mutineers, who only escaped a similar catastrophe overtaking them at Sanganeer, on the 8th August last, from the maj. gen. having no cav. with him, the rapidity of insurgents' flight, and the coming on of night.

3. For three hundred and forty miles this pursuit has been maintained, under fearful heat in the earlier part of it, and an unexampled deluge of rain, which ceased only shortly before the signal results were achieved, as related in the maj. gen.'s report.

4. The hardships and privations which the troops have undergone have been of no ordinary character, and his lordship in council will, the C. in C. is assured, peruse with pleasure Maj. gen. Roberts' acknowledgment of their patient endurance.

5. The C. in C. commends Maj. gen. Roberts and his gallant officers and soldiers to the protection of the rt. hon. the Gov. in Council, under the assurance that their sufferings, endurance, and courage will meet with the acknowledgments they so well deserve.

EDWARD GREEN, col., adj. gen.

From Maj. gen. H. G. Roberts, comdg. Rajpootana Field Force, to the Adj. Gen. of the Army, Poona.

Dated Camp Moe, 16th August, 1858.

Sir,—I have the gratifying duty to report that the troops under my command, as detailed below,* fought a general action with the enemy on the 14th August, and completely defeated him.

2. A guard, as detailed below,† was detached with baggage and siege guns, in addition to the regular guards from each regt., and placed under the orders of Lieut. Vibart, actg. asst. comsry. of ordnance.

3. The rebel army was only eight miles from us on the 13th, after the troops had marched nearly seventy-nine miles in three successive days. The long and continued pursuit had taken effect, and their horses and cattle were much done up.

4. On finding our troops approaching they moved out, and took up a strong position on a rocky ridge of low hills, which forms the right bank of the Bunass, which flowed at the foot of the ridge along the whole front of their position; on our side the river was a perfect level plain. Their guns were placed on their right, and swept the whole of this plain before us.

5. Our troops formed behind a ridge, which concealed them from their view.

6. Supported by the cav. on their left the horse art. galloped forward to about 400 yards from their guns and replied to their fire, which had become sharp, and the battle of the Bunass commenced.

7. Our inf. now emerged into and across the plain, crossed the river knee-deep, accompanied by the three guns, No. 8 light field batt., attacked, and drove the enemy from the ridge he occupied, taking his four guns.

8. The guns secured, our art. and cav. passed the river, and the latter were pushed forward, charged and cut up vast numbers.

9. The inf. advanced in line. H.M.'s 72nd Highlanders being in reserve killing numbers of the enemy; it was by one concealed amongst the rocks that I have to deplore the loss of the Serg.-Maj. Holland, of the 8th Hussars, who was mortally wounded by a musket shot.

10. After passing these rocks H.M.'s 72nd Highlanders and two guns were detached to the right, to drive back a body of inf., who had been pursued by a small detach. of the Guzerat irr. horse, and stood at bay in some jungle; this body retreated, exchanging some shots at long distance.

11. The main body of the enemy, consisting of cav. and some of the more active of the inf., who had thrown away everything but their muskets, retreated so rapidly across an undulating country that they were already out of sight.

12. Accordingly the cav., who were a good deal scattered, were judiciously collected by my staff, and ordered to follow in pursuit, four guns horse art. accompanying them. The other two guns subsequently joined also. They continued on the tracks of the enemy for about seven miles, beyond which art. horses were unable to proceed.

13. The cav., under Col. Naylor, 8th hussars, who had his horse killed under him by a round shot early in the day, went forward, killing numbers of the enemy. After about four miles they came in sight of a large body.

14. As they were so numerous in cav., Col. Naylor slowly followed them, and sent back for the Lancers and Beloochees, who, acting independently, had lost the track, and gone over to the left.

15. On their coming up, the whole went forward at the trot, drove in the rear guard, composed of the late Kotah contingent and 5th regt. Bengal irregulars, on the main body.

16. Most of their remaining inf., and the badly-mounted men, were killed, or threw away their arms and sought refuge in the jungle-bushes. Three elephants, and a number of camels and other baggage-animals, were taken.

17. At last the remains of the inf., about 100 men, took post in a village fifteen miles from the field of battle, and their cav. formed around them. Col. Naylor, who had little more than 100 regulars and 80 Beloochees with him, and was now in a country unsuitable for cav., desisted, and returned towards camp, finding and killing many rebels along the line, who had concealed themselves as he passed before. He did not reach camp till eleven o'clock that night, and his men had not tasted food all day, having been eighteen or nineteen hours in the saddle.

18. I have now to perform the very pleasing duty of reporting the high sense I entertain of the service performed by the troops I had the honour to command on this occasion. Their steadiness under fire must have struck awe into the enemy, who dared not stand long before their imposing advance.

19. My best thanks are due to every officer and soldier, for the patient endurance during long and fatiguing pursuit [340 miles], in bad weather, which enabled me to bring the enemy to action at last.

I wish to bring to H.E.'s notice the good services of officers comdg. — Lieut. col. Price, R.A., comdg. arty., R.F.F.

Lieut. col. Naylor, comdg. cav. in pursuit.

Maj. Tremenhoe, comdg. engr; also officers comdg. regts. and detachments as follows:—

Lieut. col. Homes, 12th regt. N.I.; Lieut. col. Steele, H.M.'s 83rd regt.; Maj. Lye, 13th regt. N.I.; Maj. Locke, H.M.'s 72nd Highlanders; Capt. Petrie, 2nd tr. horse art.; Capt. Dennies, 1st lt. cav. (lancers); Lieut. Stevenson, half 8th light field batt.; Lieut. Stock, 1st Lancers, who accompanied Col. Naylor in pursuit with a troop; and Lieut. Macaulay, Belooch Horse.

20. I received the most able and valuable assistance from my personal staff, Lieut. Newall, actg. assistant adj.-gen.; Cap. Ballard, c.n., asst. qr.-mr.-gen. (who accompanied the cav. in pursuit); Capt. Alban, deputy Judge adv. Genl.; Capt. Lucas, deputy asst. comsry. genl., and my staff surg., Wyllie, were eager in carrying my orders during the day, and I desire to bring their services to H.E.'s notice.

Capt. Heathcote, deputy asst. qr. mr. gen., accompanied the force, and has shown much energy during the pursuit. Lieut. Macaulay has throughout shown his usual intelligence; his services have been most important to me.

Col. Price reports that he has received every assistance from his brig. maj., Lieut. Sterling.

I must not omit to mention the cheerful and ready willingness of the detach. of Guzerat irr. horse, under Pessaladar Meer Mahomed Ali, forming my escort; and on the 14th they killed a number of the enemy equal to their own.

21. The loss of the enemy in killed I compute at near 1,000 men.

22. Our casualties are few in comparison. H.M.'s 8th Hussars had 1-12th wounded of those who were in the battle.

23. I have since the action learnt that the enemy is quite disorganised and scattered; numbers have thrown away their arms; horses and ponies are wandering about the country riderless. The better-mounted portion remains, but disorganised and disheartened.

Col. Parke, with Neemuch force, is somewhere between that place and Oodeypore, in, as near as I can judge, the direct line of the enemy's flight, and will, I trust, be enabled to give a good account of what may yet hold together.

24. The long pursuit of the enemy by the detached force under Col. Holmes and since his rejoining, its continuation by me personally, has sorely distressed and broken down the horses and baggage animals of the enemy, and has not been without severe effect on my own cattle, which obliged me to halt for a day after the action (yesterday). The pursuit, however, of what remains as a body, will be renewed in concert with Brigdr. Parke, as soon as I ascertain the exact direction the rebels have taken.

H. G. ROBERTS, Maj. gen.

Camp Moe, August 16, 1858. Comdg. R. F. F.

Resolution by the hon. Board, dated the 9th Sept., 1858.

Resolved.—The rt. hon. the Gov. in Council fully participates in the feelings of gratification with which H. E. the C. in C. has perused the account of the brilliant success obtained by the force under Maj. gen. Roberts, in the general action of the 14th August.

The rt. hon. the Gov. in Council considers that Maj. gen. Roberts has rendered a great and important service to the State, by the skill and gallantry with which he conducted the operations against the rebels, and succeeded in bringing them to action, after a most harassing pursuit under circumstances of the greatest difficulty. It will afford sincere pleasure to his lordship in council to bring the valuable services of Gen. Roberts, and of the officers mentioned in his despatch, to the favourable notice of the rt. hon. the Gov. Gen. of India in Council.

H. L. ANDERSON, Sec. to Govt.

Colonel Holmes's Doings.

From Maj. gen. Roberts, comdg. Rajpootana F. F., to the Qr. Mr. Genl. of the army.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, for the information of H. E. the C. in C., a report by Lieut. Col.

Holmes, 12th N.I., whom I sent, on the 8th ult., from the further side of Tonk, to pursue the rebels.

2. I trust that the perseverance which Col. Holmes displayed, and the patient endurance by the troops—forced marches for 240 miles, partly during heat so intense that I lost twenty-two Europeans in three days by sunstroke alone, when marching in the early morning, and partly during rains, said to be heavier than any which have been known in Rajpootana—will meet with the approval of H. E. the C. in C.

3. I beg to bring to notice that these men had already gone thirty-five miles with me, when we marched to save Jeypore, and that on rejoining, after one day's halt, they accompanied me during the three forced marches which enabled me, on the 4th day (August 14th), to close with the rebels on the Bunnas.

H. G. ROBERTS, Maj.-Genl.

Comdg. R. F. Force.

Camp, Koorj, 17th August, 1858.

From Lieut. Col. Holmes, comdg. Light Field Force, to the Asst. Adjt. Genl., Rajpootana F. F.

SIR,—I have the honour to report, for the information of the Maj. Gen. comdg. Rajpootana F. F., the operations of the Lt. Field Detach. which he did me the honour to place under my command in Div. Orders of the 8th ult. At nine P.M. of the 8th ult., the column marched on Seelah (distant about eighteen miles), which I reached about six A.M. on the 9th. On the march the sound of cannonading at Tonk was heard; and, on arrival, reports were brought of the rebel force being in possession of the town of Tonk.

The strength of the Lt. Field Detach. was:—2nd Tr. H. A., Capt. Petrie comdg.; H. M.'s 8th K. R. I. Hussars, Lieut. Col. Naylor comdg., 8 officers, 139 sabres; 1st By. Lancers, Capt. Dennis comdg., 3 Eur. officers, 5 Nat. officers, 115 sabres; H. M.'s 72nd Highlanders, Maj. Roche comdg., 10 officers, 13 serjts., 5 drummers, 199 r. and f.; 12th Regt. N.I., Lieut. Col. Holmes comdg., 8 Eur. officers, 14 Nat. officers, 31 havildars, 11 drummers, 422 r. and f.; Belooch Horse, Lieut. Macauley comdg., and 300 sabres.

Under instructions from hd. qrs. I moved, on the morning of the 10th, to the ford of the Bunnas river, at Kakray. Here I received information that the rebels, having knowledge of the approach of the British force, abandoned Tonk, and fled in the direction of Bunneetah, carrying off four guns and four tumbrils, besides spare ammunition belonging to the Nawab of Tonk.

On the 12th I marched to Ghans (distant twelve miles). Reports of the rebels' movements were conflicting. Some said they were at Bunneetah, others at Allyghur Rampoor, and others again that their force, said to amount to 20,000 men, were divided between the two places above named.

On the 13th I marched to Soontallah, where, hearing that the enemy were still on my left flank, I halted. In the evening I received intimation that the whole rebel force was at Koostulah and Mahdapore, trying to obtain possession of the latter place.

At midnight I continued my march for Koostulah (distant about eighteen miles). At a village about four miles from Koostulah I heard that the rebels were encamped at Koostulah. Giving time for the ammunition to close up, and directing the baggage to remain at the village (Poochalla), I moved forward with the hope of bringing the enemy to action.

On our cav. skirmishers approaching Koostulah, parties of horse and foot of the enemy were seen in flight through the ravines up to the hills. In that direction the Belooch horse pursued, but were not successful in killing more than four men, one said to be a jemadar of the Kotah Contingt., as also three men of that corps. Several prisoners were made that day, but they were followers of the rebels and not worth detaining, and they were, after examination, dismissed.

A large body of the enemy, it would appear, had gone off to Ghodee and Pachowlaas, the first thing in the morning or the night before; and as the force under my command had made a long march, our baggage and commissariat behind, and bodies of the enemy on the hills to the left of our route, and a column of them said to be on our left rear, I ordered a halt, sending the Belooch horse to reconnoitre; they came upon one abandoned tumbril.

A large part of my baggage did not come up till late in the evening, and some not until the next morning, just as I was about to resume my march.

During the night numerous camp fires could be seen along the ridge of the hills to our left front and left rear, and at ten o'clock P.M. I received information from a Christian officer (whose name I forget) commanding the Nagur batt. in Mehdapore, that his batt. had gone over to the enemy, and intended, in concert with the rebels on the hills, to attack my camp during the night; this obliged me to wait till daybreak before I could attempt any further advance.

On the morning of the 14th I marched to Pachowlaas, starting at seven o'clock, and was obliged to halt there, the Europeans being much exhausted with the heat.

The march to Koostulah forced many of the rebels up the hills, and these I believe were never able to rejoin their main body.

Before me in flight remained the rebel leaders, Tania Topee, Rao Sahib, the Nawab of Bindra, Raheem Ali, and others, two regts. of sepoys (Scindiah's), some hundred of Ben. mutineers, 5th and 7th regts. of irr. cav., and some 3,000 or 4,000 other horsemen, in all 10,000 or 12,000 men; no accounts that I could obtain made them less.

On the morning of the 15th ult. I marched to Goollee, six miles, and in the evening to Augora, six more. The country becoming very difficult from jungle, ravines, and nullahs, I was obliged to move during daylight.

On the 16th I halted in consequence of equiring supplies of flour for the troops, and extra carriage, and grain, and grass for the horses; all supplies on the line of march having been eaten up by the enemy.

On the 17th I moved to Pontara, thirteen miles distant, through a strong pass, and entered a valley formed by hills on our right and the Mey river on our left; all this valley to Kutkur is full of ravines and jungle, and would be unsafe for cav. and art. to traverse without the protection of inf.

Information was brought that the enemy was halted on the Mey river in front of Kutkur, unable to pass the river.

At daylight on the 18th I moved on Kutkur (distant about fifteen miles); on arrival I heard that the rebels had mostly passed the ford the day before, and the rear-guard at daylight, but I am disposed to think that all had passed the day before. On this march one more tumbril was found abandoned, and was made over to the Tonk horsemen accompanying me, and some gun ammunition was strewn along the road.

The ford of the river was deep, and it took all that day and a greater part of the night to pass the troops and baggage over.

On the 19th, hearing that the rebels were entrenching at Matonda, determined to make a stand at half-past two P.M. I moved on Nowagaum (distant six miles); on arrival, being informed that they had moved to Boondee, I halted for the night, and marched at early dawn to Boondee, on the 20th ult.

At Boondee on the 20th I obtained information that the rebels had marched the day before to Neem-Keekera, and that they were moving through the Keena Pass, and intended marching upon Johaypoor.

The road through the Keena Pass was described as difficult in the extreme, and supplies not procurable. I therefore decided on leaving the direct line of pursuit, and by marching through the Boondee Pass to Jahapoor; if I did not meet the enemy there to move on in pursuit, in the direction of Mundelgurh, and intercept them between the river Bunnas and the hill country, which they were traversing.

On the 21st I marched to Nowagaum, and encamped on the banks of the Mey. This river, which on my arrival was ankle deep, rose most rapidly, and within an hour after was totally impassable, and it was not until the morning of the 25th that I was enabled to cross the column over to the village of Manglee.

On the morning of the 26th I commenced my march for Etonda. The advance guard of cav. and detach. 72nd Highlanders crossed a nullah a short way in my front, and the art. was about to follow, when the water rose so rapidly that no further progress could be made, and it was with difficulty that I could recross that portion of the force which had already passed over. After doing so, the river to my rear and the nullah to my front rose to so great a height that I was obliged to halt till the 30th inst.

During the halt it was with the utmost difficulty that I could obtain supplies, and it was only by the construction of rafts, and by the employment of some men of the 12th regt. nat. inf. (expert swimmers), that I was enabled to procure supplies for the subsistence of the troops and horses of the art. and cav. During this protracted delay I was receiving intelligence of the rebels being at Keera, Jellodra, Maunpoora, Hora, and Mundelgurh.

On the 31st, at ten A.M., the nullah becoming fordable I crossed the force over, encamped the cav. and inf. just across the nullah.

On the 1st August, at three P.M., I marched to Sarspoora, distant four miles, the road exceedingly deep in mud.

On the 2nd August, at half-past two, I marched to Tookra, distant five miles, the road most difficult for art., and it was with the greatest exertions that the troop horse art. reached the encamping ground, between seven and eight o'clock, and part of the baggage, sick-carts, &c., did not arrive till the next morning.

On the 3rd August I was obliged to halt, as the road ahead, which I had directed to be examined, was pronounced impracticable.

On the 4th of August, having discovered another route, I marched to Johaypoor, where I received information of the rebels being at Mundelgurh.

It was my intention to have resumed my march on the 5th, but I was prevented, in consequence of the want of carriage with the force, great numbers of camels having died on the march from Indagurh to Boondee, and during the eleven days' detention at Naugum and Manglee, as also on the march to Johaypoor.

On the morning of the 6th I marched to Kujoorn, where information was brought that the rebels were crossing the Bunnas river at the Turbanee ford, and intended to march to Bhweelwara.

On the morning of the 7th I marched to Kurhola. The Bunnas river was four or five miles in front, and said to be impracticable, excepting where the rebels had crossed, and it was not till after many hours' search, and till too late to make any further movement, that the Depty. Asst. Qr. Mr. Genl., Capt. Heathcote, was able to discover one.

At four A.M., on the morning of the 8th, I moved on the ford, which was broad, and upwards of three feet deep, and the passage of troops and baggage was not effected till nearly five o'clock.

About two o'clock P.M. I received information from the Asst. Qr. Mr. Genl. that the General's camp was at Sanganeer, and that the rebels were encamped at Bheelwara. I immediately made arrangements to march on Bheelwara as soon as the men had dined.

The troops had fallen in for the march at half-past six P.M.; but not being furnished with proper guides, the march was not commenced till half-past nine o'clock. The troops marched all night, and between two and three o'clock P.M. on the 9th inst. reached Bheelwara, having marched about thirty-five miles, when I had the gratification of hearing of the successful action that had been fought the evening before.

From the date of my leaving hd.-qrs. camp it had been my earnest endeavour to pursue as rapidly as possible, but the difficulties of the road were great, and the heat of the weather in the first instance told upon the Europeans, and afterwards the heavy rains impeded the progress of the art. and baggage, and for eleven days the force was obliged to halt at the villages of Naugum and Manglee, in consequence of the flooded state of the Mey river and the swollen stream in front of Manglee; yet in spite of these difficulties, added to the loss of a large number of our baggage camels, the troops had marched upwards of 240 miles from the date of leaving till joining the hd.-qrs. camp; and though I was unable to overtake the rebels, yet they were so constantly kept on the move that they were prevented from plundering many villages and towns, which, but for the fear of being overtaken, they would have done.

The conduct of the troops was admirable; they met every difficulty and privation with the utmost cheerfulness; and from the comdg. officers of the different detachments of the force I have received the most cordial support.

A native gentleman, Moulvee Mahomed Mohedeen, vakeel of Jeypore, who accompanied me through the pursuit, rendered me so much good service (in procuring information, carriage, supplies, &c.) that I beg strongly to recommend him to the Maj. Gen.'s consideration.

TRANSMIGRATION.—Le Compte tells us of one whom the Bonzes had prevail'd on to believe that his Soul should go into one of the (Chinese) Emperor's Post Horses, and that they had advis'd him to Eat little, and endure it patiently, and God might be induc'd the next remove to let him possess some Person of Quality; but the Man was under such horror at the Apprehension of being a Post Horse, that his being a Man of Figure afterwards gave him but little Satisfaction. He could not sleep Day or Night, but hearing that Christians did not undergo those changes, but were Men as well in the other World as here, he sent for the Father to Baptize him, who assures us he dy'd a very good Christian.—Salmon's Modern History (1725).

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, Jan. 28, 1859.

A GRATUITOUS INSULT.

It is with feelings of vexation and regret that we transcribe a Government Order, based on instructions from the Court of Directors, which can be regarded in no other light than as a gross insult to the Indian Services. We give the exact words of the precious document, which was twice inserted in the Calcutta Gazette because the word "horse" was misprinted "house," and Government particularly wish it to be understood that their public servants must not covet a native's ox or ass, or anything that is his.

Fort William, 3rd December, 1858.—In the year 1855, a public officer serving under the Government of Bengal, with the cognisance of his immediate official superior, sold a horse to a native gentleman living within his jurisdiction for 900 rupees. There was not the remotest reason to suppose that the sale was in any respect otherwise than a fair transaction, but the matter having in due course been reported to the hon. Court of Directors, the Court were pleased, in a despatch dated the 4th March last, to desire that sales of this description between public servants in India and natives within their jurisdiction or beyond, should be strictly prohibited. The President in Council is assured that pecuniary transactions of an objectionable nature between public servants and natives of India seldom, if ever, now occur, and has the fullest reliance on the honour of the Queen's servants in all departments; but transactions of the nature alluded to, though in themselves entirely fair, and perfectly free on both sides from all unworthy motives, are liable to misconstruction, and when misconstrued are no less mischievous in their effect than corrupt dealings. In conformity, therefore, with the instructions of the hon. Court, all such sales are prohibited. Should a public officer be doubtful whether a transaction to which he desires to become a party, comes within this prohibition, he will consult his superior officer, and be guided by the instructions he may receive. A controlling officer consulted on such an occasion will dispose of the case himself, or refer it for the orders of Government, as he may consider proper.

By Order of the hon. the President in Council,
CECIL BEADON,
Offg. Sec. to the Govt. of India.

There was once a time when such an order might not have been out of place, but in the year 1858 it was an offensive and inexcusable anachronism. The tone of public morality among European officers in India is in no degree inferior to that which prevails at home. Besides, as the Friend of India pertinently and pleasantly remarks—

If the sale of a house is so dangerous to the pecuniary purity of the Civil Service, why should the purchase be safe? A man may pay too little as well as receive too much. Or why confine the order to houses? A civilian may buy toys for his child and take them at half value, or forage for his horse, and not pay for it. Why not declare toy-buying an offence, and decree that civilians' horses are not to eat? Even that would scarcely be sufficient. A magistrate, if he likes, may perpetrate small swindles in the matter of his food, give decrees to butchers, on condition of mutton at twopence-halfpenny, or harass bakers because they give only twelve loaves for the rupee. To be useful, the rule should be carried out to its logical result, the magistrate shut up in a glass case, and fed with a spoon, by a purveyor with a certificate of British parentage in his pocket.

Where is the line to be drawn? Or is it henceforth to be understood that European officers, whether civil or military, are to confine the sale of their goods and chattels to their own narrow circle? What is a public servant to do whose lot sends him to some remote out-of-the-way station? In default of European purchasers, it is clear that he will have no alternative but to make a bonfire of his effects whenever he ceases to have occasion for them. One might really have been pardoned for supposing that in March, 1858, the Directors might have employed their time more beneficially than in inditing an insult to a body of gentlemen of unblemished reputation. The terrible convulsion in the mighty empire under their sway, combined with their own death struggles, might well have sufficed to absorb their attention. Certainly, few persons allowed them credit for such calmness and self-possession as to be able to write about the disposal of a horse three years previously, there being nothing to mark that not very uncommon event, save the circumstance that the seller was a public servant and the purchaser a native. After viewing that mysterious occurrence in every possible light for three whole years, the Court at length arrived at the conclusion that it was "tolerable, and not to be endured." We can only hope that the Secretary of State for India requires somewhat less time to perceive the true bearing of an Order that is as useless as it is insulting and uncalled for.

INDIAN PRISONS.

ONE of the earliest and most important subjects that should engage the attention of the Indian Government on the restoration of order, must be the question of prison discipline. Heretofore, from two to three thousand criminals of very various degrees and shades of guilt have been herded together promiscuously as if with the express intention of reducing all to the lowest depth of degradation. Prisoners, whose sole offence may have consisted in taking a too active part in an affray between two villages, were classed with ruffians of the darkest dye, and the receiver of stolen goods was associated with Thugs and Dacoits, highway robbers and murderers. The consequence might have been, and probably was, foreseen. The most depraved characters speedily gained an ascendancy over their less guilty companions, and prepared them for the committal of any enormity on the expiration of their sentence. Some of the most frightful outrages and scenes of plunder connected with the mutinies were due to escaped convicts. In every station where there was a jail, the first act of the sepoys after rising upon their officers, was to set free the prisoners, knowing that they would thus obtain the co-operation of a large force of desperate and reckless villains. At Agra, for instance, the destruction of the Civil lines was effected chiefly by the scoundrels whom Dr. Walker had been so industriously but vainly attempting to humanise through the medium of the multiplication table and manuals of astronomy. It may be doubted, indeed, whether that persevering and philanthropic gentleman adopted the most practical means to soften the rough nature of his patients. It may be questionable how far a parrot-like response to an inquiry as to the weight of the planet Neptune, or the diameter of Ceres, may tend to fit a Hindoo cattle-stealer for a more honourable position in the moral and social scale; and some persons may even smile incredulously at the idea of a forger or professional thief being won to repentance by learning to chaunt the multiplication table of fractions up to  $6\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$ . But although these accomplishments may have failed to convert the heathen to Christianity, or to make good citizens of the lawless and violent, they were so far of service that they occupied the attention of the prisoners and prevented them from holding much mutual intercourse. The evil, however, arising from the gathering together of such an army of criminals required a remedy of a more searching and radical nature. On the 1st of January, 1852—the latest date to which we can at this moment refer—there were 2,786 prisoners confined in the Central Prison at Agra, being convicted of the following crimes:—Murder by Thugs, 86; other cases, 414. Wounding with intent to murder, 84; culpable homicide, 165; Dacoity with murder, 33; with wounding or personal injury, 36; unattended with aggravating circumstances, 284. River dacoity, 2; highway robbery with murder, 23; with personal injury, 56; without aggravating circumstances, 169. Burglary with murder, 1; with personal injury, 12; without aggravating circumstances, 244. Theft with murder, 60; of children for their ornaments, 23; with personal injury, 65; by administering poison or stupefying drugs, 39; other cases, 293. Cattle-stealing with personal injury, 1; without aggravating circumstances, 115. Child stealing for the purpose of selling into slavery, 8; receiving stolen goods, 67; importation of slaves, 3; affray with homicide, 143; with violent breach of the peace, 10; assault with personal injury, 43; arson, 1; forgery, or uttering forged documents, 22; counterfeiting coin, or uttering base coin, 19; perjury, 23; rape, 16. Crimes and offences not specified under the foregoing heads, 210; attempt to commit any of the above, 21. It must be admitted that there is here a goodly variety of crime, and, in justice to Dr. Walker, it should be stated that he exerted himself to the utmost to classify the prisoners, and to teach them industrious arts in addition to the elements of astronomy and the calculation of fractions in a musical key. But the numbers were too great to allow of any proper subdivision, nor could any one man, however marked his individuality, suffice to impress his views, we do not say on this host of fallen creatures, but even on their legionary superintendents. If the system of centralisation is to be introduced into the management of criminals, it is evident that to be efficacious it must be conducted on a large and costly scale. Prisons must be built as large as small towns, and supervised by a regular staff of intelligent and judicious officers. In any other way it will prove a miserable failure, and produce no other result than to bring together a vast number of persons who have violated the laws in different degrees, in order finally to let them loose upon society ten times worse than before their supposed reformation.

WHO DID IT?

SOME twenty years hence, when the principal actors in these busy scenes are dead and forgotten, it will begin to be known who really were worthy of praise, and who of blame, for the part they have sustained in the eventful and tragic drama of the Indian mutinies. At present, no sooner do we hear of some heroic, or otherwise commendable, action having been performed, than it is whispered that the laurel wreath has been placed on the brows of the wrong man who is never in any hurry to transfer it to the rightful owner. Ego feci, tulit alter honores. On the other hand, much undeserved censure has been cast upon officers who were either restrained by positive orders from acting in any other manner, or prevented from doing so by causes quite beyond their control. It would be invidious to quote instances, though not a few will readily recur to the recollection of those who have narrowly watched the progress of events in India during the last two years, to say nothing of former times. Nor could it have any other result than to revive unpleasant discussions which may more profitably be allowed to pass into oblivion. It is doubtful, therefore, if we should ever have alluded to the subject at all, had not Major General Sir Sydney Cotton especially invited public attention to his own case. That gallant and distinguished officer complains that "the newspapers at home and abroad—by which we presume he means India—have endeavoured to persuade the public that (he) had not much share, if any, in the responsibility attached to the measure of disarming a large body of native troops in the Peshawur Cantonment in May, 1857." He has therefore sent in to Government the following Memorandum of the transaction as it really happened, which is further authenticated by the signatures of Colonels H. B. Edwardes and T. J. Galloway.

MEMORANDUM.

Peshawur, January 13, 1858.

During the night, between the 21st and 22nd May 1857, Colonel Edwardes, the commissioner of the Peshawur and adjacent districts, and Colonel Nicholson, then deputy commissioner, who had first received the intelligence of the mutiny of the 55th N.I. at Nowshera (28 miles from Peshawur), and also of the complicity of the 10th Irreg. cav., who, at the same station, had refused to act against the mutineers, came to Brigadier Cotton, and proposed an immediate "disarming" of a large body of Hindoostanee troops, with a view to enabling our European force to quit the cantonment and go forth into the district to act against the mutineers.

Unmistakeable signs of disaffection amongst these troops had been evinced for some days previously, and Brigadier Cotton had found it necessary to tell off into two wings the Peshawur force, placing the commanding officers of two European regiments, with six guns attached to each, ready for immediate action.

The mutiny of the 55th N.I., the disaffection of the 10th cav., and the intelligence received of the revolt of Hindoostanee troops in various parts of the country rendered it a matter of uncertainty that the whole native army of Bengal was more or less imbued with the same spirit of rebellion against the British Government. The "disarming" of a large body of these troops in the Peshawur district was, therefore, at that moment, unquestionably, a necessary precaution, ere a single European soldier could safely be permitted to leave the cantonment.

At the time of the outbreak of the 55th N.I. (probably arranged by the sepoys of that corps to create a diversion in favour of a general revolt, which certainly had been contemplated) there were in the Peshawur district only 1,500 European infantry with 500 European artillerymen, whilst the Hindoostanee troops in the district amounted to no less than 10,000 men.

On the measure of "disarming" being proposed to Brigadier Cotton by the civil authorities (Cols. Edwardes and Nicholson), the Brigadier, as commander of the whole forces on the Peshawur frontier, seeing the imperative necessity for it, determined to accede at once to their proposal; and certain troops, amounting to 3,000 or 4,000 men, were named to be "disarmed."

The officers in command of the native corps in cantonment were at once summoned to Brigadier Cotton's quarters (Cols. Edwardes and Nicholson being present), and informed of the step about to be taken, when nearly the whole of them, still placing implicit confidence in the loyalty of their men, strenuously opposed the measure as unnecessary. To the arguments, and indeed remonstrances, of these officers, men generally of long standing and experience, the Brigadier paid every attention; in fact, he was desirous that their views and feelings regarding the sepoys should be heard; and to give an instance of the nature of the protests made on the occasion by the commandants, as indicative of the difficulty attending the undertaking, one of the commanding officers expressed his opinion that his regiment, one of the most efficient in the brigade, would never submit to the disgrace of being disarmed, and would be certain to attack the guns.

The discussion continued some time, when Col. Edwardes, addressing one of the regimental commanders, put an end to it by saying, "The matter rests now entirely with Brigadier Cotton," or words to the same effect. The Brigadier immediately replied, "Then the troops, as originally determined on, will be disarmed." Not another word was said as to the advisability, or otherwise, of the measure.

The regimental commanders received the necessary orders for the disarming, and proceeded at once to prepare for it at the time appointed. Colonels Edwardes and Nicholson, when that time arrived, accompanied Brigadier Cotton to the lines of H.M.'s 87th regt., in which artillery had been previously placed, and there, prepared with the European infantry and guns, the Commissioner and Brigadier Cotton observed, at a short distance from them, one of the native corps of the right wing of the brigade deprived of their firelocks by its commanding officer. The commanders had been directed to take the arms from their men, troops being at hand to enforce the measure, if necessary. The Commissioners and Brigadier then proceeded to another corps. Both corps delivered up their arms without a murmur.

Whilst this was going on, and exactly at the same moment, two other native corps of the left wing of the brigade were deprived of their arms in a similar manner by Colonel Galloway, H.M.'s 70th regt., the officer next in seniority to the Brigadier.

The "disarming" was accomplished without bloodshed, and a European force was at once told off to take the field against the insurgents.

The disarming of so large a force on the Peshawur frontier was certainly at that moment a desperate measure, not so much on account of the danger to be apprehended in seizing the arms of sepoys, whose minds were more or less unsettled by passing events, but as to the consequences which might be expected when the Government had been deprived of so large a portion of its frontier defence—troops placed at Peshawur to overawe and keep in subjection the ever-restless people of the adjacent mountains and districts, and to guard the British territory against invasion by its ancient enemies, of whose best province England had taken possession.

Who could tell what a moment might produce? Might not the inhabitants of the neighbouring districts have taken advantage of the internal weakness and disunion reigning in the British garrison, have come down upon the handful of Europeans, isolated (if the expression may be used) to the westward of the river Indus, and in conjunction with disaffected native soldiery have reclaimed the Peshawur territory, and swept away from the face of the earth every European inhabitant? It pleased Almighty God to save the British Government at this all-important and critical moment, for no sooner were the arms taken from the sepoys than the inhabitants of the country, flocking in at the call of the civil authorities, took service, which they had previously declined to do, and thus the first fruits of the measure of disarming were providentially escaped.

The heavy responsibility of these measures rested on Colonel Edwardes and Brigadier Cotton. The former had proposed to the latter the measure of "disarming," whilst the latter, as chief commander on the frontier, had consented to it, being responsible to Government for the management and disposal of troops placed, at that juncture, in the most difficult and apparently under the most perilous circumstances of any in British India.

The mutiny of the 55th N.I. was put down at the Fort of Murdan by Colonel Chute, commanding an expeditionary force, ably assisted by Colonel Nicholson. Numbers of the sepoys of that corps, however, escaped into the Swat country, who were subsequently disposed of through the able exertions of Major Beecher, the Commissioner of Hazarah.

The scenes of the future services of the ever-to-be lamented and noble Nicholson were elsewhere; not a punishment for mutiny or desertion was inflicted in Peshawur until that officer had left it, alas! never to return.

The numerous and continued executions in support of discipline were carried out in the presence of the troops, loyal or disloyal; 7,000 or 8,000 men assembled on parade in front of the cantonment, under the personal superintendence of Brigadier Cotton, whilst the highly valued and talented commissioner, Col. Edwardes, guarded and protected with his levies the rear of cantonment, ready to act and co-operate should the disloyal troops, as might be expected, break away from the enforced restraint with which they were compelled to witness the execution of their comrades.

It is unnecessary, whilst describing the "disarming" of the Peshawur troops and its immediate consequences, to offer any remarks on the subsequent events which, in the Peshawur district, were numerous, varied, and continued, during the progress of the general revolt of the army; but, certain it is, those events have invariably and throughout tended to prove the wisdom of the measure of timely "disarming," which was resorted to by the civil and military authorities under the guidance of Divine Providence.

SYDNEY COTTON, Major General, Commanding Peshawur Division.

The credit of this critical operation appears to have been given to General Nicholson, who can well spare the leaf from his own chaplet of glory. Though the course he has pursued is unusual, General Cotton will be readily excused for having taken such decisive steps to vindicate his own reputation. His example, however, is not likely to be very generally followed, so that the world must be content to jog on with the ordinary disproportion of error to truth. Lord Canning was evidently of opinion that Sir Sydney had been hardly dealt with, for he at once ordered the General's statement to be placed upon official record, and further addressed him in these frank and kindly terms:—

Camp, Allahabad, February 26, 1858.

MY DEAR SIR,—I will gladly further your object of setting in their true light the facts connected with the disarming of the native troops in the Peshawur cantonment in May last.

I can best do this by placing upon official record the statement which you have sent me in a private form.

It will thus take its place with other authentic documents in the hands of the Government at home, and will doubtless come before the public.

I had not seen the statement in the Lahore Chronicle, referred to by Colonel Galloway, nor was I aware that there had been so general a misapprehension in regard to events at Peshawur, as you describe. But be this as it may, I am happy to do my best to correct it.

So far as the Government of India is concerned, and the opinions expressed by it upon the transactions in question, be assured that full justice is done to your promptitude and sound decision, and to those high soldierly qualities which have led me to look upon your presence in command as a mainstay of safety.—Believe me, &c.

CANNING.

RELIEF OF THE SUFFERERS BY THE DISTURBANCES IN INDIA.

A report of the Calcutta sub-committee of the Fund for the Relief of Sufferers by the Disturbances in India, issued on the 3rd of November last, with a somewhat voluminous appendix, contains some information of interest with regard to the administration of the funds placed at their disposal. The committee commence by submitting to the subscribers a balance-sheet of the receipts and expenditure, from the establishment of the fund in July, 1857, to the 31st Oct., 1858. The amounts are calculated in Company's rupees. The receipts include subscriptions in Calcutta, Rs. 1,96,027; Madras, Rs. 78,000; Ceylon, Rs. 24,000; London, Rs. 1,91,717; Liverpool, Rs. 86,161; Glasgow, Rs. 48,484; Manchester, Rs. 47,761; Mauritius, Rs. 36,000; Hong Kong, Rs. 15,147; Cape of Good Hope, Rs. 53,081; the King of Burmah, Rs. 10,000; Ayrshire, Rs. 9,896; Tipperary, Rs. 2,689; Sydney, Rs. 49,433; Belfast (Victoria), Rs. 1,600; and Batavia, Rs. 1,562. Under the item of payments we find Rs. 4,05,932 devoted to free grants, while there have been expended for monthly allowances Rs. 1,02,322; loans, Rs. 60,676; passage and diet money, Rs. 1,11,619; passages to England, Rs. 1,88,244; ladies' committee, Rs. 54,000; house expenses, Rs. 58,275; sundries, Rs. 19,735; advertising charges, Rs. 2,442; clothing account, Rs. 10,614; schooling account, Rs. 33,293; Bengal Patriotic Fund, Rs. 50,000; Lawrence Asylum, Rs. 10,000; Mofussil remittances, Rs. 3,40,035; and Bombay committee, Rs. 13,280; leaving a balance of Rs. 92,837.

The aggregate number of persons relieved by the fund up to the date of this report is not given, but it is incidentally stated that up to the 3rd of February assistance had been afforded to nearly 2,000 cases. One of the tabular statements accompanying the report shows the various classes of persons (including men, women, and children) to whom relief has been given. The total number included in this table is 777, of whom 6 were officers, 101 officers' wives and children, 70 in the railway and public works' departments, 91 in the unconvicted and patrol service, 116 indigo planters and agents, 29 clerks in public offices, 101 traders, 18 missionaries (Protestant and Roman Catholic), with 23 women and 54 children, 78 non-commissioned officers, &c., and 90 widows and orphans. The appendix also contains the correspondence which has taken place on the subject of the fund between officials in India and the late Lord Mayor of London (Mr. Alderman Finnis), the late Mayor of Liverpool, and other gentlemen who took an active part in promoting the subscription on behalf of the sufferers by the mutiny in this country. Portions of this correspondence have already been published, and the remainder, from the lapse of time since it took place, has ceased to possess any interest for the general reader.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE KING OF AVA'S SKELETON.—Mr. Flower, the anatomical articulator to the Royal College of Surgeons, has just executed an elaborate model of the human skeleton of the natural size in sycamore wood for the above enlightened potentate, who, being desirous of obtaining a knowledge of the human frame without losing caste by handling the original bones, requested the late East India Company to aid him in his difficulty. On the recommendation of Mr. Owen, of the British Museum, Mr. Flower was consulted, and at an expense of about £115, this artist produced a most faithful representation of the human skeleton in wood, and exhibited the same a few days since at the College of Surgeons, when it elicited the highest commendation from the Court of Examiners.

LORD CLYDE'S PARENTAGE.—The Inverness Courier says:—"The paragraph which appeared in the Glasgow papers, intimating the recent death of Lord Clyde's father, turns out to be incorrect. That gentleman died many years ago, and we are enabled to give the following particulars regarding the parentage of the noble veteran, on the authority of a personal friend of Lord Clyde. His lordship's father was Colonel John Campbell, who served with the late Duke of Kent, or on his staff, for a very long period. When quartered in Glasgow, Colonel Campbell made what is called a Scotch marriage with a good-looking young woman much his inferior in station, education, and position, and by her had a daughter and a son, both now living, the latter being Lord Clyde. The mother died while the children were very young, and the colonel was sent abroad with the Duke. On his departure the children were left with the mother, or with her relations, if she had died previously to that event, of which our informant is not quite sure, and to this may be attributed the story which has been going the round of the papers. The mother's name may have been M'Liver, and the children may have borne that name until Colonel Campbell returned from foreign service, when he took charge of them. They certainly were then called by the name of Campbell. Through the Duke's interest Colonel Campbell obtained a commission for his son, who embarked for the Peninsular, and two days after landing was at the battle of Vittoria. In one of the engagements under Sir Thomas Graham (the late Lord Lynedoch), the young officer distinguished himself so highly that Sir Thomas sent for him, and said that if he could be of service to him at any time he was not to hesitate in seeking his good offices. When Sir Thomas commanded the army before St. Sebastian an opportunity presented itself, and Sir Colin claimed the fulfilment of the promise; and when asked how he could be served, replied, 'By giving me the command of the forlorn hope.' This he obtained, and gained the breach, but was forced back, wounded, in consequence of the support not coming up quick enough."

APPOINTMENT—CEYLON.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Rev. E. Mooyart, B.A., to be chaplain of Galle in the Island of Ceylon.

SIR MATTHEW SAUSSE, late Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Bombay, has been promoted to the Chief Justiceship of that court. The vacant Puisne Judgeship has been conferred on Mr. Arnould, of the Middle Temple and the Home Circuit.

MR. JAMES RANALD MARTIN, F.R.S., has been appointed Examining Physician to the Secretary of State in Council.

APPOINTMENTS.—F. H. A. Forth, Esq., has been appointed a member of the Executive Council of the island of Hong Kong during the temporary absence of the Colonial Secretary.

NAVAL APPOINTMENT, EAST INDIES (Jan. 25).—Rear-Admiral James Hope, C.B., to succeed Rear-Admiral Sir M. Seymour as Commander in Chief in the East Indies.

A CORPS OF OFFICIALS is being assembled to be employed in Japan. Among the corps are several young men who go out expressly for the purpose of learning the Japanese language, and studying the manners and customs of the people, so as to act as interpreters, and be otherwise useful to British subjects settling in or trading with that country.

MR. PEARSON HILL, of the General Post-office, son of Mr. Rowland Hill, has been selected by the Postmaster-General, on the request of the Governor of the Mauritius, for the purpose of reorganising the postal arrangements of the colony, and has proceeded to the Mauritius.

WELLINGTON COLLEGE.—Sir James W. Hogg, Bart., has apprised Colonel the Hon. W. P. Talbot, honorary secretary to the Wellington College, that he has reserved two cadetships for the scholars of Wellington College, to be placed at the disposal of H.R.H. the Prince Consort and the Governors of the College, and that it is his (Sir J. W. Hogg's) intention to reserve at least one cadetship every year for the same purpose as long as he may have it in his power.

EUROPEAN HINDOOS.—A new set of Christians has sprung up on the Continent, called "Transmigrationists." They profess to believe in the Hindoo doctrine to a certain extent, and have printed some curious arguments to prove that such doctrines are not irreconcilable with Christianity.

THE INDUS and its PROVINCES;

their Political and Commercial Importance considered in connection with Improved Means of Communication. Illustrated by Statistical Tables and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.,

Chairman of the Scinde and Punjab Railways, and Indus Steam Flotilla; Author of "Indian Railways as connected with the Power and Stability of the British Empire in the East," &c., &c., &c.

"The Indus and its Provinces" is really as interesting to the general reader as it is essential to the merchant, the trader, the politician, and the historian."—Morning Chronicle, May 27, 1858.

"Not contented to repose on his laurels as the early advocate for the construction of Railways in India, Mr. Andrew has steadily persevered in developing his original idea, and now, after twelve years of incessant application, we find him concentrating his energies on the improvement of land and river communication in Scinde and the Punjab, though with ulterior views, extending far beyond the immediate benefit of those Provinces."—Allen's Indian Mail, June 12, 1858.

In 8vo. cloth, with Maps, price 10s. 6d.,

MEMOIR on the EUPHRATES VALLEY ROUTE to INDIA; with Official Correspondence and Maps.

By W. P. ANDREW, F.R.G.S.

"It is impossible to refer to the Surveys and Reports of General Chesney and his colleagues on the Euphrates, published twenty years ago, without astonishment, that even at that period the British Government and people failed to take immediate steps to avail themselves of its capabilities."—The Times.

"What a glorious thing it would have been," said a writer in the 'Lahore Chronicle' of August last, "had the Euphrates Valley Railway and the Scinde and Punjab Railway been accomplished facts at the time of the present insurrection."—Vide The Indus and its Provinces—p. 14.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

8vo. cloth, price 12s.,

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a

Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocqueler's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocqueler for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maundrell's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS,

A WEEKLY SUMMARY OF BRITISH AND FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

This Newspaper presents a comprehensive and perfect view of British and Foreign affairs, with special reference to those subjects in any way interesting to residents in India, or those at home having connections there. The Intelligence is brought down to the latest possible moment prior to the departure of the Mail. The various departments are so arranged, and the intelligence analysed, as to form a weekly register of permanent interest and value, which subscribers will be glad to preserve.

The weekly issue of "THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS" renders it as eligible a newspaper for Anglo-Indians resident at home as abroad.

Families should send it to their friends abroad. Parties proceeding to India or China should not fail to order a year's subscription.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygienic agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygienic system of medicine introduced by James Morison. The Hygienist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

Ringworm, scurvy, jaundice, scrofula, or King's evil, sore heads, and the most inveterate skin diseases to which the human race is subject, cannot be treated with a more safe and speedy remedy than Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which act so peculiarly on the constitution, and so effectually purify the blood, that the above-mentioned diseases are quickly eradicated from the system, and a lasting cure obtained. These remedies are equally efficacious in tumours, burns, scalds, and glandular swellings, ulcerous wounds, rheumatism, contracted and stiff joints. These Pills are as mild as they are efficacious. They are composed of vegetable extracts, unminged with baser matter. There is not a grain of any mineral in them. They cannot do harm.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 10th January has arrived, and the Calcutta Mail of the 9th has reached Alexandria. We regret to observe that Lord Clyde has met with a serious accident, by his charger falling while at full gallop. His lordship was dashing forward to rally the Horse Artillery, which was pursuing in a disorderly manner the flying enemy, when his horse came down and threw him heavily, his shoulder being dislocated, and his face a good deal injured. Two medical officers instantly attended, and promptly restored the wounded limb, but his lordship was too much shaken to mount his horse again, and was compelled to accompany the force in a doolie. This untoward event happened on the 26th December, at the close of a sharp engagement with the rebel army. The Begum, though desirous to surrender, had been prevented from doing so by her adherents, and thus the Commander-in-Chief had been constrained again to have recourse to the arbitration of the sword. The action took place at Burjidiyah, to the westward of Nanparah, and resulted in the total discomfiture of the insurgents, who left six guns upon the ground. On the following day the British troops invested three sides of a remarkably strong fortress, called Mujidiyah, and after a brief cannonade the garrison fled into the jungle. It was reported that Beni Madho was there in person, and had resolved on fighting to the last extremity. The term of grace offered to the rebels was then about to expire, and yet large masses remained under arms. It was supposed, however, that the amnesty would be still further extended, in the hope that the misguided men might still be induced to tender their submission.

Notwithstanding the almost unparalleled exertions of the different columns in Rajpootana, Prince Feroze Shah had succeeded in effecting a junction with Tantia Topee near Madhoorajpore, in the Jyepoor territory. The latter chieftain had contrived by a series of doublings to elude his numerous enemies, and to make his way from Durriabad to the place above named. He did not escape, however, serious chastisement on three several occasions. On the 24th, his followers were routed by Major Roche's column, but again rallied, only to be again routed by Colonel Benson on the 26th; and for the third time they were dispersed on New Year's Day. It is earnestly to be desired that the combined forces of the two fugitive leaders may be tempted to risk a final engagement, if they cannot be prevailed upon to accept the proffered pardon of their rebellion.

The town of Kirwee, in the Banda district, garrisoned by a handful of Madras troops, was attacked by Radha Govind on the 22nd Dec., but relieved on the third day by some native levies raised by Mr. Power, the civil magistrate. On the 29th the rebels were signally defeated by General Whitlock, with the loss of 300 men, among whom was their commander, Radha Govind himself.

A serious disturbance has taken place at Tinnevely, in the Madras Presidency, originating in an attempt made by the Brahmins to prevent the funeral procession of a native Christian from passing a pagoda. The military were called out, and ordered to fire upon the mob, when some thirty or forty men, women, and children were killed upon the spot.

The Governor General left Allahabad on the 3rd January on his return to Calcutta, Mr. Edmonstone acting as Lieutenant-Governor of the N.W. Provinces, and being succeeded by Mr. G. C. Barnes, as secretary to the Government in the foreign department.

We may perhaps be pardoned for directing the attention of our readers to the Prospectus of a new monthly review, under the comprehensive title of the "Universal Review," which appears in our advertisement columns.

CENTRAL INDIA.

Dec. 20.

Lieutenant Stack, Bombay cavalry, was attacked between Goonah and Seronge by Feroze Shah's cavalry, numbering 1,500; three Lancers killed, some camels' baggage taken.

Goonah, Dec. 23.

Troops under Captain Mayne surprised rebels under Feroze Shah near Jhajpore, in dense jungle; a few killed, rest dispersed; 100 horses, several camels, much clothing captured. No loss on our side.

Rebels under Tantia Topsee advanced on the 24th December to attack Pertabghur in three divisions, commanded by Tantia, the Rao, and Baheem Allee; were met and repulsed by Neemuch Field detachment; one of their leaders killed, name uncertain; two elephants captured; main body retreated towards Banswara.

Some rebels from Indore reported near Soosner on 28th December, had come from Dug, going to Machilpoor. Colonel Benson in pursuit,—intelligence since received of elephants and property captured by his force. Since then, Tantia (from Sir Robert Napier's Report of the 30th) passed Goonah on 28th December. Troops under General Napier warned and alert.

Latest intelligence from Indore, 2nd January, states that Col. Benson's column came up with rebels on the Machilpoor boundary, and defeated them with considerable loss.

Brigadier Smith's force at Chuppra on 1st of January.

BENGAL.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

From G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 13th Dec. 5.40 P.M.

The Rampore Rajah reports that the rebels were four coss from Rampore, and were said to be marching to Jaloun. Major Synge was to have arrived on the 11th. Another report received from Brigadier Showers, who was at Etawah on the 11th, states that the rebels who had got over the Jumna into Chanugur, crossed the Chumbul at Palee to Repaklee on the morning of the 11th, and that Brigadier Herbert, who was at Workah on the 10th, proposed to cross in pursuit. Brigadier McCausland reports from Futteghur that Etawah, which was besieged by the rebels, was all right up to noon of the 10th; Brigadier Showers was proceeding thither; also Renny's Sikhs, a regiment of Julechees and Alexander's Horse.

From G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 14th Dec.

We hear that the rebels under Feroze Shah moved on the 10th to Taingori, on the Scinde river, apparently making toward Bundelcund. Capt. Macmahon's detachment was near Amain, twelve miles from Taingori. General Napier left Gwalior on the 12th for Huttia, to intercept them, but halted at Aintee on hearing that they were at Taingori. Another report states that the rebel force, keeping on the left bank of the Phooj, is making for Secuntiah, on the Scinde river, in the Dettiah state.

From G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 15th Dec., seven P.M.

The rebels with Feroze Shah are reported to have started for Koonch. They are watched by Captain Macmahon with his party. General Napier was to leave Gwalior for Dutia on the 12th, to intercept them. Brigadier Showers has left Etawah to return through the Bab Pinabat pergunnahs, watching the Chumbul, should the rebels double back. Mr. Hume is with Brigadier Herbert. In the fight of the 8th instant a leader was killed, supposed to be Moulvie Fuzzel Huq, of Delhi.

From G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 16th Dec.

The rebel force under Feroze Shah, since they crossed the Jumna at Kungoorie on the 10th, have continued their march by the left bank of the Phooj River; they passed through Lohar on the 11th, making for Secunda. The Chiefs of the district through which they have passed have remained loyal, and show no disposition to join their cause. Brigadier McDuff has arrived with his force at Amaone, and was to have left it yesterday morning for Secunda.

ALLAHABAD, 26th Dec.—Reports of the 16th and 17th instant from Capt. Thomas, the acting political agent in Maywar, informs us that the rebels under Tantia Topsee had abandoned their intention of moving on Odeypore, and were by the last account at Bheendur. A detachment having moved out from Neemuch, the rebels went in the direction of Kanoor, and had reached within four miles of it on the evening of the 16th; while, on the other hand, the Neemuch detachment had arrived at Khyrood, fifteen miles from Kanoor, on the 17th, and contemplated attempting a surprise on the rebels' camp that night. The Chief of Kanoor had received a demand for supplies from Tantia Topsee. A detachment, consisting of 500 of Queen's 89th, 200 of 31st Bombay N.L., two guns and 100 Guzerat Horse, was at Kheirwarah on the 16th, and the occupation, of the Chotee Sodlee Pass was contemplated with the view of heading back the rebels in the event of their retreat in that direction after the intended attack on their position at Kanoor.

Rebels under Radha Gobind surrounded Kirwee three or four days ago. They have since received reinforcements, but have made no attack.

Further reports have been received of the fugitives from Ranoud. On the 20th inst., they appear to have encountered a detachment of the 1st Bombay Lancers, under command of Lieut. Stack, between Goona and Seronge, in which affair three of the Lancers were killed, and some camels carried off.

On the 23rd the same party of rebels was surprised at Jutpore in a dense jungle, by Capt. Kece, with a force sent out from Gerna; only a few were killed, and no loss on our side.

Captain Keatinge captured one hundred horses, several camels, and much clothing.

From G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 27th Dec.

Intelligence has been received from Kirwee, dated the 26th December. Mr. Power rode into Kirwee with a few sowars on that day; the rebels were encamped at Rampore, three miles south-east of Kirwee, close under the hills. They had attacked Nyagong on the 21st December, and had taken two guns from the Rane. The Kirwee Garrison were in good spirits, though their exertions had been great and fatigued. The rebel force consisted of 150 cavalry, 600 mutineer sepoys, and from 3,000 to 4,000 matchlockmen. The Political Agent of Meywar reports, on the 18th of December, that the rebels under Tantia Topsee were on that date between Bansee, Durreawand, and Burra Sodrees. The chief of the latter place had refused them supplies. The Pass of Durreawand is reported to have been closed. A detachment of our troops was marching along the Neemuch road, so as to keep abreast of the rebels, and maintained the line of observation between Neemuch and Oodeypore. The Rajah of Pertabghur has moved out in person to occupy the passes leading into his territory.

SEPOYS IN COUNCIL.

The Government of Bengal has published an account of an interview between Mr. Money, Collector-Magistrate of Behar, and certain sepoys. The narrative, though too lengthy, is in many respects curious, particularly in the evidence it affords of the strength of the aristocratic feeling. Mr. Money, it appears, had accompanied Col. Walters's force in its pursuit beyond Jugdespore. The rebels, headed by Hurkishen Singh, were overtaken at a place called Muhalaon, and expressed a desire to treat. Mr. Money agreed to meet them, and, finding the deputation hesitate, rode up, accompanied only by Sahadut Khan, Ressaldar of Lieut. Beadon's regiment. After some demur and show of distrust, four of the leaders came up, and spoke manfully enough. They comprehended the amnesty, but wanted, with the habitual caution of an Asiatic, some guarantee for the fulfilment of the promise. They were told the word of the Government was sufficient guarantee. Then a sepoy stepped forward, and, with an odd adaptation of his language to the supposed capacity of his listener, said, "I am a padre; I rebelled for my religion. What do I get by the amnesty?" Mr. Money replied, "you get pardon for your rebellion, if you think that is not enough you need only remain where you are, and at the end of the quarter of an hour after my return to the tree we shall attack you, and then what will be, will be." Three or four of them waved their swords, and said, "Return; we cannot accept your conditions." The interview was broken off, but at another held an hour after Mr. Money succeeded in inducing the leaders to bring up a few of their followers. This had all along been his object, as he well knew the amnesty could not be tempting to the chiefs. For the same reason it was distasteful to the leaders, who were anxious to convince their people that the amnesty contained a fraud. They were, however, apparently unwilling to allow this object to appear, and the men came. And then the real hitch in the negotiations at once came out. "What kind of an amnesty is that," exclaimed a relative of Hurkissen, "which excludes great people, and only benefits little ones?"

That leaders should wish to save themselves is natural enough anywhere, but that they should deem their claim to mercy superior to that of their followers is an idea peculiar to Asia. It arises naturally enough from the belief that no one would spare except he were tired of the contest. They deem the pardon a price paid for peace, and naturally enough think the price should be higher for the strong. This impression was clearly explained by one leader, who remarked that the English had been as much harassed as themselves, and peace was as important to them as to the sepoys. They then referred to the weak point of the amnesty, its silence as to private complaints. They would, they said, all be thrown into jail. It was explained that complaints must be adduced within a certain period, and then carefully investigated. This answer made some impression, but it died away. Mr. Money, by the only error committed in the interview, allowed them an hour to consider, added a half hour's grace, and then moved to the attack, the enemy firing first. The influence of the leaders was too great, though it is said their followers are now slinking to their homes.

There seems little doubt that this is the process going on all over India. The men are tired, but the leaders are desperate. In any other country rebellion under such circumstances must terminate, but India is as full of anomalies as England. The leaders always retain, by bribes, or religious feeling, or feudal influence, sufficient authority to restrain a few. Our policy of laissez faire has left all men with arms in their hands; there are hundreds of thousands to whom fighting is a trade, and in a few days the body guard becomes the nucleus of a corps which one successful skirmish swells into an army. It is only when these classes are cowed, when anarchy has burnt out its own fuel, that we can hope for that permanent order of which the surrender of the leaders will be the signal, and the seal.—Friend of India, Dec. 23.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ADVENTURES OF A MUTINEER.—The Delhi Gazette publishes the following interesting communication:—"Hatta, Rhotas Hills, 15th December.—Deposition of 'Runjeet Ram,' 'Baghee,' formerly a pay havildar No. 1 company 40th N.I., afterwards a rebel general, and reduced to the rank of subadar by Hurkissen Sing, for being merciful to people inclined towards the British. He was captured in arms, but having been promised his life by a Sikh sowar, he was sentenced by court martial to transportation for life to the Andaman islands:—My name is Runjeet Ram. I was a pay havildar in the 1st company 40th N.I. My father's name is Purshan Ram, by caste a gwalla. I come from Shapore, in the pergunnah of Beeha, zillah Shahabad. My age is fifty-six, and I have been in the army from my youth. I mutinied on the 25th of July, 1857, in the cantonments at Dinapore. On the morning of the 25th July there was a parade, and the officers went to the magazine, and took away all the percussion caps; at two P.M. that afternoon the sepoys got the order to give up all the percussion caps in their possession, when Seeta Ram, subadar, advised them not to obey the order till the other two regiments in the station did; then the sepoys were greatly perplexed, and did not know whether to obey their officers or not, but whilst they were hesitating a steamer arrived, and two guns came round by the 'Bagh-ka-surrak' to the parade ground. Presently firing was heard in the direction of the hospital, and all the sepoys assembled near the bells-of-arms, but when they found that the kote-havildar did not open the bells-of-arms they made a rush towards them. Just then the major and adjutant arrived and gave the order to unlock the bells-of-arms, telling the sepoys to take all their things and go to the barracks, some obeyed the order, but most of them mutinied, and went westward. Our first march was to Koilwa ghat, and our next to Arrah. I remained at the latter place two hours, and then asked Seeta Ram, subadar, for leave to go to my village, Shapore; he allowed me to go, and I remained at my home six days, and then went to the Jugdespore jungles. The day after I arrived, we went out to meet the British force at Dullepore; we were defeated, and ran to Jetoura bungalow in the jungles, some of the sepoys remaining there, others going on to Baroun, and the rest making for Peeroo. Next morning we collected together, and with Koer Sing and Ummer Sing at our head, marched to Nokha; from this place we went first to Sasseram, then on to Teloutoo in the hills, and then through Akbarpour to the fortress of Rhotasghur. Continuing our march, we took the hill road via Raputunge and Daranudgunge towards Rewah, but were not allowed to stay in that district, or even to pass through it, so we went on to Banda, and stayed there for a month and a half. Whilst at Banda, we were joined by other mutineers, among which were the sepoys who had gone along the Grand Trunk Road by Futtehpore, one company of the 52nd N. I., and 400 or 500 cavalry belonging to different regiments. The Banda nawab and a retainer of his named Ood, quarrelled and fought, but Bawanee, subadar bahadur, and Ramdeen Sing, subadar, assisted the nawab with our force, took Ood prisoner after four days' hard fighting, and handed him over to the nawab. We then marched to Calpee, remained there one month (during which time we were joined by the Gwalior Contingent with forty guns), and then marched to Cawnpore. The Gwalior force reached Cawnpore first, and commenced fighting with the British; we came a few days later, and assisted them. After our defeat here we went to Lucknow, through Shurazpore, and at Lucknow we remained for a month and a half, holding the Martiniere College. The Begum was so pleased with us that she sent Koer Sing a very handsome 'killut,' consisting of two guns, elephants, gorgeous cloths, and the sum of Rs. 1,000. From Lucknow we went to Fyzabad first, then to Soorujkund, and then to Atrawlia, in the Azimghur district, at which latter place we fought and conquered the British force, following them up to Azimghur, and keeping them there till another British army came and drove us away. We ran to Munhear, in the zillah Ghazeeepore, fought again there, and lost from twenty-five to thirty of our men; when finding it was no use fighting, made for Sheopore ghat on the Ganges, and got across the river the best way we could, Koer Sing, Purshan Sing, Hurkissen Sing, and those who joined us at Fyzabad being with us. We then went to the Jugdespore jungle, and remained there for some time, till at length a British force attacked us and compelled us to retire. We did not, however, leave the jungle at once, but continued there fighting for a month or so, and then went to Gahmer, where we remained till we heard the Feringhees had left the jungle, and then returned to it ourselves. Whilst at Jugdespore, we were joined by sepoys of different regiments, and our strength in pukka sepoys alone could not have been less than 2,500. I myself was sick all this time, but know that for two or three months there was continual fighting with the British troops in different parts of the district. In the month of October, when the British force surrounded the jungle, we fled, and knew our case was hopeless. The greatest blow inflicted on us was when our stronghold at Berhampore was taken. Hurkissen Sing was the leading man among us; he had charge of all the treasure, &c. When we left the jungles this last time, we went through a place called Bullegoon to Kooath Khas, where we fought, and were beaten. We tried to escape across a jheel, but were hotly pursued by the British cavalry, and went to Jukhnee, where there is a temple. From this we went up the hills, the east of Chunaree. I had an ulcer on my leg, and could not always keep up with the sepoys, but used to see them occasionally. I was taken prisoner in the hills about a fortnight ago. I am extremely sorry I ever mutinied, for since I did so, my life has been one of misery and wretchedness."

A SOI-DISANT BARONET IN DIFFICULTIES.—Calcutta is not often enlivened with tales of extraordinary swindling. This year at its close, however, brings one case of the kind prominently to its notice. Within the last fortnight tradesmen in Calcutta have observed that a certain flashy European gentleman has been moving amongst them and giving orders rather to an extensive amount, some of which they had been induced to execute, under the impression that the would-be-militaire, as such he represented himself to be, was a great personage. The giver and obtainer of these orders represented himself as Sir John Hill, Bart., of the 1st European Bengal Light Cavalry. He was dressed in either Lancer or Light Cavalry uniform, evidently procured from the well-known firm of Messrs. Harman and Co., and with such a new un-service gloss upon it as immediately led to the conclusion that the uniform in question had never seen service out of the tailor's shop. This gentleman was accompanied by a European servant, and comported himself with a degree of nonchalance that might have taken in any but the most experienced. The gentleman, however, made the mistake of going to a large and fashionably frequented hotel in Calcutta, and there the Lancer uniform exploded. He sat down, drank some drinks, but very soon appeared, from the tone of conversation around, to be conscious of the fact that he was not in his "own clothes." Shortly afterwards Mr. Superintendent Purney and Mr. Smith, of Harman and Co.'s (the Lancer uniform), appeared on the scene, and the delinquent was removed. The European servant almost immediately afterwards disappeared, but he has since been found out by the police, and may disgorge the beautiful servant's hunting watch and chain which his generous master had presented to him. The real name of the perpetrator of this rather serious escapade is Thomas Stedman Warner. He was, some years back, an officer in the Bombay Artillery, subsequently came to this presidency, and served for some time in the Calcutta Police as an extra constable, and afterwards joined the Yeomanry Cavalry. He is known to be a man of violent temper, which may account for his having so often changed situations. It is doubtful whether, though the Lancer committed a felonious action in this case, he really intended felony. After his arrest very nearly the entire of the property which had been obtained under false pretences from the various tradesmen was found in his lodging at Howrah, and from its disposition there appeared no desire of making away with it. At the Police Court yesterday the Baronet was brought before the Commissioner of Police, who remanded him to gaol, after taking the deposition of one of the assistants at Messrs. Harman and Co.'s shop. The prisoner said he would put no questions to the gentleman who had given his deposition. He would make his defence before the judges of the higher court. The case has been remanded till Thursday.—Phoenix, Dec. 29.

SIR ARTHUR BULLER.—At the farewell dinner given last Tuesday by the members of the Calcutta bar to Sir Arthur Buller, the Advocate General, in a speech of much feeling, expressed the good-will entertained towards the departing Judge by those to whom his uniform courtesy and patience has much endeared him; at the same time, the speaker alluded to the loss which the Council of India and the public in general would sustain in one whose practical good sense has often made itself felt in debates which his wit without malice has adorned. The guest of the evening made an eloquent reply. Sir Arthur will leave Calcutta early next month, and will take with him the cordial good wishes of a community of which he has been as well a useful as a highly popular member.—Hurkaru, Dec. 23.

KUSSOWLEE.—The new and excellent barracks at the Kussowlee sanatory station, in the district of Bachat, were destroyed by fire on Sunday, the 20th Dec. The fire raged from half-past seven A.M. to two P.M., in spite of the laudable efforts of the soldiers to extinguish it. The buildings were capable of holding from five hundred to six hundred men, and no regiment can be sent to Kussowlee until new barracks are erected to replace those destroyed.

THE REV. DR. BOAZ.—By the Alma one well known to the residents of Calcutta returns to England—the Rev. Dr. Boaz, the Pastor of the Union Chapel, Dhurrumtollah, which office he has filled for nearly a quarter of a century. Dr. Boaz forms one of the Calcutta Staff of the London Missionary Society, and although he is not de facto a missionary, he has done much in various ways to advance the sacred cause. This is not only acknowledged by his co-labourers, but missionaries of other Societies bear like testimony. Nor have his labours been confined to the pastorate, and to what he could do for the Missionary Society. In many other ways has Dr. Boaz been actively employed in promoting the spiritual and temporal interests of the inhabitants of the metropolis.

THE PORT OF CALCUTTA.—The Government intends to construct a dock for the reception of the largest class of steamers that come to this port. The department of public works has been ordered to furnish particulars of the dimensions of vessels, their draught of water, &c. This is a proper application of public money.

SEVERE ATTACK BY THE REBELS.—A correspondent writing from Banda, on December 26, says:—"The garrison at Kirwee were attacked at noon on the 22nd, by Radha Govind, with 600 mutineers, 3,000 matchlockmen, and 150 cavalry; but the small though gallant band, consisting of thirty of H.M.'s 43rd, eleven of the royal artillery, and forty Madrassees, with one or two native guns, bravely held their own until nightfall, when the enemy retired. The next day the rebels were busy making scaling ladders, and on the 24th they attacked a neighbouring jagirdar, and took from him three guns, with which they were preparing for another attack on the garrison. General Whitlock, however, at Matuba, got the news by express on the evening of the 23rd, and with the A troop Madras Horse Artillery, one squadron H.M.'s 19th Lancers, and one troop Hyderabad cavalry, reached Banda, thirty-six miles, on the morning of the 24th, and the next night marched forty-eight miles to Kirwee, and relieved the garrison, who were fairly knocked up with three days of perpetual watching day and night. They had only lost one matchlockman, whilst the enemy had suffered considerably. They are now in force about five miles from Kirwee, but I trust that in a few days by a combined movement they will soon be exterminated or dispersed. Captain Woodland, of the 1st Madras Native Infantry, commanded the garrison, and bravely did they do their duty. The relieving force marched eighty-four miles in thirty hours, not so bad."

REBEL ATROCITY.—The Government has granted a life pension to one of the peons of the Sarun magistrates who was sent by the magistrate to Major Rattray with a letter. He was seized by the rebels on his way and taken into a jungle, where some Sirdar rebels ordered the sepoys to cut off his nose and hands as a punishment for being a Government Burkendaze. Accordingly they cut his nose nearly in two and cut off his right hand, took from him his badge and the letter, and then allowed him to return to the camp.

KIRWEE IN DANGER.—A letter from Banda, dated 23rd December, says:—"Last month, Brigadier Carpenter, leaving a garrison of about forty Europeans, H.M.'s 43rd Light Infantry, and sixty native sepoys 1st M. N. I. at Kirwee, marched to Nagode to look after his old friend Radha Govind, who was still encamped at Bundhora, about twenty miles south-west of Nagode, with about five or six thousand men. After a great deal of correspondence, Brigadier Carpenter succeeded in inducing one old woman to surrender, in the shape of Radha Govind's wife. Freed of the encumbrance, Radha Govind, with all this force, marched from Bundhora on the 19th instant, and by a clever and rapid movement got to the rear of the Brigadier between Nagode and Kirwee, and on the 4th day, the 22nd instant, at noon, they reached Kirwee and attacked the garrison from three sides. By the last news from Captain Woodland of the 1st M.N.I., commanding the garrison, the rebels had taken possession of the town and surrounded Narayun Rao's palace, in which the garrison are shut up. His letter is dated 31 P.M., 22nd Dec. One police matchlockman had been shot on our side, and mutual compliments were being exchanged. The loss of the enemy, who fire from inside of the surrounding houses, is not known. The chief fighting portion of the rebels are from 1,000 to 1,500 mutineers, assisted by heaps of matchlockmen. Our garrison numbers 100 men, including sick and convalescent, and the palace is too large for so small a party to defend properly. It is to be hoped the brigadier is in pursuit of Radha Govind from Nagode, or it will, I fear, go hard with the garrison; General Whitlock is as far off as Mahoba; and at Banda there is not a soldier off duty. The magistrate is out in the district at Pesenda, about twenty-eight miles from Kirwee, and will be joined to-day by 600 matchlockmen and two guns of the Chutterpore Rane, under command of Captain Griffin, with which he purposes to march at once to Kirwee. Mr. Carne, the deputy magistrate, is encamped at Rajapore. Kirwee is half a mile north of Tirohan, and forty-eight miles east of Banda. The rebels have no guns."—Delhi Gazette.

A VALUABLE DRUG.—India for centuries past has supplied Europe with drugs, yet her resources in this respect appear to be by no means exhausted. It was only last year that Dr. Mouat called attention to a new medicinal oil, obtained from the seeds of a tree called by the natives Chawal Mugra, which he found highly useful in one of the worst diseases which afflict man. We now see that another new medicinal preparation is offered to the public, for the utility of which we can vouch, in a disease not so formidable as leprosy, but probably quite as distressing to the sufferer. It is advertised as a preparation of a well-known plant, the Callicarpa. We have seen several persons who have obtained almost instant relief from smoking this preparation when under a severe fit of asthma, and as it is not a narcotic, its use causes no bad effect like that of stramonium, which has been so confidently recommended.—Englishman.

KAMPTEE FLYING COLUMN.—Brigadier Hill, acting on information received from Ellichpore and Baitool, came across the five hundred rebels under Raheem Dil Khan, that left the Sathpoora Hills for the westward on our flying column crossing the Wurdah into Berar, on the 12th Dec., killing and wounding a great number. He also sent out a party the next morning, which came on their rear unprotected, and did much execution. Thus our column has, besides reassuring the inhabitants of the country through which it has passed, done good service in driving this body of rebels into the clutches of Brigadier Hill. Brigadier Hill had with him four howitzers, two hundred cavalry, and four hundred infantry Hyderabad Contingent. Our column is now under orders to return to Kamptee.

BYRAMGHAT, Dec. 18.—Our small force at Durrabad, consisting of two 9-pounders, 1st Bengal Fusiliers, detachment of Hodson's Horse, and two companies of Sikh infantry, the whole under command of Lieut. Col. D. Seaton, broke ground on the morning of the 16th for service, but we were not aware at the time of our destination. Our march was very pleasant for a few miles, until we came on to dusty ground, and in an hour or two the sun became very powerful, and the Europeans on foot suffered severely, as we marched in our cloth tunics, and we regretted much that we were not allowed to wear our light Kakees. After marching some twelve miles, and passing through a very large village, or more properly a town, parts of which were loopholed, we halted in a large mango tope, and received refreshments in the shape of a dram of grog and two hours' rest, which was greatly needed. We then started off again, and arrived in our camping ground at about four P.M., dead beat. Our last few miles were across ploughed ground, which punished greatly many whose feet were blistered. The front of the camp is now about sixty yards from the right bank of the Gogra, and a mighty stream it is. To make everything pleasant, yesterday it rained very heavily all day, and the ground being very soft, we soon became flooded, and everything in the tents miserable; at 4 P.M. this morning a very heavy thunder-storm came on with torrents of rain, which soon drenched us again, but the sun coming out at mid-day, has partially dried the ground. On the opposite side H.M.'s 23rd, with some Royal Artillery, with four guns (two siege), are encamped. The engineer is very busy throwing across a substantial bridge of boats, which will soon reach the opposite side. We hear this same bridge is only a trap for Pandys; at any rate, when the C. C. routs them if they come this way, we have them on both sides, as there is only one other ford some ten miles above us, which is also strongly guarded.—Lahore Chronicle.

CAMP SUROWLIE, Dec. 10th.—Perhaps a few lines from this part of Bundelcund may not be unacceptable to some of your readers. Our small but serviceable column, consisting of the Rewah Contingent, numbering 400 Infantry, 200 Cavalry, two 24-pounders and two 9-pounders, 40 men Punjab Artillery, and 25 men H.M.'s 43rd, arrived here yesterday from Banda, for the purpose of guarding this ghaut on the Jumna, which is about half way between Humeerpore and Chilla Tarra, at the former of which places there are troops within call, and at the latter there are 500 Bundelas, under Captain Griffiths, of the 3rd Madras Europeans. The country on the banks of the river is the most extraordinary that I have ever seen, consisting of nothing but a series of deep ravines, in which it would be perfectly impossible to make any use of guns or cavalry. We find very great difficulty in getting supplies, and those we do get, have to be brought in from a distance. This village, although a very large one, is almost deserted, and the inhabitants generally of this part of the country do not seem to be at all of a friendly disposition. We find gunpowder and accoutrements in the wells at the halting-places, arms of all sorts in the villages, and at one village the grave of a soldier of H. M.'s 43rd, who had died there a few months previously, had been partially dug up, and entirely ploughed and planted over; but thanks to our C. O. having taken the matter in hand, I hope that this affair will be thoroughly investigated by the magistrate, and the perpetrators brought to justice. The men of the Meerut Contingent are a fine-looking body of men; they were raised, I have been given to understand, under rather difficult circumstances last year in Meerut, by Colonel Hinde, and although at that time only armed with matchlock, and having six not very safe native six-pounders, did good service in opening the Deccan road and restoring communication with Jubbulpore; they were employed afterwards in escorting horses, treasure, and Government stores to and from Allahabad, down the Jubbulpore road, and I have been assured by their officers that they have always evinced great cheerfulness and a desire to do their duty in any way, although they have had at times rather a ticklish business of it, and have had long marches in extremely hot weather. They were sent from Allahabad to Futtehpore in the railway, guns and all, and I understand that the men's astonishment was very great, as they had never even heard of such a mode of transit. The officers with them are Col. Hinde, commandant, Lieut. Mathias, second in command, Lieut. Cracroft, adjutant, Lieut. Ireland, and Mr. Kirke, doing duty. The men of the Royal Artillery are under the command of Capt. Parsley; they are fine-looking men, with fine fresh complexions, having been only a year from England. The 43rd men are commanded by Lieut. Mitchell—Dr. Madden, of that regiment, is attached to the force.—Delhi Gazette.

HURCHUNDOOR.—Lieut. Lauchlain Forbes, of the 2nd Grenadiers, and the Collector of Etawah, were out in camp in the district, when news reached them of the advance of the rebels under Feroze Shah. On receipt of this intelligence they marched to Phupoonah, thirty-four miles, with what force they had, and being joined there by trifling reinforcements, marched on nine miles further, and attacked the enemy who were besieging one of the Tubseels and the fort of a loyal Zemindar. Lieut. Forbes's force amounted to about 420 men of all arms and ranks, viz., 180 infantry, 200 cavalry, 40 artillery with four native guns, all belonging to the Etawah levies. The enemy had 200 regular infantry, 1,500 well mounted and equipped cavalry, 300 tattoo sowars armed with rifles, &c., and a number of camp followers, blackguards, women, &c. The local cavalry made two superb charges, but Mr. Doyle, their dauntless leader, and two Rissaldars having been killed, they broke. A large number fled in all directions (giving rise to the alarming reports at first circulated about this action), and most of the rest galloped down in confusion to the infantry for protection. Some twenty or thirty, however, are described as having maintained a long and desperate hand-to-hand fight over the bodies of their leaders, only retiring, and then in good order, when two-thirds of them had been killed or disabled. The rest of the enemy's cavalry, including many Sikhs and Afghans, and for the most part splendidly mounted, charged, time after time, the infantry and guns, front, flank, and rear, forcing their way right up to the guns, and even cutting our men down, and getting shot themselves beside them. For more than three hours this little band of less than 200 infantry beat off successfully 1,400 cavalry; the élite of the whole rebel army (not to mention their infantry), who, elated by their success against the local cavalry, and conscious of their great superiority in numbers, charged as native cavalry seldom do. At last, when the enemy began to grow wearied, and not a few had slunk away, the little force was extended into line, advanced, and utterly drove the enemy off the field. The Etawah force had lost Mr. Doyle and twenty others killed, and about the same number severely wounded. The enemy had lost Morad Alee Khan, Hurree Singh, and Ahmud-ool-lah Shah, all leaders, and fifty-eight others killed; they had the Peerjee (who lost his right hand), and between twenty and thirty severely wounded. They also lost several muskets, a number of carbines, swords, &c., and between fifty and sixty horses. The Etawah force was commanded by Lieut. Forbes. Mr. Hume, the collector, acted as second in command. The cavalry was commanded by Mr. Doyle, the guns by Mr. Maconochie, joint magistrate, and the infantry by a sergeant. The whole affair is well worthy of lasting record elsewhere, but one crisis of the action deserves, even from us, in this cursory summary, more particular mention. Early in the fight, when the masses of the enemy's cavalry forced themselves in amongst the guns, covered by the smoke and dust, a party of them contrived to cut off and make away with a portion of the baggage. Lieutenant Forbes (leaving Mr. Hume in command of the guns and the rest of the force) took with him forty of the infantry, and after a chase of about eight hundred yards re-captured and ultimately forced his way back safely with the baggage.—Mofussilite.

GENERAL WHITLOCK'S VICTORY.—The force under Major General Whitlock attacked the rebels under Radha Govind yesterday, December 29th, at Punwaree, four miles S. E. of Kirwee, in two columns. The heights were stormed, and the guns (four in number) were taken with a rush by H. M.'s 43rd, and the Rewah infantry. In the mêlée Radha Govind and his brother and about one hundred other rebels were slaughtered. Meanwhile the General had gone round by a detour to the enemy's rear, with the horse artillery and cavalry, and a detachment of the 3rd Madras Europeans and Sappers, and cut off their retreat. As the rebels came flying from before the attacking columns, they were met in every direction by the Horse Artillery and Cavalry; at last about 200 of them took refuge in a small wood, which was immediately surrounded by the Cavalry, and the boys went in and cut them all up to a man; upwards of 300 were killed altogether, without exaggeration, and, in addition to the guns, several elephants, camels, and horses and other property were captured; the rout of the enemy was most complete, and they only saved themselves by dispersing and flying into the depth of the immense forests which cover those tracts. Altogether this has been a very well-managed affair, and adds another well-deserved laurel to the honour of the gallant Madras column. They marched and fought over some forty miles of ground yesterday, and returned to Kirwee quite done up, but all delighted with the success of the day's expedition. The death of Radha Govind is alone an important triumph. Our casualties consisted of only a few wounded.

BRIGADIER SMITH'S BRIGADE.—From a correspondent at Goonah, dated 22nd December, we (Delhi Gazette) hear that Brigadier Smith's brigade moved from Seronge suddenly on the night of the 20th, in a westerly direction, to Jookhur, and marched the whole of that night, twenty-six miles, in order to intercept and head Feroze Shah, who had passed between Seronge and the Trunk Road on the 18th or 19th, and near to Arone, to form a junction, it was thought, with Abdul Mahomet and Maun Sing, who were at a place called Sypoor, eight miles south of Arone on the former date. The Feroze Prince was said to be making for Ramnugger and Fort Monohur, north of Rajgurh, and on the west side of the Trunk Road, and had given it out that he intended going to Neemuch, where he was well known. At a village called Bugwanpoor, some of his followers intercepted a convoy of stores and clothing for Brigadier Smith's brigade, proceeding from Goonah to Seronge, escorted by a party of the 1st Lancers, in charge of Lieutenant Stack of that regiment, who also had in care the remount horses for the corps, but which fortunately escaped being captured. One lancer, we hear, was killed, another wounded and taken, with a quantity of camels (number not known at Goonah), loaded with the clothing—tunics—of the regiment, with which they made off in all haste to the jungles, where they divided the spoil. A wing of the 3rd Light Cavalry and a wing of the 19th N.I. were expected at Beowra, from Mhow, on the 23rd, and General Michel would, it was supposed, soon follow in the direction either of Agur or Buragum towards Doosneer.

PURSUIT OF FEROZE SHAH.—The following account of the progress of Gen. Napier's column will be read with interest:—"We left at a quarter to 2 P.M., Dec. 14. We marched on till 10 o'clock, having gone a distance of twenty-three miles. Tents had not arrived when we left the lines, so we all pegged down in our cloaks, in front of our horses, with an order to march again at 3 A.M. As the trumpet sounded, Walk! March! an express camel arrived, we were ordered to file again to our lines, and unsaddle, and then laid down again in front of our horses. In the morning we had breakfast, and were going to have a snooze, when the order came to strike tents and march at 11 A.M., as the enemy were three coss away. Well, off we started, halting at 6 P.M. to get tea, and then again on the road. We now found out that we were in full pursuit of Feroze Shah, who, with three other leaders, and 2,000 rebels, was trying to join Tania. We marched till three in the morning, when we came across some of them, and found out that they had crossed a river close by about three hours before our arrival. We had breakfast and a dram, and at nine were again on the road. After we crossed the river we found we were nicely on their track, and went on at a devil of a pace until 6 P.M.; we then halted for a dram, &c., and laid down for a short time. We had not been down many minutes, before the alarm was spread in camp that the rebels were upon us. You can picture to yourself our movements; I never saw such a quick turn out before; but after all it proved to be a false alarm, so we turned in again. At 2 A.M., the cavalry, with thirty-seven of the 71st (mounted on camels), were again on the road, leaving the artillery, 25th N.I., and the remainder of the 71st to follow on, but we have not seen them up to the present time. Well, we arrived at a place called Nurwah, at seven in the morning, and heard the enemy had marched through four hours before; we halted for a couple of hours, had some tea and a dram, and on again. We now entered a dense jungle, and I can assure you it was not very pleasant, for we did not know the moment we might drop on them, and we had no guns, and very few infantry. We halted again at six, having, during the last hour, dropped across some stragglers, who could not keep up. I believe they gave very good information to the General. At five in the morning we were again in pursuit; about ten we came to a village, at the foot of a very large mountain. We saw hundreds of budmashes on the hill, but the General gave orders not to interfere with them. In a short time we were on the move again. At two we were close on their rear, but being in the jungle, the General would not attack them, so we halted, had a dram and some biscuit, in order to allow them to get out of it. Here we caught four of their cavalry, mounted on most beautiful horses, but done up through fatigue, for we had kept them on the move. About four we came in sight of a small fort, in the centre of a plain, and there halted for the night. At four in the morning we marched again to this place, and were rather surprised when the advance guard was ordered to halt, and in a few moments the walls were crowded with men armed to the teeth, and a gun pointed down our road. In a short time the general found out these preparations were made against the rebels, who were within two miles, and marching in in another direction to loot the place. The advance guard were ordered to the front, and there we saw a fine sight, about 2,500 with eleven elephants were advancing in half circle, about half a mile in length. We sounded Trot! Canter! for the squadron to advance to the guard, and there formed line under some trees, the enemy still advancing; they were all cavalry. Our squadron and some sowars that were in rear numbered about 180. We never thought for a moment that the general intended to tackle them with such a few, but supposed that he wanted to frighten them back, but we were all mistaken. The order was given:—Keep close together! Walk! Trot! Canter! Charge! We gave one hurrah, more like a regiment than a single squadron, and a few yards more were in amongst them properly. More I cannot say than that we cut up between 400 and 500, took six elephants, and killed three leaders (one a big nob, that was at the Delhi massacre—his name is Fuzl Huq), and all without the loss of a single man, and only five wounded. The ground was so full of holes that a great number of our men came down; two horses shot, fourteen missing.—Mofussilite.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.—Up to the 17th of December we had marched 140 miles, on an average of twenty-three miles a day, keeping close behind the rebels, who out-walked us, till the 16th, when we overtook them in a very thick jungle among the hills, and came on some of the stragglers, who hid in the jungle and gave us the slip. Captain Lumsden, who was in advance with the guide, came on two sowars going leisurely along, and taking them for our own men did not fire; it was not till he got within a yard or two of them that they looked behind and saw him, when they immediately dismounted and bolted into the jungle, leaving their horses. The men of the 71st regiment were immediately dismounted and ordered to the pursuit, on the proximity of the enemy being known: they skirmished through the thick cover, but were unsuccessful in finding the black game; however, they picked up a few arms that had been thrown away. The pathway through the jungle was very narrow, strong, and steep, and we had some difficulty in mounting to the summit of the hill, when we halted two hours to allow the baggage to come up. We moved on again through very difficult and hilly country till 6 P.M., when we came on the rebels' camp; however, they bolted, and all that could be seen was a dense mass of dust, which they kicked up in their retreat. Three prisoners were taken in the jungle on the road-side, who could scarcely stand; they were footsore and regularly done up. It was quite dark when we encamped, and it would have been useless to try and follow them up there. On the 17th, we marched at four A.M., and at first, much to the General's annoyance, the guides seemed to have taken us by the wrong road instead of following the rebels, which was the intention. At eight A.M. we were halted before the walls of the village of Nurrode, which were lined with armed men. However, after halting about fifteen minutes we learnt to our great joy that the inhabitants were not armed to oppose us, but were prepared to resist the rebels, who were in full march to plunder the town. The General and Staff rode to the front to reconnoitre, and in less than ten minutes were seen galloping back; the enemy, unaware of our presence, were steadily advancing, and were within 800 yards of the village. We then advanced from our concealed position into an open country, the 14th Dragoons leading, closely followed by the Camel corps and the Mahrattas. We passed the enemy's advanced guard, consisting of 80 to 100 horsemen at a distance of 300 yards, and went in at the main body. The rebels broke and fled in every direction, leaving their women, baggage, tattoos, &c. &c., at our mercy. In the first charge we captured three elephants and killed Fuzl Huk, whose head was brought into camp, and identified by those who had known him: there is no doubt as to the head being his. Papers were found on his body addressed to him, and a revolver was also taken from him. Further on we captured three more elephants. Feroze Shah and one or two other men of note, I am sorry to say, made their escape. They were pursued for six or seven miles by a few dragoons. It would be difficult to calculate the number of their killed, but I should put it down at about 500. Our casualties are small: Major Prettyjohn, sword cut in the thigh, and six or seven of the dragoons slightly wounded. To-day, December 9th, we expect Major Roche's party of artillery, the 71st and 25th B.N.I., who were left behind on the 15th.—Delhi Gazette.

ACCIDENT TO LORD CLYDE.—We have intelligence from Oude to the 28th December. Lord Clyde, with the Head Quarters of the Army, left Baraitch on the 24th of December direct for Nanparah, and passing through that place, which he found evacuated, advanced towards Churdah. At some distance outside of Nanparah he had on the 26th a running fight with the rebels, depriving them of six good guns and making some havoc amongst the men. The only drawback to our success was a painful accident which happened to the Commander-in-Chief as he directed the movements of the army. Whilst riding his favourite charger at full speed over some broken ground, his horse came down, and threw Lord Clyde with great force on the ground, dislocating his shoulder and hurting his face. Medical attendance was immediately forthcoming, and the limb was put back, but the Commander-in-Chief was unable to ride next day, and has since been carried in a doolie. On the 28th, the force appeared before Medjidiah, occupied by Beni Mahdo and several chiefs. It was a strong fort on the very borders of Terai, and mounted with six heavy guns. The enemy were driven out by the artillery, and their six guns taken. Nana Sahib, it was ascertained, had fled south along the Terai to Combacote, where he will be met by Brigadier Rowcroft from Toolsepoore. The Begum was unable to surrender as she intended. She was prevented by her own sepoys from leaving the rebel force.

BANGHUR, Dec. 15.—We have now what is called the first line of defence—running from Charnmah near Nurbudda to Paplode near Asseerghur, a long line of jungle, to the east lies the Taptee river, and the Satpara hills dividing the Berar valley from this country. It was down the valley of the Taptee from Maisday to Meil and Chynpoor that Tantia fled; he was followed by 500 rebels, who crossed the Nerbudda on the 24th of last month. Brigadier Hill, Hyderabad Contingent, has been marching up the Taptee, and twice punished the rebels in these jungles, but they evaded him and marched on. On the evening of the 12th they crossed our line and went due west towards Dhungaum. We followed them for thirty or forty miles all night through dense jungles; they were only about 250 strong, but they concealed themselves and pushed on, crossed the 2nd line near Dhungaum, where Abbott and Fraser, Hyderabad Contingent, took up the chase, but they have not yet caught them: the beasts keep to the jungles and hills, and go as if they knew the devil was after them. They will be caught by some one. We are obliged to return to our position, as sundry other rebels from 500 to 30,000 and up to 200,000!! are reported as being in the jungles east of us. 16.—If you were to see the jungly country we have to watch, you would not be surprised at the rebels escaping: the grass is as high as a man's head on horseback; there are ravines deep enough to hide 5,000 men, the number we chased is reported to be 250 or 300. We could not follow them up, as we had to return to our post. We to-day hear the report of there being more rebels in our front is false. Brigadier Hill is still in those jungles. I suspect the panic-stricken villagers have taken his force for rebels. Hill has a good many natives and no European soldiers. It was fortunately reported to the general that he must not be surprised if the rebels did pass our line, as we had not troops enough to defend nearly eighty miles of dense jungle. 17th.—I kept this open in hopes of being able to tell you the rebels had been run down; they have got nearly to the Nurbudda. Troops are after them, and I think must close with them before they cross. This jungly country is so much in their favour, and nearly all the head men of the villages hereabout are Mahratta Brahmins, and help all and everybody belonging to Tantia and the Rao Sahib. They evidently respect them as well as dread them. Tantia persuaded them all he had two lakhs of men with guns following him. Had we not been misled by these rascals, or had they even given us the information they had, the rebel party could not have passed.—Delhi Gazette.

PUBLIC FEELING IN INDIA.—The private letters we (Indian Mail) have received from India are most unsatisfactory as regards the tone and feeling of the European residents. It is complained on all hands that a great change has taken place, and for the worse, in the mutual relations of Europeans and natives. Mr. Russell's letters, we are assured, tend to increase the severance between the two races; masters and servants are no longer on the same pleasant terms as formerly, and few Englishmen care to cultivate an acquaintance with native gentlemen. Mr. Russell is accused of giving both praise and dispraise where neither is due, and, in short, of totally misunderstanding the relative position of the native and the foreigner. The former, it is said, have jumped at the straw he has thrown to them, and quote him on all occasions as their friend and ally. They have discovered his gullibility as well as the power of the journal he represents, and they fool him to the top of his bent. Towards the constituted authorities public feeling is decidedly adverse. Having in vain expended their indignation, the disaffected—nine out of every ten Europeans—have had recourse to ridicule. No fewer than four Comic Serials—lugubrious enough in their imbecility—have been started, apparently for the sole purpose of throwing contempt upon the higher powers. Not one of these rises even to mediocrity, but the least bad is The Oracle, from which we extract the following dialogue as a fair specimen of Anglo-Indian satire.

SCENE, Allahabad.—Lord Clyde and Lord Canning sitting at a table, with cheroots and brandy panee—a disturbance heard without.

Sentry: Ye canna come in I tell ye man, they're busy wi' state affairs.

Voice: Go, minion, tell thy lord that Russell waits.

Clyde puts his head out at the door and discovers the Times correspondent remonstrating with the sentry, who will persist in holding his bayonet at the charge within a few inches of the illustrious stomach.

Clyde: Shoulder arms, ye deevil, wad ye stick my best friend, and me no' a field marshal yet? damn ye. (Turning to Russell.) And how's a' wi' ye? Lord, it is just delighted I am to see ye, for we're a' waitin' for ye, and the siege train's a' ready for Oude. Come in and see, my lord. I'm a lord mysel' now.

Rus: I've come, my lord, I've come through tribulation.

I've come, like Norval, from the peaceful hills, To follow to the field my warlike lord.

In ancient days a herald went before
Each noble knight, to blazon forth his fame,
But modern trumpeters now march behind,
A great improvement on the ancient plan
And suited to the spirit of the Times.

Clyde: And the Times correspondent too, ha! ha! (They enter, and Lord Canning comes forward and shakes hands.)

Can: I rejoice to see the opponent of the bloody scalps convalescent. Are these things you tell of your experience of dawk travelling really true?

Rus: My lord. I hope you do not—

Can: I don't mean that they are untrue, but then there may be just a little exaggeration. A slight colouring, or has some one been "selling" you.

Rus: My lord, that I've been bought I do admit,

But Russell ne'er was sold.

All I have told I have myself beheld.

I've seen the burning faggots brought and piled Beneath the creatures' stomachs, till the flesh
Hissed as the Cobras hiss, who, on the wires,
Spit forth their venom on the passing train.
Protruding from their mouths, their poor dumb tongues,

Stretched to the utmost, with a man's whole strength,

Break at the root and in the box are thrust
To be conveyed unseen, to the Khansamah,
Who cooks the dainty morsel for the Sahib
At the next staging bungalow!

Can: Dear me, how horrible; we must really issue a proclamation, or a circular, or something or other. (Clyde calls an aide-de-camp, and having taken him into a bathing room, gives the order for his guard, for the night, a most excellent precaution, as the thing might otherwise become known to the public, and his plans be frustrated by the rebels. He also, in a loud voice, intermixed with sundry oaths, gives orders for all the troops to be ready to march at a moment's notice, although he does not intend to move for a month.)

HEAD QUARTERS CAMP, MUJEEDIA, 29th December, 1858.—You (Delhi Gazette) are aware that the C. in C. left Lucknow on the 5th to attack the rebels on the other side of the Gogra; well, we marched to Nawabgunge Bara Bunki, where his troops assembled from all quarters, and on the following day, the troops having been told off into brigades under their respective brigadiers, Horsford, Eveleigh, and Purnell, we marched to Byram Ghat with a bridge equipment, intending to bridge the river and cross into the Baraitch district at that point. On the way the enemy showed a front on the other side of the river with cavalry and artillery, but soon scampered off. Leaving Brigadier Purnell at Gunnespoore, near Byram Ghat, the remainder of the chief's forces marched to Fyzabad, passing through Durriabad and Begum Gunge. On the 11th, we crossed the Gogra, each regiment followed by its own baggage, and at 9 P.M. that night we were all safely encamped on the other side. On the following morning at 6.15 A.M. we countermarched up along the left bank of the Gogra, and, in consequence of the swampy and rugged nature of the ground, we shortened our marches to ten or twelve miles a day (up to this time we had marched twenty each day); the nights and mornings too are very cold, and a dense fog, which commences towards morning, and continues till 9 o'clock each day, makes it almost impossible to see a dozen yards. On our arrival in Baraich we found the town nearly deserted; several of the men who got into it looted matchlocks, tulwars and charpoys. I heard that the rebels had bolted only a short time before our arrival. We were nearly washed out of our tents the first night at this place; the rain came down in torrents, the lightning flashed, and the thunder roared all night. I heard several fellows who had looted charpoys the previous evening bless their stars for having done so in the morning. Here we had to remain a few days, in consequence of the rain which continued to pour, so that Baraich had the honour of our presence at Christmas, the fellows made as merry as they could, and the vocalists were so numerous that singing was the order of the day in every tent. On the 26th, we started again, and encamped at Jeta, left the following morning and marched to Churdah, passing on our way a fort which was vacated by the enemy at eight o'clock in the morning. Towards evening we came up with the enemy's cavalry and artillery (we had just marched nineteen miles); we halted and formed up—their artillery opened fire on us from a tope of trees. Our cavalry and artillery galloped on to both flanks, the rifles and Belooch battalion advanced in line, throwing out a few skirmishers, while H.M.'s 20th followed them a few paces in rear as supports. The fellows, without loss of time, began to retire from tope to tope, still keeping up a fire as they went. Our infantry had not a chance of giving them a shot, but, I believe, the horse artillery got them within range on two occasions, and made some nice practice. We took six guns, I heard there were some of the fellows killed, though I saw none. The Commander-in-chief, who rode with the cavalry, had a fall from his horse, which put his shoulder out of joint. It was now night when the firing ceased, but the blaze from the burning huts within and around the fort (you must know they were two miles in advance of the fort, when they opened fire on us, and consequently we were now some distance from it) served as a beacon for us to advance upon, and now when we reached our ground commenced a scene of indescribable confusion with camel drivers, elspahntars, tents, baggage of all regiments getting jumbled together; it was impossible for it to be otherwise, in consequence of the thick darkness; however, in about two hours we got our camp pitched and were soon all right. Thanks to the old chief he allowed us to sleep in peace till eight o'clock next morning; we marched at ten o'clock though, leaving the fort behind us, and soon came to a jungle, which we passed through into an open space, surrounded on all sides by jungle. Presently I saw a halt in front of the infantry column, the cavalry and artillery galloped to the right and left close to the jungle in our front. Our infantry was formed up into three columns. Second Battalion Rifles centre, wing 20th and wing Belooch battalion right, and wing 20th and wing Belooch battalion left. These dispositions were made to attack a fort situated in a strong position, having a dense jungle on three sides of it. Scarcely had we formed up, and long before our infantry began to move, they opened fire on us from their bastions. Our dispositions having been made, and our guns and mortars got into position, the infantry began to move, covering the guns; they were all thrown out in skirmishing order, with support; the rifles advanced in the centre, through an open space covered with long coarse grass; the 20th and Belooches on the right and left advanced through the jungle, driving the skirmishers of the enemy before them. The guns from the bastions kept up a brisk fire of grape, round shot and shell on all the advancing columns, but it did very little harm, as all the shot went over our heads. Our heavy guns and mortars began to play on the place at two o'clock, as soon as the infantry began to advance. Our left skirmishers having got through the jungle to within fifty yards of the fort, soon silenced the guns there, as did also the other columns on the right and centre. Not a man was now to be seen on the ramparts or at the guns, and when the infantry entered the place, about a quarter of an hour after, the fort was found to be evacuated; they had left five guns, lots of ammunition, shell, grape, canister, some twenty bullocks, and a few horses. In both days we had only eleven casualties, all wounded, some severely. I did not see one of the enemy dead either in the fort, ditch or any where near it, though I searched to find them, but could not. Our cavalry and horse artillery could do nothing, as it was impossible for them to get through the jungle. We got back to where our camp was pitched about 4 P.M. To-day working parties from each regiment are engaged in destroying the fort; when this is done I suppose we march again. Beni Madho is said to have been in the fort with 4,000 followers; I heard they were principally cavalry. I went to see the fort to-day whilst being destroyed. It is very strong. The trace is that of a regular decagon, with circular bastions at each angle, each bastion having embrasures for either three or four guns, each face of the fort being about eighty yards; the diameters of the bastions vary from twenty to thirty feet; there is a good ditch surrounding the fort, about eighteen feet broad at top and sixteen feet deep, and in front of the ditch is a formidable abatis of prickly brushwood, fixed firmly in the ground, and which would be very difficult to get over had we to storm the place. There is besides a rifle pit for musketry, in front of each face of the work, which communicates with the interior of the work. I heard that Colonel Christie, whom we sent away from Baraich with a column, has had an engagement with the enemy at Matarah. Brigadier Eveleigh, when we last heard from him, was at a place called Gorah, in our rear.

A GALLANT ACT.—On Thursday, 16th of December, the hounds belonging to Captain Pearson, 88th Connaught Rangers, met at the Moosabagh, near Lucknow. A jackall afforded a good run, and being pressed by the hounds, swam across the Goomtee, followed by the gallant little pack and by Captain Pearson. The whipper-in, a mehter of the captain's, also most pluckily rode his horse into the river, but not being accustomed to ride a swimming nag, fell off, and was in great danger. Captain Pearson seeing this, jumped off his horse, and throwing off his coat, dashed into the river with his breeches and top-boots on. The native sunk twice, but the gallant officer succeeded in laying hold of him before he went down again and swam with him to the land. Several natives were present and took no notice of the drowning man. The river is both broad and deep where this happened.

MR. HALLIDAY, THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR of Bengal, has been visiting Cuttack on a tour of inspection. At a durbar held by his Excellency, the native rajahs came to pay their respects, one only absented himself, and that was the Rajah of Dhencanal. He could not present himself for want of his new clothes, which the tailor had delayed to send in.

GENERAL G. ST. P. LAWRENCE.—The Governor General has been pleased to appoint Brigadier General G. St. P. Lawrence to be agent to the Governor General for the States of Rajpootana. This appointment will have effect from the 11th September, 1857, the date on which the office was vacated by Major General Sir James Outram, K.C.B.

THE INDIGO PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION in Bengal are preparing a petition, asking for the extension of the jurisdiction of H.M.'s Supreme Court to Lower Bengal, and the introduction of the English language in courts of large cities and towns in the Mofussil. These courts, invested with civil and criminal jurisdiction, the association wish, should administer English Criminal Law to British and Christian people, and the Lex Loca, in addition to Mahomedan and Hindoo Law.

THE LATE MR. DOYLE.—Mr. Doyle was one of those men who make their way in the world by themselves and for themselves. He began life in a very humble station, as a hospital apprentice in one of H.M.'s regiments, without friends or interest, but by the time he was twenty-five years of age he had risen to a situation in the chief engineer's office, where he was in receipt of 250 rupees a month. At the commencement of the outbreak he joined the cavalry militia, and soon rose to be sergeant major in the corps. In every engagement he distinguished himself by his coolness, bravery, and skill in horsemanship and in handling the sword. It was he who on the 5th July went with Dr. Watson, and carried off Major Thomas of the 3rd Europeans from under fire. At Allyghur, at Futtehpore Sikree, in fact, wherever the cavalry were engaged, he was one of the foremost in the fight. He was afterwards selected to assist Mr. Hume in raising a force of cavalry in the district, and his valuable services were justly appreciated by that officer. Mr. Doyle was present in several engagements, till at Dehbolee he was wounded severely, being shot through the right shoulder. In October last he rejoined Mr. Hume, and was concerned in a successful raid into the Gwalior territory about a month before the battle of Hurchundpore, in which he fell so gloriously, at the early age of 28. We (Delhi Gazette) are authorised to add, by one who knew him well, that he was a sterling example of the fallacy of the popular assertion that the children of European parents born and bred entirely in India always degenerate physically and morally; for a better, braver, more energetic or active man no country could have produced; brought up among the privates of a European corps, he was nevertheless a perfect gentleman in speech and manner, as well as in heart and mind. That the Government appreciated him is clear, as he drew 500 Rupees a month as commandant of the Etawah local cavalry, and the Governor General has of his own accord expressed his desire to grant a pension to his widow.

MOOLTAN.—From Mooltan we learn that the 1st Bombay Fusiliers have suffered very much from sickness during the period they have been stationed there. Great complaints are made that, though the regiment have now been quartered at Mooltan eighteen months, they are not yet properly housed. Surely Sir John Lawrence is not aware of this; if he is, we must in future, unless he forthwith looks to their comfort, regard him as having some antipathy to our Bombay troops. It is said that three companies of this regiment are to be stationed at Dera Ismael Khan. The friends of Major Hogg, the commandant of this noble regiment, will be sorry to hear that that officer is shortly expected here, suffering much from rheumatism.

BARAICH, Dec. 21.—We arrived here on the evening of the 19th, and joined the Chief's camp. On our arrival, the C. in C. divided the whole force in his camp into two brigades; one of cavalry, under Brigdr. H. R. Jones, the other of infantry, under Brigdr. Horsford, C.B. The former consists of the head quarters 6th Carabineers, the 7th hussars, a detachment 6th Madras light cavalry, Hodson's horse, Maud's troop royal horse artillery, Moir's troop Bengal horse artillery. The infantry brigade is composed of H.M.'s 20th, head quarters 80th Queens, 2nd battalion rifle brigade, Kumaon battalion, 1st Belooch battalion, 5th Punjab rifles, a company of Madras sappers and miners, and the heavy field battery brought up by Colonel Christie, consisting of three 18-pounders, one 8-inch howitzer, two 8-inch mortars, and two 5½-inch ditto. Yesterday the rebels were at a place called Nanparah, about twenty miles north of this place; but news reached us this morning that they had evacuated their entrenchments there. A force has therefore been detached from our camp to the west of the Surjoo Nuddee, to prevent their crossing it, and giving us the slip to the rear. This detachment is nearly two thousand strong (about three hundred cavalry and one thousand six hundred infantry), consists of four guns, Moir's troop Bengal horse art., the 6th carabineers, Hodson's horse, some police cavalry, the Madras sappers and miners, 80th, two companies of H.M.'s 20th, and the 5th Punjab rifles; the whole under the command of Colonel Christie, 80th Queen's. The carabineers appear to be very well mounted and equipped; in short, the whole detachment is workman-like in the extreme. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the rebels may now have a taste of one of our two columns before they are many days older. Colonel Christie, I think, after crossing the Surjoo, will proceed up its banks; two or three days then will most likely see Pandey's reign at an end in this part of Oude.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL has paid a flying visit to Cawnpore. His lordship having left Allahabad by train early on the morning of the 21st December, and spending the night at Cawnpore, got back to Allahabad at noon the following day.

CHRISTIAN CONVERTS.—Two men belonging to the 24th Regiment Punjab Infantry have been baptized at Umritsur, the sacred city of the Sikhs. It is reported by the Punjabee that their example has stimulated other men of the regiment to inquire after, and to be instructed in, the truths of Christianity.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—The appointments shortly to be made in the N.W. Provinces are thus reported by the Delhi Gazette:—"Lieut. Governor, Mr. Edmonstone; Sec. to Govt., N.W.P., Mr. E. C. Bayley; Foreign Sec., Mr. G. Campbell. Oude will probably be amalgamated with the N.W. Provinces, on Mr. Montgomery taking his seat in the Council Chamber; but it is understood that a commissioner at Lucknow will still order the affairs of Oude, subject to the general supervision. Both Mr. Muir and Mr. G. Campbell are named as the probable nominees to the commissionership."

THE SECRETARY OF STATE for India, in a recent despatch, has desired the local government of India to transmit to the India House all accounts and documents connected with the receipts and disbursement of the revenue of India, at least two months earlier than they were formerly submitted to the Court of Directors.

A NEW INDIAN LOAN.—Lord Stanley has, in a recent despatch, authorised the Indian Government to exercise that power which it enjoyed under the late regime of the East India Company, of raising funds or opening new loans in cases of any financial necessity of the State. This despatch, together with the tightness of our money market, and the heavy demands for money on the Indian exchequer, owing to the late unhappy disturbances, has given rise to various speculations amongst the dealers in promissory notes, regarding the opening of a new loan, the prospect of which, we believe, is very distant.—Hurkaru.

SREEMUTTY RAUMONEY DOSEER, the well-known widow millionaire of Jaun Bazaar, has issued cards of invitation to a concert to be held at the house this evening, Dec. 27, "to celebrate her Most Gracious Majesty's assumption of her Indian dominions." We (Hurkaru) are requested to state that every precaution will be used to keep the company select, and that English ladies may honour the entertainment with their presence under complete assurance that nothing can occur to cause them offence. Those who have received cards of invitation are requested to present them at the door.

MISSIONARY PETITIONS.—From the Englishman we learn that "the missionaries of Calcutta and the neighbourhood some time ago petitioned the Governor General for the suppression of all public practices at the Cherruck Poojah, whether nominally religious or not, which are in themselves cruel and inhuman. This petition has only just now been sent to the Supreme Council for future consideration. The missionaries also petitioned for a repeal of the regulations of the Bengal and Madras codes concerning the 'superintendence by Government officers of endowments for the support of mosques, Hindoo temples, &c. This petition has also been laid before the council."

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ASSASSINATION OF CAPTAIN HARE.—It seems he was not immediately aware that he had been struck, but he had moved only a few paces when he put his hand to his side, and exclaimed, "I am hit!" and fell senseless. Dr. Burn, who happened not to be at mess that evening, was sent for, and at once pronounced the wound mortal. The ball (musket) had penetrated the left side close to the heart, and, passing through the spleen and stomach and right side, had taken a piece out of the right arm, deeply indenting and breaking the arm of the chair on which his arm was resting, whence it rebounded and was picked up in the direction from which the shot had been fired. Poor Mrs. Hare reached the Mess-house in time to hear her expiring husband assure her that he died in Jesus, a most merciful consolation to her in her terrible affliction. The murderer, a Mussulman sepooy of Hindostan, does not seem to have been influenced by any personal feeling of animosity towards Captain Hare. He was heard shouting out, as he ran down the street, "I have done a great deed; I have killed a Kafir!" Only a few days previously Captain Hare had remitted a punishment which he had awarded the man. The mess guard are not suspected of being implicated in any way. The man told one of the guard shortly before 8 p.m. that he was going to the rear for a light, and taking this opportunity to load his musket, he proceeded to the verandah of the mess house on the opposite side to where the guard was stationed, and putting his piece to the side of the door of the reading-room, which was open, and covered only by a bamboo blind, fired in. Captain Macquoid immediately rushed out to seize the murderer, and the guard was instantly under arms, but the man had escaped. Parties were sent out in all directions, and a reward offered of Rs. 500 for his apprehension, but up to the evening of the 2nd Jan. without success. The man is known, one of the guard having been immediately missed, and having left behind him his cloak, bearing his regimental number. Captain Hare was held in the highest estimation as an officer, and was much beloved by his men, who, there is little doubt, would themselves at once hang the murderer if they could but lay hands on him.—Madras Times.

FATAL ENCOUNTER WITH A TIGER.—We have to record the painful news that Captain Handcock is no more. The terrible wounds which he received from the royal tiger have led to a sudden termination of his earthly career. He was carried from the fatal field to a neighbouring bungalow, and on Wednesday a cheerful telegram was received to the effect that in consequence of profuse bleeding he had been removed from one cot to another, but that the removal had had a favourable effect upon his spirits, and that he was doing well. Two days afterwards the news reached Madras that he was dead. It is a singular circumstance, and one that seems almost to partake of presentiment, that this gallant officer, who was well known for his love of field sports, and had distinguished himself in the pursuit of the spotted deer, ibex, elk, and other similar game in the neighbourhood of the Neigherry Hills, should have always evinced a peculiar dread of the tiger, and on more than one occasion should have refused to follow the animal when seeing it at a distance. His friends, therefore, come to the conclusion that he was taken by surprise on the present occasion, or would otherwise have never levelled his gun at a royal tiger. The deceased was the third son of Lord Castlemaine. He was connected by marriage with our present governor, as his eldest brother married the half sister of Lord Harris.—Spectator, Dec. 18.

CHRISTIAN VERNACULAR SOCIETY.—According to a circular of the Christian Vernacular Society of Madras, we find that they have at present 354 schools, attended by 12,516 pupils at an annual cost of nearly four rupees per head. Instruction is given in Telegu, Canarese, Malayalam, Tamil, and Singhalese languages.

TESTIMONIAL.—A valuable silver claret cup, of elegant design and workmanship, is about to be presented to David Parker, Esq., of the Civil Engineers, by certain of the subordinate servants of the Madras Railway.

FRAUDS IN THE SALT DEPARTMENT.—There has of late been a considerable stir in the Salt Department. The frauds by the public servants both in the Collector's office and at the Pans, has long been matter of notoriety, but the facility with which frauds can be carried on and the infinite difficulties existing to their detection have hitherto rendered any attempt almost hopeless; however, we now learn that the Collector has succeeded in his plans, and that all is in a fair way of discovery, to the great discomfiture of those who have for years past enjoyed the fruits of their ill-gotten gains.

EX-KING OF DELHI.—The Madras Spectator of the 22nd December gives us the following brief glance at the ex-King of Delhi and his family during a portion of their voyage to the place of their expatriation:—"H.M.'s steamer Megara arrived in the roads yesterday from Rangoon, to which place she conveyed from Calcutta the ex-King of Delhi and his family. The 'interesting youth,' Jumma Bukht, occupied his time on board, we learn, in squabbling with his mother, who accused him of purloining the family jewels. On one occasion the young gentleman got gloriously drunk, and had the assurance given to him, if he repeated the frolic, of being provided with a separate cabin and nourished on bread and water diet. A younger son, about fifteen, who was also on board, seemed to be a favourite."

DISTURBANCE AT TINNEVELLY.—We have received from a correspondent a tolerably full account of the disgraceful outrage which has just taken place at Tinnevely; and will therefore first give his narrative as nearly as possible in his own words, and then offer such observations as may suggest themselves upon the events which have transpired:—"There are two parties in Tinnevely—the missionaries and their converts, and the Brahmins and their followers. On the 22nd December a low-caste Hindoo convert, or rather a Christian Pullen, died in the civil hospital of Tinnevely. In conveying his remains to the place of interment, the Christian friends of the deceased, against the established custom of the Hindoos, insisted upon carrying the corpse through the street fronting the Tinnevely Pagoda. To this the Brahmins and their party objected; a disturbance was raised, and a great mob was collected; the majority were simply spectators, there being amongst them a large number of children, attracted to the spot by the novelty of the scene, they never before having witnessed the corpse of a Pullen carried in a coffin before their sacred Pagoda—an act which the Brahmins regarded as an outrage, and calculated to corrupt or defile their temple. The tahsildar being unable to disperse the crowd, applied to the acting magistrate for assistance. This was speedily obtained, in the shape of three companies of sepoy from the 2nd extra regiment, stationed at Palamcottah, about three and a half miles distant, and with these the magistrate, accompanied by his head assistant and several military officers, marched into Tinnevely. The novelty of the scene was thus greatly increased, and great crowds followed the magistrate and his party. One company of sepoy was posted at the front gate of the temple, and the other two companies went to the place where the funeral party was assembled. Under this escort the Pullen's body, in a coffin covered with a pall, was being conveyed to its last resting-place. Notwithstanding the tahsildar pointed out that there were three other streets through which the procession could pass, and that he distinctly stated his fears that nothing would prevent a breach of the peace if the party took the street facing the pagoda, the Christians refused to listen to his remonstrances, and insisted upon going by the way they had chosen. [This has been contradicted by another correspondent. See below.] For a while all went on quietly, but on the procession coming up towards the Pagoda—on forbidden ground according to the Brahmins, whereby they doubtless considered that their religious prejudices and feelings were outraged and their caste customs broken through—and that, under the sanction of civil and military authority which they hoped would have been exercised in their favour—a shower of stones came pouring down from the mob, and from persons concealed in the houses of the Brahmins, and in the Goburams or pyramids of the Pagoda. The military were called on to use force to put down the violence of the crowds, and shot down about thirty-nine men, women, and children—and wounded a great many more. Amongst the slain was the son of the deputy sheristadar of the collector's office, who, having seen his father in company with the magistrate, was induced to share in the fun, and most unhappily for himself joined the crowd as a harmless spectator. It is to be hoped, that the civil power used every effort to disperse the crowd before requiring the military to fire;—was the riot act read accompanied by beat of tom-tom? Were the people warned that if they did not desist they would be fired upon? It is said that no precautions of this kind were taken, but I am unwilling to believe that so heavy a responsibility would be heedlessly and rashly incurred by any civil authority. A short time previously, not more than a week before, a similar question was raised at Tinnevely. A weaver convert died and his friends wished to carry the body through a street occupied by high, caste Hindoos. The latter appealed to the head assistant magistrate, and he, having on inquiry ascertained that a former collector, Mr. Bird, had forbidden any innovation of the kind as calculated to give needless offence and provoke a breach of the peace, issued an order prohibiting the funeral procession from passing through that particular street, and thus no outbreak of any kind occurred. Thirty-nine men, women, and children shot down, because a Brahminical crowd refused to permit some Christian converts to conduct the coffin and funeral procession of one of their number up the street which passed by their Pagoda! This lamentable event will create a great excitement, not only amongst the natives here, but in the minds of the public at home, and it therefore behoves us to be especially carefully not to suffer our judgment to be carried away by the unhappy result. The facts by themselves would be sufficiently damning in the tamest narrative; and we can assure our readers that our correspondent is entirely a disinterested party, and that there can be no doubt whatever of the general correctness of his statement. Of course the Brahmins have no right to arrogate to themselves the exclusive right of passage through any of the Queen's highways. We know full well the tyranny these gentry would practise if they only had the power; and we know also how they are continually exercising what little power they have in putting down not only Christian converts, but heathens like themselves only of lower caste. We feel, also, that whatever power or privileges the Brahmins may have arrogated to themselves under native Governments, it cannot be tolerated in the nineteenth century and under British sway, that any sect or caste of men whatever should arrogate to themselves the lordship of the highways of our most sovereign lady the Queen. The above account was already in type, and we were on the eve of going to press, when we received information which will serve to modify public opinion upon the subject; and we accordingly hasten at the last moment to place the heads of it before our readers, promising a fuller relation in our next issue. We learn that the Brahmins at Tinnevely had never, until the last few weeks, resisted the passage before their pagoda of the corpse of the lowest caste native; but that from some mistake in the translation of the proclamation, they had arrived at the conclusion that the Queen of England would support them in their hostility to Christianity and Christian converts. Accordingly, though their pagoda stood in the Queen's highway, they declared that it would be polluted if the body of a native convert were carried past it. Meantime, a poor Christian who came up from the country to attend as witness at the cutcherry, was attacked by cholera and died in the dispensary; and we are assured that the only way by which the body could be taken to the burial ground was along the highway, or else through a paddy field covered with water; and that the tahsildar desired the funeral party to carry the coffin through this paddy field, which the relatives of the deceased resolutely refused to do.—Spectator.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SCINDE.—Mr. Frere has left for the districts. He proceeds at once to the frontier. Who is to be the new political superintendent is not known, but that he must be a military man is without doubt necessary. We should like to see Major Merewether appointed. Knowing the Scinde horse as he does, having been for years under General Jacob, and at one time acting superintendent, he is the man best calculated to inspire confidence on the frontier. He commanded the party who cut up the last body of Booghties in their attempt to plunder in the British territories, since when there has been no further attack from the border tribes. Major Merewether is at present in England, but his leave is nearly expired, and it would not take two months to see him out. Rumour has it that he is likely to be sent for.

REINFORCEMENTS.—The ship Great Tasmania, Capt. J. Gardyne, which arrived here on the 4th January, from Mauritius, has on board 472 rank and file, 23 sergeants, 13 drummers, 47 women, 72 children, and 25 officers with their families, in charge of Colonel T. Williams, of H.M.'s Regiment of foot.

A NEW COMPANY.—We understand that several wealthy and influential Mahomedan merchants of the Khoja sect have formed themselves into a joint-stock company for the purpose of establishing a commission agency in England, with branch firms at Bombay and China. The capital of the company will be ten lakhs (10,00,000) of rupees, divided into one hundred shares of ten thousand rupees each. It is said that most of the shares have been taken up, and the company will soon commence operations.

REGISTRAR OF THE DIOCESE.—Mr. J. P. Bickersteth, solicitor, has been appointed Registrar of the Diocese, and was sworn in as such on the 27th December.

DEPUTY CORONER.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council has been pleased to approve of the appointment, by the Coroner of Bombay, of Mr. Henry Cleveland, a partner in the legal firm of Messrs. Bickersteth and Cleveland, as Deputy Coroner.

MORE PARSEES TO ENGLAND.—Professor Dadabhoi Nowrojee, late of the Elphinstone College, leaves again for England by the overland mail of Monday the 10th January, with the view of establishing a new mercantile firm there. Pestonjee Ruttonjee Colah and Jamsetjee Pallojee accompany him. Professor Dadabhoi also takes with him some young lads of the Cama family, for education in England.

ACCIDENT AT THE GRAND ARSENAL.—A slight explosion took place in the arsenal a little after twelve o'clock on the 3rd January, which proved fatal to one of the Hindoo boys employed in the preparation of detonating tubes. It appears that while the workmen were at dinner, the deceased boy was left in charge of some detonating compound, which was kept in a tent at a safe distance from the arsenal premises. It is supposed that from curiosity, he unskilfully handled some of the combustible materials, which caused an explosion, blowing away his left arm, and inflicting other mortal injuries on his body. He was forthwith sent to hospital, but died on the way. A fire-engine was on the spot within five minutes of the explosion, and the fire was put out immediately, without any further damage.

FATAL AFFRAY AT POONA.—A court of enquiry, of which Colonel G. Staunton, H.M.'s 31st Regt., is President, is now sitting at Poona, to enquire into the circumstances relating to a very shocking occurrence that took place here late on the evening of Saturday, the 1st January, which resulted in the death of a gunner of the Royal Artillery, named J. Close, and in several men of the same corps, and a non-commissioned officer of the 86th Foot, being wounded—three of the former so severely that they are considered by the medical officers to be in a precarious state; one man more especially, who is suffering from concussion of the brain. It appears that an altercation took place on the evening in question between some newly arrived recruits of the 86th regiment and some of the men of the Royal Artillery, in one of the regimental coffee-shops. A number of the recruits engaged in the quarrel ran to their barracks, and returned with their muskets, and with bayonets fixed attacked the unarmed and unresisting artillerymen, and in the madness of the onset they inflicted the injuries we have mentioned above. At the Court of Inquest held on the body of the unfortunate man whose death in this affray we have to deplore, it was ascertained that he was killed by a bayonet thrust through the body, but by whom this wound was inflicted could not then be proved. As a court is now sitting for the most searching and rigid investigation of this awful crime, we deem it right to refrain from all comment until we are in possession of the whole of the facts, further than to observe that the attack of an armed upon an unarmed party of men must, under any circumstances, be considered a cowardly act, even though it might have been supported by a lawful command, which this was not. Not the least extraordinary part of this fatal outrage is, that a non-commissioned officer of the 86th depot, who interfered to prevent further mischief, was severely wounded with a bayonet by one of his own men. Two recruits of the 86th regiment are in arrest on suspicion of being concerned in this affray; but, so far as we can learn, no evidence has as yet been found to bring home the guilt of the party who killed poor Close, who, we are informed, was one of the best conducted men of the royal artillery stationed in this place. It affords us the greatest pleasure to be enabled to state, on the highest authority, that the reports that have been circulated against some of the men of the German Legion in respect to this matter are utterly false. No man of the Legion had anything whatever to do in the affair, either directly or indirectly, and no soldiers in this garrison ever conducted themselves better, in every respect, than the men of the Legion have done from the day they arrived in Poona. The men attached to the depot of the 86th regiment have been removed from their old quarters close to the artillery to the lines at Ghorpore.—Poona Observer, Jan. 5. A Poona Correspondent, writing on the 6th, says:—"The Observer has a very mild version of the late fracas between the 86th and the artillery. The matter went so far that the latter drew out their guns, and shot them; and it was just by a chance that things were prevented coming to a crisis terrible to contemplate."

BELGAUM, 20th Dec. 1858.—Under an urgent and express order from army head quarters, the 20th regiment N. I. marched this morning en route to Dharwar, under command of Major Baynes, to replace the 28th regiment N. I. which has been ordered forthwith to Sholapore to relieve the 3rd regiment N. I. ordered on to Mhow. A wing of the 28th regiment has already left Dharwar under the command of Captain Lye. It is understood that Madras troops from Bellary and other stations will be ordered to do duty at Dharwar for some time during the emergency, and it seems requisitions have been already made to that effect by the Bombay to the Madras authorities. Captain Hallard has obtained leave to Bombay; Lieutenant Clements acts for him.—Bombay Times.

THE PUNJABEE ARMY (for such it must now be called) numbers over 70,000 men, serving in the Punjab and out of it, exclusive of a number of Punjabees serving in the military police of the North Western Provinces, and in the remaining category upwards of 10,000 additional men must be included, though the exact number cannot be known; so that the total number of all kinds under arms cannot be less than 80,000 men. Further, there are contingents of native chiefs, our allies, such as Puttiala, Jheend, Nabha, Kapoorthulla, &c. As above stated, however, the numbers borne on the rolls of the Punjab government, and more or less under the control of the Chief Commissioner, Punjab, slightly exceed 70,000. Of these about one-third are serving in Hindostan, and two-thirds in the Punjab territories, including Delhi; that is, from the Jumna to the trans-Indus frontier.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Jan. 10, 1859).—Cotton.—A considerable amount of business has been transacted in this staple during the past fortnight, in consequence of the prices having given way to the extent of a few rupees in the early part of last month. Dhollers have declined in price, owing to its inferior quality. Dharwar Sawginned and Comptah have been disposed of at high rates. Little or no change in Oomrawatty. Oil Seeds.—Rape and Linseed have been largely dealt in, at an advance in prices. Teel seed is dull, and has slightly declined; for Niger there is little inquiry.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Jan. 10, 1859)—Bleached and Fancy Goods.—Bleached jaconets have improved, and business has been transacted in them to a large extent. Bleached Madapollams continue dull; while Bleached Shirts are in very fair inquiry. Turkey Red Goods are still dull of sale. Furms.—Both descriptions of these goods, Mule and Water, are in excellent demand, and their prices have improved. In coloured yarns a moderate amount of business has been done. Metals.—These, upon the whole, have improved in business and value. Iron, Spelter, and Copper, with the exception of Nail Rod, have advanced in prices.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to confirm the grant of the decoration of the Victoria Cross to the undermentioned, which decoration has been provisionally conferred upon them by Maj. gen. Sir H. H. Rose, G.C.B., commanding the Central India Field Force, in accordance with the rules laid down in H.M.'s warrant instituting the same, on account of an act of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their several names, viz.:

8th Hussars.—Capt. (now Brev. maj.) C. W. Heeneage; No. 1,584, Serg. J. Ward; No. 1,298, Farrier G. Hollis; No. 861, Private J. Pearson.—Date of act of bravery, June 17, 1858. Selected for the Victoria Cross by their companions in the gallant charge made by a squadron of the regiment at Gwalior, on the 17th of June, 1858, when, supported by a division of the Bombay horse art. and H.M.'s 95th regt., they routed the enemy, who were advancing against Brigadier Smith's position, charged through the rebel camp into two batteries, capturing and bringing into their camp two of the enemy's guns, under a heavy and converging fire from the fort and town. (Field Force Orders by Maj. gen. Sir H. H. Rose, G.C.B., comdng. Central India Field Force, dated Camp, Gwalior, June 28, 1858.)

WAR OFFICE, Feb. 1.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officer and seaman of her Majesty's navy, who have been recommended to her Majesty for that decoration for their gallantry while serving in the Naval Brigade in India under the orders of the late Captain William Peel, K.C.B.—viz.:

Naval Brigade.—Lieut. (now Commander) Young, late gunnery officer of her Majesty's ship Shannon, and William Hall, "Captain of the foretop" of that vessel, were recommended by the late Capt. Peel for the Victoria Cross, for their gallant conduct at a 24-pounder gun, brought up to the angle of the Shah Najiff, at Lucknow, on the 16th of Nov., 1857.

The Gwalior Despatches.

Allahabad, Oct. 16th, 1858.

The rt. hon. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from the Secy. to Govt. of Bombay, Secret Depart., No. 142, dated the 31st Aug., 1858, received in this department on the 14th inst., transmitting a report from Brigdr. Smith, comdg. the brig. of Rajpootana f. f., attached to the force under Maj. gen. Sir Hugh Rose, K.C.B., of his operations before Gwalior in June last.

The Gov. gen. entirely concurs in the commendations bestowed by H. E. the C. in C., and the Govt. of Bombay, on the conduct of this gallant brigade. His lordship offers his best thanks to Brigdr. Smith, and to the officers and men under his command.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. gen.

Secy. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Dept., with the Gov. gen.

From H. L. Anderson, Esq., Secy. to Govt. Bombay, to G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., Secy. to Govt. of India, with the Gov. gen., Allahabad.

Dated Aug. 31st, 1858, Secret Depart.

Sir,—I am directed by the rt. hon. the Gov. in council to forward to you, for submission to the rt. hon. the Gov. gen. of India, copy of a letter from the Adjt. gen. of the army, No. 2,524, dated the 30th of last month, enclosing one from Brigdr. Smith, comdg. the brig. of the Rajpootana f. f. attached to the force under Maj. gen. Sir H. Rose, in the operations before Gwalior, together with copy of my reply.

2. I am also desired to forward a further communication from the Adjt. gen. No. 2,833, dated the 13th inst., submitting a list of the ordnance captured at Gwalior by Brigdr. Smith's force.

H. L. ANDERSON, Secy. to Govt. Bombay Castle, Aug. 31st, 1858.

From the Adjt. gen. of the army, to the Sec. to Govt., Secret Dept., Bombay.

Adjt. gen.'s office, hd. qrs., Poona, July 30, 1858.

Sir,—I am directed by the C. in C. to annex, for submission to the rt. hon. the Gov. in Council, a despatch received through Maj. gen. Roberts, comdg. Rajpootana f. f., from Brigdr. Smith, comdg. the brig. of that force attached to that under Maj. gen. Sir H. Rose, K.C.B., in the operations before Gwalior.

2. H. E. has perused it with much satisfaction, as evincing the gallantry and steady conduct of another brig. of European and Native troops of this Presidency, which has aided in completing our successes in Central India, by the capture and re-occupation of the important stronghold of Gwalior.

3. As Sir Hugh Rose's despatch of this action has not yet reached army hd. qrs., Sir Henry Somerset will reserve till then any further comment on the subject; but in the meantime, I am to recommend to the favourable notice of Govt. the officers honourably mentioned by Brigdr. Smith. EDWARD GREEN, Col., Adjt. gen.

From Maj. gen. H. G. Roberts, comdg. Rajpootana f. f., to the adjt. genl. of the army, Poona, camp Tonk, dated July 13, 1858.

Sir,—It is with feelings of no ordinary pleasure that I do myself the honour of submitting for H. E.'s perusal the accompanying reports relative to the operations of Brigdr. Smith before Gwalior.

2. The very effective service rendered by the troops of all arms under the brigdr., and the gallant manner in which, disdaining the want of food and rest, they have overcome all opposition, merits my warmest approbation; and this, too, under the intense heat of a sun, especially dangerous to European troops, and which, I regret to observe, has caused the death of several gallant men.

3. The charge through the enemy's camp of H.M.'s 8th hussars, on the afternoon of the 17th, when the Bannee of Jhansi was killed, is worthy of every admiration; and the manner in which, when captured, the 95th regt. turned the enemy's guns on themselves (the enemy) is in accordance with the whole of the operations of that regt., as detailed at length by Col. Raines. The practice of the h. a. appears to have been most effective.

4. The excellent behaviour of our native troops must ever be a source of sincere congratulation.

5. The charge of the 1st Lancers, as recorded by Col. Owen, would appear to be a most dashing feat of arms; and the steady conduct and discipline of the 10th regt. N.I., is fully borne witness to by the brigdr. himself, and by Col. Raines.

6. I am sure H.E. will agree with me, that Brigdr. Smith has rendered a most important service by the gallant, energetic, and clear-sighted way in which he has led his brigade to victory; and indeed I can assure H.E. that it is only what I expected from the well-known antecedents of that gallant officer.

H. G. ROBERTS, Maj. gen.,
Comdg. Rajpootana f. f.

To the Asst. adjt. gen., Rajpootana f. f.

Camp before Gwalior, June 25, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Maj. gen. Roberts, comdg. Rajpootana f. f., that on the morning of the 17th I marched, by Maj. gen. Sir Hugh Rose's order, from Antree, through the pass to Kotah-ki-Serai, which lies between three and four miles south-east of Gwalior.

I had reconnoitred the pass the evening before, and occupied the difficult points by strong pickets and posts, so that had there been any enemy I should have been prepared.

I met with no opposition, however, and reached Kotah-ki-Serai at 7½ A.M.

Upon my arrival, I saw the enemy occupying the heights in front, and between me and Gwalior.

I had orders from Sir Hugh Rose to halt at Kotah-Serai and communicate with him; but as the enemy appeared determined to attack me, and being also hampered with a large quantity of baggage, and Kotah-ki-Serai not being a secure position, I thought it best to take the initiative.

I therefore collected my baggage in and near the fort of Kotah-ki-Serai, placing it under a trp. of H.M.'s 8th hussars, and a squad. of the 1st lancers, and as strong a guard of inf. as I could afford. I reconnoitred the ground in front, and found it to be most difficult, intersected with nullahs, and impracticable for cavalry. About 1,500 yards from Kotah-ki-Serai their guns were in position, and their line ran all under the hills across the road to Gwalior.

This I ascertained by advancing with my reconnoitring party to within about 400 or 500 yds., when they opened so heavy a fire upon us, that we were obliged to retire; not, however, before I had made myself acquainted with the nature of the ground, and thus enabled myself to avoid being entangled in the nullahs above mentioned.

I advanced the h. art., and soon silenced their guns; after three or four rounds they began to retire, and I sent my inf. across the broken ground, giving the command of that branch to Lieut. col. Raines, comdg. H.M.'s 95th (the senior inf. officer present), with orders to follow up the enemy as far as he thought advisable. I have called upon Lieut. col. Raines to furnish me with a report, which I enclose, as I conceive it gives a detailed and accurate account of the proceedings of the inf. portion of the force from the time I gave him the order to advance, up to the time of occupying the heights above Gwalior.

I have only to add, that I cannot speak too highly of the steady and soldier-like conduct of both officers and men of the 10th N.I. who have given me the most prompt and ready assistance upon all occasions; and of officers and men of the 95th regt., who (though exhausted from fatigue and want of food) stormed the heights, under a burning sun and a heavy fire.

In consequence of threatening movements of the enemy, as well as the unprotected position of the baggage, I was obliged to send back (to reinforce troops already left at Kotah-ki-Serai), 1 troop of H.M.'s hussars, 1 troop horse artillery, and 2 comps. 10th N.I.

From the nature of the ground already described, I was unable for some time to bring my cav. into action, and merely retained them as support and escort to the troop of h. a. under Lieut. col. Blake; but (having advanced to the head of the pass, partially occupied the heights above the plain near the Phoolbagh, and placed inf. to guard the entrance of the defile, and protect a retreat) I thought I might venture to advance with a squad. of the 8th hussars, and the two divisions of h. a. remaining at my disposal, and 1 troop of the 1st lancers; sending back for the remaining troop of the 1st Lancers as support.

I then ordered the squad. of hussars to charge to the front, which they did most gallantly, passing right through the enemy's camp, carrying everything before them.

Upon the return of the squad., both officers and men were so completely exhausted and prostrated from heat, fatigue, and great exertion, they could scarcely sit on their saddles, and were for the moment incapable of further exertion.

This was a critical moment, as the enemy were collecting both on the front and flanks; but the 95th had arrived near the guns, and the 8th hussars, spite of their fatigue, formed to their front in line, and in order to show a greater front, I formed them in single rank. In the meantime, the remaining troop of the 1st lancers had arrived to support as second line. I then retired the cav. by alternate troops, protected by the arty.; during which movement both arms showed the greatest steadiness, and entered the ravine under the protection of the inf. posted there.

I then took up a position for the night on the heights, sending for my baggage, and placing it in tolerable security in a sort of amphitheatre formed by a portion of the hills we occupied. I guarded both ends of the defile with strong pickets of inf., in strong positions formed by the ground, and also threw out strong pickets, both cav. and inf., towards the heights on our right; the left of our position was defended against any sudden assaults by a steep bank and a canal.

Having now finished my first day's proceedings, I have only to add the names of some officers who gave me most valuable assistance. Lieut. col. Hicks, comdg. details, who was most energetic, and always in the front, both in reconnoitring and in the charge; and it was at his suggestion that I ordered the charge of the squad. of the 8th hussars through the enemy's camp, which, although venturesome, succeeded well with the enemy we had to deal with.

Capt. Sir John Hill, acting as my brig. major, who, in spite of the intense heat and great fatigue, was always at my side ready to give me assistance and carry out my instructions; also Capt. Bolton, act. qr. mr. gen. to the brig., who gave me most efficient assistance, in addition to the performance of his own peculiar duties, which, under the circumstances, were arduous and trying in the extreme.

Lieut. Williams, sub-asst. comry. gen., attached to the brig., who was always most active, energetic, and indefatigable in the discharge of his duties; but on this occasion, when the obtaining of any supplies were most difficult, in fact next to impossible, he never spared himself in endeavouring to overcome difficulties. Capt. M'Mullin, 23rd B. N.I., who volunteered to act as my a. de c., and gave me most valuable and efficient assistance. Cornet Goldsworthy, H.M.'s 8th hussars, who also acted as my a. de c., carried my orders under a burning sun, and over very difficult ground, and once, at a most critical moment, viz., when I required cav. support upon the return of the squad. of H.M.'s 8th hussars from their charge.

M. W. SMITH, Brigdr.,
Comdg. Brig. R.F.F.

From Lieut. col. Raines, H.M.'s 95th regt., to Brigdr. Smith, Comdg. the Column.

On the assault on the enemy's entrenched position before Kotah-ki-Serai, and subsequent capture of the heights in rear, near Gwalior.

Camp before Gwalior, June 18, 1858.

Sir,—Agreeably to your order, received about eight o'clock A.M., on the banks of the stream near Kotah-ki-Serai, I proceeded with two cos. of the 95th regt., in skirmishing order, to attack the rebel entrenchments, with supports, and the 10th N.I., echelon, as a reserve. On nearing their breastwork, they opened a brisk fire of musketry on both corps along the line, accompanied with round shot and shell as fast as they could load their guns; seeing our approach, many of them commenced to retire from their left, when the skirmishers from the 95th opened fire on them.

When within fifty yards of their works, I ordered the skirmishers to advance at the double and charge, and on reaching their works, I discovered their inf. retiring up the ravines, towards the left and right, and taking away the guns to our left.

Here we were stopped by a deep ditch with four feet of water, and the banks were so steep, that it was with difficulty that the men got over in single file, and by the time that the skirmishers had ascended the opposite bank, the entrenchment was completely abandoned, but we still found a small body, evidently their rear, extended, firing and retiring through the ravines and up the hills in disorder. The skirmishers with the greatest eagerness pushed on and succeeded in shooting several of them.

On gaining the heights in rear of the encampment, during which time a company of the 95th had swept round the base of the hill to the left, I observed that the enemy had guns about 800 or 1,000 yards in front, on another hill about the same height, with inf. and a large portion of cav. I sounded the halt and assembly, on which a fire of shrapnell was opened on the men. I then noticed on my immediate right, about 500 yards off, and which I afterwards ascertained was the road to Gwalior, about 100 of the Gwalior contgt. cav., protected from our fire by a high embankment, and as I anticipated that they would endeavour to turn my right flank by a charge, and thus cut me off from my reserve, I ordered the retire on the entrenchments, opening at the same time on them a sharp fire from the Enfields, and having our rear covered by a company of the 10th regt. in skirmishing order.

On reaching the entrenchment, I found that Maj. Vials, who commanded the reserve, was attacking the Gwalior contgt. cav. above alluded to, with two comps. of the 95th, keeping them in check, and preventing them from advancing down the road, where they had brought a couple of 9-pr. guns to bear on us. In the meantime, another gun of heavy metal, judging from the distance of the range, twelve hundred yards, was brought into position on a high hill to our extreme left front, when immediately afterwards two guns of the Bombay art. were placed to silence the fire, which considerably annoyed us.

Soon after this I received your orders to proceed up the road, with the 10th in reserve, and on our advancing the Gwalior contgt. cav., as well as the guns, retired. After advancing along the road for about a mile (with a deep nullah and a high embankment on our left, and the two cos. in skirmishing order in front, and covering the ridges to our right), and until the skirmishers had entered on the plain of the Phoolbagh, large bodies of the enemy's cav. were observed as if preparing for a charge, and in such force as to imperil the safety of the skirmishers. However, after being halted for an hour, I ordered the support up a hill, on cresting which I observed the Gwalior cav., in their red uniforms, slowly advancing in skirmishing order up a broad ravine to our right, and about 200 hundred yards in front of us. I immediately caused file firing in line to be opened on them, and on discovering our position they instantly retired with the utmost precipitation, when you, sir, directed the splendid charge of the 8th Hussars in pursuit. I immediately proceeded to support, and followed them to within a quarter of a mile of the cantonments, when by your orders I halted. A portion of the 10th N.I., during the advance, supported the 95th, and a co. from each corps was left to guard the narrow passes as we advanced.

During the halt, and whilst the cav. were engaged in sweeping through the cantonments, the enemy brought two guns into position on our left, one on our right, and two from the fort, opened fire on the 95th and a division of the h. a., immediately and close to us.

Having remained here for about half an hour, you directed us to retire, and take up a position on the heights in front of Gwalior for the night. We reached them about seven P.M.

I have the greatest pleasure in bearing witness to the extreme endurance (especially of the 95th) and gallant conduct of both corps. They had been out the whole day, without a meal, under a burning sun, and had marched at two A.M. that morning from the previous encampment-ground, a distance of ten miles; and although the list of casualties in my regiment actually occurring from the enemy's fire presents a small proportion of one man killed, and one officer and four men wounded, I regret to say that eighty-four cases of coup-de-soleil occurred, one of which proved fatal on that day, exclusive of five officers dangerously, but not fatally, attacked.

In conclusion, I beg respectfully to bring to your notice the valuable assistance I received from Maj. Vials, Maj. Massey, and Lieut. and adjt. Sexton, who acted as my staff officer during the day; also from Lieut. Crealock, who so ably headed his company, and assisted in the reconnaissance previous to the attack; and from Capt. Pelly, comdg. the 10th, who, with his men, greatly contributed and assisted towards our success in the action.

J. A. R. RAINES, lieut. col. 95th regt.,
Comdg. the inf.

From Lieut. col. Owen, com. 1st L.C., Lancers, to Capt. Sir John Hill, Bart., major of brig., Brig. Smith's column.

Camp before Gwalior, 22nd June, 1858.

Sir,—In compliance with the wishes of the brigdr., personally communicated to me by you, I proceed to report the part taken by the regt. under my command in the operations of the 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th of June. The heights having been carried by the combined exertions of the brig. after its morning's march on the 17th, and against every disadvantage of heat, and the strongly-fortified positions of the enemy, that most trying day's proceedings closed with a charge on the plain before Gwalior, made by a squadron of H.M.'s 8th hussars, with some guns, supported by a squad. of the 1st lancers. This sudden dash of a small body of our cav. (and I understand the Ranees of Jhansi fell on this occasion) in front of numerous batteries, and in the face of a considerable force of their cav., could not have failed to carry a terrible lesson and panic to the enemy. After this daring exploit, the rapidity of which saved us from a severe loss, the whole retired to their positions on the heights; the 1st lancers to a distant point to be employed throughout the night as a picket. During the earlier operations of the day, I had the misfortune to lose the valuable services of Capt. Anderson, whilst in command of a detached squad. he was wounded in the left arm by a musket-ball. On the 18th, the regt. furnished several parties for reconnoitring and other duties, throughout the whole of which they were exposed to a heavy fire, kept up by the enemy from their batteries and skirmishers; several horses were also killed and wounded by round shot, which were fired into the position occupied by the corps. During the evening the regt. paraded for action with the enemy, and were much exposed to their fire. On the 19th, the 1st lancers and a portion of H.M.'s 8th hussars were engaged in protecting art. in front of the enemy's batteries, at the higher and lower fortifications of Gwalior; subsequently the lancers received a sudden and emergent order to ascend the heights to protect the infantry column serving the enemy's captured guns against their entrenched camp. At a later period they were directed to quit the heights and watch the road on the opposite side, leading into the enemy's camp and force; and while in that position their services were required to carry some 18-pdr. guns and mortars which were being fired upon our troops on the hills above. This service was speedily and well executed by Lieut. Heath, with his squad, accompanied by myself, nobly and closely followed by his men. The enemy's horsemen, who had been seen near the guns, escaped among the trees and buildings, which offered every facility for their doing so. While Lieut. Heath's squad. dashed round the hill, Lieut. col. Raines, with a portion of H.M.'s 95th, rushed down it, when the enemy's camp and entrance to the suburbs of Gwalior were thus carried. On this occasion, two 18-pdr. guns, some mortars, ammunition carts, store and magazine, fell into the hands of the British troops. I now come to the last scene of conflict, in which my regt. performed a conspicuous, and from the results, I may add, a very important part. Lieut. Heath's advance was supported by Capt. Loch, with the second squad., and when arrived on the spot where the guns had been captured, a large body of the enemy's inf. were seen in full retreat to the right; they were pursued by Capt. Loch's squad., which I then joined, followed by Lieut. Heath's squad., which became in its turn a support. There fell a fine, promising young soldier, Cornet Mills, shot through the lungs by one of the enemy, who was instantly cut down by Capt. Loch. Fearful, from the excellent bearing of all ranks, their faithful support of their officers, and the excitement increased by the cheers which they readily took up from the British inf. around, that my regiment might become involved in a street action against countless masses of the enemy, occupying the house-tops, &c., I hastened to recall them from the pursuit, and in this I happily succeeded; and having personally reported to the maj. gen., who appeared on the ground, what had occurred, he instantly advanced into the suburbs with H.M.'s 95th regt., and I believe, ere sunset, the British army under his command had carried everything but the fort of Gwalior, the enemy rapidly evacuating the town and suburbs. I cannot close this report without expressing to the brigdr. how nobly supported I have been by all ranks of the regt. I have the honour to command. It is because the regt. is my own that I fear to say more in its favour.

C. OWEN, Lieut. col.,
Comdg. 1st By. lancers.

From Lieut. F. Roome, 10th Reg. N.I., to the Adjt. 10th Reg. N.I. Camp Jurkowie, near Gwalior, 22nd June, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to request that you will forward to Brigdr. Smith, through the officer comdg. the regt., the accompanying report of the part taken by the 10th regt. N.I. in the action of the 19th inst.

On account of the indisposition of Capt. Pelly, and in accordance with his orders, I assumed command of the regt., and between two and three P.M. led it to the position pointed out to me, viz. the crest of the hill to the left of those hay-stacks which had that morning been set on fire by the enemy. I found that the fighting had already commenced, and that H.M.'s 86th regt. had taken possession of the enemy's batteries on this point. I remained here a short time, but finding that the men of the 10th were exposed to a heavy fire of grape and bullets, without being able to return it (on account of the short range of their muskets), I left a portion of them as a support to the guns, and advancing with the remainder, in skirmishing order, cleared the two nearest heights of the enemy. At the foot of the second hill we discovered a plain, on which were two brass field pieces and three mortars; these we took with a rush, and having spiked as many as we could, we turned our attention to an arsenal on our right, from which the enemy poured in a galling fire. We cleared them out of this, and then occupied a trench at the bottom of the hill, from which we kept up a heavy fire till there was a general advance of the force, when we skirmished through the lines on the opposite side of the plain. In doing this we killed many of the enemy, and those who escaped us were eventually cut up by the first By. lancers. Here all opposition ceased, and nothing remained to be done but to place guards on the different arsenals and magazines we had taken. I am happy to say our casualties were very few, and have only to add, that the behaviour of the officers and men under my command was beyond all praise.

F. ROOME, Lieut. 10th regt. By. N.I.

From Lieut. col. Raines, who commanded H.M.'s 95th regt. and 10th N.I., attached to Brigdr. Smith's column, on the 19th June, 1858, to Brigdr. Smith.

Camp, Gwalior, 23rd June, 1858.

Sir,—On receiving your order, soon after noon on the 19th, I proceeded with three cos. of my regt. to line the high bank on the road to Gwalior, on the left of our encampment; on reaching which I opened fire on the enemy's skirmishers in the plain and on the sides of the hill, but who were not in great numbers; seeing that we were in position they gradually retired, and fired the guns and jinnalls from the entrenchments, firing canister in our direction.

After remaining here for about three-quarters of an hour, the maj. gen. came up and ordered me to advance in support of the skirmishers of H.M.'s 80th regt., and in rear of their right, which I did, until we crested the opposite hill and found them in possession of the enemy's entrenchment, having captured three brass guns.

Finding that I was senior officer present, I took the command, and desired the tumbrils to be removed to the rear, in order to turn their guns upon their cav., which I saw in detached bodies, with some inf. and guns, in the plain below, at a distance of 1,000 yards. With much difficulty (as they appeared in confusion about the tumbrils) the bullocks were removed, and the three tumbrils wheeled up the hill by the men of the 86th and 95th regts. One gun was pointed down the entrenchments, whilst another was immediately after turned in the direction of some columns to our left. Lieut. Brockman, with some men of the 86th, I desired to serve one of the 9-pr. guns, whilst Lieut. Budgen and Lieut. and Adj. Sexton I directed to superintend the practice of the two other guns, which I manned with some men of the 95th who had been instructed in the gun exercise. It is with great pleasure that I beg to state that the practice made by these guns was excellent, as every officer on the spot could testify, and though sometimes short, the ricochet often lodged the shot amongst the enemy, who soon after opened a hot fire, from guns of various calibre, of round shot and shell, from three different points.

After remaining here for about half an hour, the remainder of the 95th joined me as a support under Maj. Vials, who reported his arrival. As I observed a body of the enemy, apparently in force, occupying some houses amongst the trees, firing on the skirmishers of the 86th, who were advancing in that direction, I desired Capt. Smith's co., 95th regt., to proceed in support. Capt. Smith then became detached, and was under the command of Col. Lowth.

On a spur running down parallel to the entrenchments, some forty or fifty of the rebels were placed under cover in different spots, and firing at our men whilst they were serving the guns exposed in the open. Further to our left, I observed a party of the 95th advancing from the spur; and immediately ordered another co. of the regt. across the valley to support them. The 10th N.I. here joined me under command of Lieut. Roome, and a portion of these I also pushed on, leaving a co. of the 95th, and the gunners before alluded to, to keep up the practice with the captured guns. This spur was occupied, and the 10th N.I. were ordered in advance to line what appeared to be a small ditch and parapet running round the base of the hill; about thirty yards in front of it, a small howitzer and brass mortar, abandoned by the enemy, were found by the 10th N.I. Lieut. Roome, by my desire, advanced and disabled the gun by knocking off one of the wheels. Farther on, at a distance of about a hundred yards, were two heavy brass guns (18-pdrs.), and immediately in vicinity of them I perceived a number of the enemy's cav., who I believed were posted there for the purpose of making a dash at us, in the event of our attempting to capture them. I therefore deemed it prudent to halt, and await orders and reinforcements; having two cos. of the 95th on the crest of the hill in skirmishing order, and laying down, a co. of the 86th, and the remainder of the 10th, fifty yds. in rear, as a support.

During this time the enemy took courage to come out and load these guns with grape and canister, on finding which I detached some men with their Enfield rifles to keep them in check, and the fire from our men was so sharp that after firing about eight shots, the enemy retired behind the building.

Lieut. Knatchbull, and seven or eight men of No. 1 co. of the 95th, went out by order, and dragged the small howtzr. before alluded to and tumbril, up the hill to the end of the spur, and opened fire with it on the enemy posted behind the before-mentioned building.

I observed that the 25th had moved down and occupied a position to our left. Soon after this the maj. gen. arrived. I reported myself to him as being in com.; he then directed me to proceed with a co. of the 95th and another to support, to capture the two heavy guns which were in position in the open, covering my advance with a gun which he had brought with him. I did so, but as we went on, a troop of the 1st lancers passed by our men at the gallop, and I headed them at the charge with an officer whose name I do not know, towards the guns, which we at once captured. I then proceeded, acting under the orders of the maj. gen., towards the Mahrajah's palace, where, after leaving a guard of the 95th and 10th N.I., I returned to camp at eight p.m., with four cos., the remainder being on picket duty in the town.

I beg to bring to prominent notice Lieut. Brockman and the men of the 86th regt., as well as Lieut. Budgen, Lieut. and Adj. Sexton, and the gunners of the 95th, especially Privates P. Murphy, Loix, Dempsey and Colville, who so ably and with such effect served the guns which were turned upon the enemy; and both corps seemed to vie with each other in firing quickly, and with proper effect. I regret to say that Lieut. and Adj. Sexton, and Corporal Joseph Hunt, were severely burnt by the accidental explosion of some loose powder whilst serving the guns.

I also beg to mention Lieut. Knatchbull and the several men of his company, who removed the howtzr., and turned it on the enemy.

To Maj. Vials, who commanded the 95th, and Lieut. Roome, in temporary command of the 10th N.I., my best thanks are due for their valuable assistance; nor can I omit the name of Dr. Clarke, 95th, whose care and attention to the sick and wounded was unceasing, and who accompanied the regt. throughout the action, though he had barely recovered from a severe attack of sunstroke, received two days before.

The casualties of the day are small, and present two officers wounded and one man killed, and seven wounded of the 95th, and six men of the 10th wounded.

Capture of Birwah.

Allahabad, 12th Nov., 1858.

In publishing the following despatch from Brigdr. Barker, c.b., comdg. troops, Sundeela, dated 24th Oct., 1858, reporting the assault and capture of the fort of Birwah, on the 21st ult., the right hon. the Gov. Gen. notifies his high approval of the conduct of Brigdr. Barker, and his sense of the conspicuous bravery of all concerned in the attack:—

To Maj. gen. Sir William Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff.

Camp Sundeela, 24th Oct., 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that on the 31st inst. I attacked the fort of "Birwah," with the force as detailed below,* and took it by assault after eight hours' firing. Having reconnoitred the fort the previous day I selected the west front for my principal attack, where the outer defences appeared the weakest, and where I knew the fort itself had but one line of works; a few hundred yards from this side there was also a village upon a mound, which was said by the natives and by Bahrut Sing, a friendly zemindar, to command the interior of the fort, which they declared to be visible from it (this, however, I found was not the case). The village was entrenched and occupied by the enemy; and my first object, therefore, was to drive them from it, having previously sent the cav. round to the north, on which side the jungle was very extensive, to prevent escape in that direction. I commenced by placing Capt. Dowell's guns in a position to enfilade the entrenchments, and fire in rear of the villages. It was immediately abandoned; the rifles pushed through with the police inf. on their left, and passing a tope of large trees, came upon the edge of the dense thorny jungle, which nearly surrounds the fort; the 88th, in the meantime, threatening the south-west angle of the outer works, drove the enemy from a part of them, and their guns in these lines were withdrawn.

My chief difficulty now was to ascertain the nature and exact position of the principal works, so completely was the fort concealed by the jungle, which was almost impenetrable. Capt. Pearson's guns were brought into action on the right of the village, upon that portion of the outer defences where the enemy was visible on this side. The mortars were placed close to the village, and in the tope of mangoe trees, whence a continued fire was kept up on the place, but, owing to the impossibility of seeing the object, I fear their fire was somewhat ineffectual.

An 18-pdr. and an 8-inch howtzr. were brought down to the edge of the jungle, and opened at a distance of 100 yards upon the wall of the fort (a very small portion of one embrasure, whence a gun was occasionally fired, being visible through the jungle). They very soon cleared away the intervening trees and exposed the south-west bastion, which I then determined to breach, knowing that it would give immediate access to the body of the place, the only other accessible sides having double lines of defence. The enemy still kept up a fire from a portion of the outer works, and I therefore directed a party of rifles under Lieut. Percival, and police inf. under Capt. Dawson, to move along the ditch on the west side where it was inconsiderable, and mounting the breastwork to clear it of the enemy. This was easily effected, and the enemy rapidly driven before them, escaping through paths in the jungle, and abandoning the outer works (which were completely turned by this movement) they retired to the inner fort; the 88th, passing to the right, entered the outer works, by the main gate on the east, and now communicated with us on the south side. We found the outer defences on the east and south of great strength, the ditch being newly cut, about twenty feet deep, and with nearly perpendicular sides.

By this time the breach was rapidly improving, and I therefore made my dispositions for the assault of the body of the place.

The 88th were ordered to enter by the main gate on the east; here I knew there was a double line of works, but I imagined that when the assault at the breach on the opposite side took place, these would be abandoned. Lieut. Carnegie, Ben. engrs., was to blow open the gates. Capt. Dawson, with 200 po. inf., was to make his way round the north-west angle, through the jungle, to a gate on the north side, by which the enemy would endeavour to escape; this also was to be blown open, if necessary, and Serg. Charlton, royal art., accompanied the party for this purpose.

The breach was to be stormed by a party of the rifle brig., under Capt. Alexander, and 100 po. inf., the remainder of each regt. being held in reserve. Maj. Goodenough, royal art., acting as my brig. maj., personally ascertained that it was possible to ascend the breach, with the assistance of ladders, which would also be required to get into the ditch (this, upon subsequent measurement, was found to be nearly forty feet wide and thirty feet deep, having three or four feet of mud and water at the bottom). The po. inf. were to carry the ladders through the jungle and place them in the ditch, while 100 of the rifles kept down the enemy's fire from the loop-holes, &c.; the signals for the general attack was to be the cheers of the storming party at the breach. The arrangements of each attacking party were admirably made by their respective comdg. officers, and the attacks were simultaneous; no loss was sustained in ascending the breach, although most difficult to get up. Ens. Richards, rifle brig., was the first man at the top, closely followed by Maj. Goodenough, R.A., and Colour Serg. Maloney, of the rifle brig.; the enemy attempting to escape by the north gate were met by Capt. Dawson and his po. inf., and driven back; at the same time the 88th, under Maj. Maynard, entered by the main gate on the east in the most gallant style, the enemy receiving them with a round of grape as they advanced; the gate was blown to atoms by Lieut. Carnegie, B.E., who, I regret to say, was severely burnt in the attempt, owing to the fuze burning slowly, and his advancing a second time to ascertain the cause. The second gate (as I expected) was entered without opposition. The place was now in our possession, and with comparatively little loss; the enemy concealed themselves in the various buildings inside, and the principal number, with Gholab Sing, had retired to a house in the centre from which a sharp fire was kept up from the loop-holes and windows. This fire, I am sorry to say, caused us many casualties. Capt. Dawson, in a most gallant attempt to get inside, received a severe sabre cut on the right arm. It was now getting dusk, and feeling that my loss had already been very heavy, I determined to blow up what part of the house I could, and let the rest burn, for it was already on fire, as were most of the other buildings. Capt. Dowell, Ben. A., and Maj. Goodenough, R.A. (this officer, although severely wounded in the right hand, continued to render me most valuable assistance) succeeded in blowing down one side of the house, and exposed the court-yard, but the house was found to consist of a number of small rooms, and as considerable loss would probably have been incurred in forcing an entrance, I determined upon waiting for the fire to do its work, leaving strong parties to guard the doors, &c., by which the enemy could escape. From some prisoners taken, we learnt that Gholab Sing and about fifty men had retired to this house upon the assault taking place; and their retreat being cut off by the north, many of these had been shot down, burnt, or buried in the ruins by the explosion, but still a few remained, who continued to fire upon any man exposing himself; the house was, however, well on fire, and I thought it impossible that any could escape. I left the 88th regt. and the police inf. in the fort, to hold the place and dispose of the rest of the enemy when daylight should appear, and returned to camp with the remainder of the force and wounded. It was then past midnight.

* 3 D. G., 170 sabres; Rifle art., 1 18-pdr., 1 8-in. howtzr., 2 8-in. mortars, 2 5½-in. mortars; Ben. art., 8 field guns; 88th regt. 300 men; 8rd B. B. 300 men. On de Police—cav. 300 sabres; inf. 550 men. Punjab Pioneers—20 men.

We learnt that, on our approach in the morning, the fort was occupied by 700 men, but that during the day the greater number of them had got away into the jungle, Gholab Sing's own men alone remaining. They offered a most determined resistance, and the strength of the place enabled them to inflict great loss. I am sorry to say that Gholab Sing himself, and about ten men, who were shut up in the centre building when I left after midnight, effected their escape during the night, by making a sudden rush to one of the bastions, and scrambling into the ditch, whence they knew a path to the jungle. It is said Gholab Sing was wounded, and eventually got off with only three followers.

I most sincerely deplore the heavy losses the force has sustained, but I imagine a fort of such strength has seldom been taken in so short a time. Had the assault, however, been delayed, the enemy would certainly have escaped; and although our loss immediately after the final assault was comparatively inconsiderable, the failure of daylight favoured the enemy, and any attempt at forcing an entrance into the rooms after dark would have, doubtless, still further increased our casualties. Eight guns were captured in the place, and the loss of the enemy is estimated at from 200 to 450. The fort itself is now being destroyed under the superintendence of Lieut. Tracy, R.A.

I beg to bring to the notice of the C. in C., the names of the several officers, whom I have to thank for their gallant and valuable assistance. Maj. Maynard, comdg. 88th regt., made all his arrangements in a most perfect manner, and greatly contributed to our success; this officer speaks in the highest terms of Maj. Mauleverer of the same regt., who distinguished himself by the cool and fearless manner in which he behaved. Maj. Oxenden, comdg. Rifle Brig., deserves the greatest credit for the manner in which he handled his men, and disposed them for the assault of the breach. Maj. Seymour, 2nd Drag. Gds., comdg. the cav., made excellent arrangements for preventing the escape of the enemy, and the denseness of the jungle and the failure of daylight, after which I withdrew them alone prevented the cavalry from taking a more active part in the operations. Maj. Pearson and Capt. Dowell, comdg. the field batteries, afforded me every assistance, and the latter was most useful in blowing up the house in the interior which the rebels occupied. Maj. Goodenough, R.A., proved himself in every way a most excellent officer, and distinguished himself by his gallantry throughout the day, particularly at the assault of the breach. I regret to say he was wounded soon after this took place. Capt. Campbell, R.A., actg. as dep. asst. q. r. m. gen., conspicuous for his energy, exerted himself to the utmost and rendered me every possible assistance. To Capt. Boileau, div. comdnt. Oude police, I am very much indebted for the valuable assistance he afforded me on all occasions. Capt. Dawson, comdg. div. police inf., as usual displayed the greatest courage and discretion in the management of his men. I felt much the loss of his assistance when he received his wound, which I trust, however, will not eventually incapacitate him for duty, nor long deprive the country of his services. Capt. Alexander, Rifle Brig., comdg. the storming party, deserves the greatest credit, and Lieut. Cragg and Ens. Richards, who accompanied him, displayed the greatest courage; the latter, as I have stated, was first at the top of the breach, but I regret to say, was shortly afterwards severely wounded. Lieut. Carnegie, B.E., a most gallant and intelligent officer, whom I have already mentioned as having been severely burnt, rendered every possible assistance, and displayed the greatest courage. Lieut. Graham, comdg. the Oude po. cav., rendered valuable aid to that part of the force. Lieuts. Brown and Tracy, royal art., comdg. respectively the breaching batteries and mortars, the former of whom was slightly wounded, deserve the greatest praise for their conduct. The names of the following officers, in addition to those I have already spoken of, have been mentioned as particularly deserving praise:—Lieuts. Waring, Burke and Moore, and Asst. Surg. Knipe, 88th regt.; and Maj. Seymour speaks in high terms of the assistance he received from Capt. Stapylton and Carnegie, squad. leaders; and Lieut. and Adj. Calvert, 2nd drag. gds.; and particularly of Lieut. Graham, comdg. po. cav. Surg. Cape, Oude po.; Asst. surg. Roebottom, 2nd drag. gds.; Asst. surg. Storey, rifle brig.; and Asst. surg. Bird, Ben. art.; deserve the greatest praise for their attention to the wounded during the nights.

The peculiar nature of the engagement afforded many opportunities for the display of individual courage. Serg. Charlton, 6th co. 11th batt. royal art., who accompanied Capt. Dawson's party to the north gate, particularly distinguished himself by his coolness and courage, and he is most highly spoken of by that officer. The names of the men mentioned below* have been brought to my notice by their respective comdg. officers, as having particularly distinguished themselves, and many instances came under my own observation. I am sorry that several of these names should also appear among the wounded.

The conduct of the whole force was admirable. I must not omit to state how much I am indebted to Mr. Kavanagh, asst. comr., for his assistance. Though last mentioned, his services are far from being the least important; his knowledge of the country, his energy and constant activity in procuring intelligence, render his services of the greatest value; his well known courage places him ever among the foremost in danger, and he rendered me the greatest aid throughout the engagement. I have derived the greatest benefit from Mr. Kavanagh's assistance since assuming the command here, and it is at all times most freely given.

POLICE IN JAPAN.—The police are everywhere and a person cannot move without having one of them near him. When the French landed, it was at a place fixed on beforehand, and police agents were there ready to escort them to the house where the ambassador was to take up his residence, and whenever the party left the house to see the shops, the police agents kept by their side and cried out to the shopkeepers to hide certain kinds of merchandise, particularly books and maps relative to the country. Before Baron Gros landed he sent on shore his sedan chair and his French liveries, in which the men who were to carry him were to be dressed, and he proceeded in that way from the waterside to his house; the moment, however, that the Government were informed of it they considered it an encroachment on their authority, and about six hundred officials of different ranks were arrested, and punished with fines or bastinado, for having suffered such an enormity. The police stand in great dread of punishment, for whenever they were asked to do anything which they thought contrary to their duty, they showed great alarm, and made a sign by putting their hands to their throats, as much as to say that their heads would be in danger if they were to comply. To such an extent is the spy system carried, that whenever any one is appointed to any particular mission, a second person is ordered to watch all his motions, and give notice of what he does. When the functions of this spy are openly avowed, no notice is to be taken, but when they are secret, and relate to any high functionary, the person filling the post is obliged to use great circumspection, or he would very soon have a stone tied round his neck and be thrown into the sea. In that case the Government would make no stir, and would not hesitate, in case of need, to deny their agent.

SACREDNESS OF GROVES.—To the Hindoo of Oude a grove is sacred. The small dispossessed proprietor, whose ancestors planted it, points to it as a proof of his right of ownership in the soil; and the exiled agriculturist, flying from the rapacity of the King's troops, cherished in his jungles a hope of return to his sacred trees. The Brahmin chronicler of the village will tell his listeners of legends attached to almost all these groves; how the gods and demigods warred and loved under their shadows, and how, perhaps, some particular banian or peepul, venerable from its antiquity, was under the peculiar protection of some powerful divinity, who on more than one occasion resented the violence committed upon it, and punished with a dreadful vengeance the oppressor of its pious guardian. No wonder, then, that the domestic feelings of the home-loving native are aroused, and that these groves become ties which bind him to the birthplace of his ancestors, in spite of every species of atrocity perpetrated on himself and his family, and in the face of the outrages committed upon his home.

—Oude: its Past and its Future.

JAPANESE UTILITARIANISM.—A story is told by either Siebold or Kämpfer, that on one occasion the Governor-general of Batavia sent a cassowary to the Emperor through the factory of Nagasaki. It was returned, after some months' trial, with a message that it was "a big ugly bird that ate a great deal and did no work, and that nothing so useless could be tolerated in Japan."—Blackwood's Magazine.

THE MISSING DESPATCHES.

UPWARDS of six months have elapsed since the recovery of Gwalior by the troops under the command of Sir Hugh Rose, and yet to this hour no official account has been published of that brief campaign. Nor is this a solitary instance of suppression of despatches, for we cannot imagine that Sir Hugh would be guilty of such a grave dereliction of duty as to omit to forward any. That, indeed, would constitute a most serious offence, and one that would sadly tarnish the brilliant reputation he so rapidly achieved. It would, besides, be an act of gross injustice to the officers serving under him, whose excellent conduct would thereby be deprived of its merited rewards and commendation. The partial reports sent in to Government by Brigadier Roberts clearly testify to the dashing valour and soldierly bearing of all who were engaged in the operations that resulted in the recovery of Gwalior from the rebels, and the restoration of the Maharajah to his throne and capital. It was not, then, from any weak desire to spread a veil over the shortcomings of either officers or privates, that these despatches have been withheld. If they have been duly received by Government, why have they not appeared in the Gazette? or, if they have not been received, why is it that a public rebuke has not been administered to the defaulting general? The fame of our soldiers is public property, and claims the jealous and watchful protection of the Press. We demand, therefore, in the name of the brave men who toiled and fought in defence of a fugitive ally that their exploits be made known to the world through the usual official channels. It is obvious that a grievous wrong has been done in one quarter or another, which it shall be our business to discover and expose without fear or reservation.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

In our last issue we mentioned as a singular circumstance that only thirty-seven candidates presented themselves to compete for fifty-one appointments to the India Medical Establishment. At first sight one might naturally have expected that a crowd of competitors would have come forward to contest that once-coveted prize. How comes it, then, that so few are now found willing to accept a profession so lately an object of ambition? It certainly does not arise from improved prospects at home, or from any abstract reluctance to proceed to the East. Why, then, we again ask, have assistant-surgeons in India fallen into such disrepute that a sufficient number of young men can no longer be obtained to fill the vacancies that arise? The answer is easy and obvious. Medical officers in the Royal army have been placed by the recent Warrant in a far more favourable position than their brethren in the sister service. An assistant-surgeon after serving six years is entitled to rank as a captain, and in ten years he becomes a regimental or staff surgeon, with the rank and pay of a major: his subsequent promotion being equally certain and satisfactory. Into the Indian army, however, no such improvements have been introduced. A medical officer on that establishment may continue in the same grade a dozen years and more, with the certainty of being superseded by much younger men in the Queen's army whenever they come in contact. In other words, while a medical officer in the Indian army after fourteen years' service is still an assistant-surgeon with the rank and pay of a lieutenant, in the Royal army he would enjoy the position of a major with many incidental advantages in the shape of batta and prize-money. Such an anomaly as this cannot possibly be permitted to continue. Its existence, even for a brief space, is both an injustice and an insult to the medical service of the Indian branch of the imperial army, and can only be productive of jealousy and discontent. But we cannot imagine that it is necessary to do more than mention the circumstance to hear of the immediate application of a remedy. The provisions of the recent Warrant must at once be extended to the Indian establishment, and it is incumbent on those members of the Council of India, who formerly belonged to the Direction, to see that this act of justice be promptly rendered to their late servants, who have deserved so well at their hands.

ACCELERATED COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

THERE is certainly little danger at the present day of a revival of the superstitious feeling of the ancients with regard to the sanctity and inviolability of the works of nature. No fears of "howling spectres" or of "springs of blood" are likely to deter our engineers from undertaking to cut through Mount Sinai itself, if it stood in the way of a railway. In fact, the impracticability, or, at least, the extreme boldness, of a project is looked upon as a strong point in its favour, and men eagerly believe whatever surpasses their understanding or taxes their credulity. The tunnel under the Thames, and that other unnecessary one through Box-hill, the original and the tubular bridges across the Menai Straits, the telegraphic cable beneath the Atlantic, and so many other triumphs of engineering skill and perseverance, have accustomed the public to marvels worthy of the Genii of Eastern fable, and have led them to expect some new wonder in every scheme that is submitted for their consideration and support. So far has this mania, this craving for impossibilities, been carried, that we are really surprised no enterprising speculator should have proposed to sink a shaft from London to Melbourne, if only to connect the mother country with her antipodean colonies by a direct line of communication. It appears as a matter of course that various plans should be afloat for the purpose of bringing us nearer, as it were, to our Indian possessions, and people are disposed to complain of the route through Egypt and down the Red Sea as too easy and commonplace. Nothing will now suffice but a railway from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates with steam navigation down "that great river," preparatory to the construction of a railroad to the Persian Gulf. The feasibility of such an undertaking we do not for a moment dispute, nor do we question its great utility to England when completed. At the same time, we cannot close our eyes to the grave objections that present themselves on the very threshold. Admitting that no serious obstructions need be apprehended on the part of the Arab tribes while peace prevails, we may fairly ask what sort of protection will be afforded to passengers or goods in the event of intestine commotions? The guarantee of the Ottoman empire is not of a nature to satisfy any dispassionate man, nor can we recognise the expediency of employing British capital and industry for the improvement of Turkey while our own Indian empire is in such urgent want of both those aids to prosperity. "Charity," says the old proverb, begins at home," and it seems to us that it would be far more patriotic—and undoubtedly quite as safe and remunerative—to embark the superfluous capital of this country in developing the resources of Hindostan, than to stir heaven and earth in order to carry out a premature undertaking along the skirts of Mesopotamia. The multiplicity of projects must naturally prove injurious to the efficiency of all. The capital that might be ample for the construction of trunk lines throughout the Indian peninsula will fail to produce any great results if frittered away into a dozen devious channels. What is really wanted is not so much a rapid communication with India,—although decidedly desirable,—as the consolidation of our power in that distant dependency. This contingency is far more likely to be brought about by means of good roads, navigable rivers, and trunk lines of railway within that empire, than by the most splendid Titanic works in Asia Minor, Syria, and Beloochistan. The latter are not, indeed, to be decried or spoken of lightly, but the former are essential and altogether indispensable. Let the energies of this country, then, be first of all concentrated on the task of rendering India rich, prosperous, and happy, and it will then be time to arrange a more frequent and rapid communication.

THE OPIUM TRADE.

THE legalisation of the opium trade has deprived the detractors of the East-India Company, and ultra-moralists in general, of a cry as popular as it was ill founded. Radical journalists and noisy demagogues have loved to declaim on the wickedness of forcing upon the helpless Chinese a most pernicious drug, with the sole view of increasing the revenues of India. The Indian Government, it was said, not only connived at, but actually engaged in, a smuggling trade with unblushing effrontery. The effects of the drug thus insolently and illegally introduced into the Celestial Empire were described as utterly demoralising, and hideous pictures were drawn to illustrate the enormity of the guilt incurred by a British Government and by British merchants. It was in vain that those who had a more exact knowledge of facts, and could speak from personal experience, denied the magnitude of the evil complained of, and pointed out the gross exaggerations of the sciolists. No one would listen to them when they declared that the abominable spirit, samsu, in which the Chinese previously indulged, was far more deleterious than opium, and that the substitution of the latter was rather a blessing than a curse. Nor were their remonstrances more heeded when they appealed to statistics, and showed that the excessive use of the drug was confined to the dregs of the maritime population, and that its annual consumption throughout the empire did not exceed sixpence for each inhabitant. A foregone conclusion had been arrived at and must be maintained, and, consequently, the opium trade with China has continued down to the present day to afford a plausible theme for ignorant and frothy declamation. It would have argued too much honesty, too much earnestness, had these shallow moralists taken the trouble to inquire into the true bearings of the question. It did not suit their purpose to ascertain the real motive that actuated the mandarins to oppose the open introduction of the drug into the market. Little did they care to know that what first alarmed the Chinese officials was the excess of imports over exports, and the consequent disappearance of sycee silver. Having taken sufficient measures to prevent the efflux of the precious metal, they were not unwilling to connive at the sale of the prohibited article, provided their acquiescence in the trade was duly purchased. The foreign merchants had, therefore, to expend in fees what formerly they paid as customs' duties. Thus the empire suffered while individuals were enriched. It would be tedious to recount all the squabbles that arose between the native authorities and the British traders. The former might have been false and extortionate, but the latter were not always free from blame. Now, however, there is no longer any question as to the legality of the trade, nor is it in any respect more immoral than the distillation of spirits, or their importation into our own country. It is now, therefore, worth while to consider how far the cultivation of opium may be extended, so as to meet the increased demand, and also to supply a portion of the growing deficit in the revenues of India. In many parts of Oude the poppy might be cultivated with great success, and another method of increasing the supply is proposed by the Calcutta Englishman :—

"This is to grant licences to cultivators charging them by the bigah on an estimate taken from the returns to the Government cultivation for several years. Land cannot be concealed, and it would be easy for the collector to ascertain the exact quantity under poppy so as to make evasion impossible. The only difficulty we can see in this is the Abkaree. If the market price of opium is much above what the grower could afford to sell his for, he would be tempted to dispose of it to his neighbours, rather than to deal with the exporters. The licence however might be given only for exportation, and heavy penalties inflicted for any other dealings. The grower would have the strongest inducement to improve the quality, so as to get a name in the market of consumption, and individual competition would effect much. The experiment might be tried in one zillah at first, and extended according to its success and the demands of commerce."

The time has undoubtedly arrived when extraordinary means must be adopted for covering the exigencies of the Government, and if, as we believe, the extended cultivation of opium can be brought to relieve the distress of the public treasury, there is no good reason why this resource should not at once be made available.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

The third session of the fifth Parliament of the present reign was opened on Thursday, the 3rd of February, by her Majesty in person. In the Speech from the Throne, the following allusions were made to the state of affairs in India.

"The blessing of the Almighty on the valour of my troops in India, and on the skill of their commanders, has enabled me to inflict signal chastisement upon those who are still in arms against my authority, wherever they have ventured to encounter my forces; and I trust that, at no distant period, I may be able to announce to you the complete pacification of that great empire, and to devote my attention to the improvement of its condition, and to the obliteration of all traces of the present unhappy conflict.

"On assuming, by your advice, the distinct Government of that portion of my dominions, I deemed it proper to make known by Proclamation the principles by which it was my intention to be guided, and the clemency which I was disposed to show towards those who might have been seduced into revolt, but who might be willing to return to their allegiance. I have directed that a copy of that Proclamation should be laid before you."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 3.

VOTE OF THANKS TO THE INDIAN ARMY.

The SPEAKER intimated that he had received a letter from Lord Canning, Governor-General of India, acknowledging the vote of thanks passed by the House last session, and enclosing letters from the various officers of the army in India included in the same vote of thanks. These the right hon. gentleman read to the House.

EDUCATION AND CHRISTIANITY IN INDIA.

Mr. WARREN gave notice that on an early day he should submit to the House the following resolutions :—

"1. That her Majesty having been graciously pleased, on assuming the government of India, to proclaim to the princes, chiefs, and people thereof her firm reliance on the truth of Christianity, at the same time disclaiming the right and the desire to impose her convictions on any of her subjects, it is the opinion of this House that the Government scheme of native education should include instruction in the Holy Scriptures, but that no religious teaching of any kind should be made compulsory on pupils objecting to receive it.

"2. That, scrupulously respecting the rights of property in the native religious endowments, the Government should leave the entire administration of such endowments to the natives themselves; and that no salutes or other marks of honour inconsistent with the Royal profession of Christianity should be rendered to any of the native religions, nor any processions or other public exhibitions allowed which may disturb the public peace, corrupt the public morals, or offend against humanity or the religious convictions of any class of her Majesty's subjects in India.

"3. That, regarding caste as a distinction rather of race than of religion, and opposed to the moral and social progress of the native community, this House is of opinion that caste ought not to be in any way countenanced in the Government schools or in any department of the public service.

"4. That, while strictly abstaining from the employment, directly or indirectly, of political influence or authority for the purpose of promoting or enforcing the extension of the Christian religion, it will be the duty of the Indian Governments to continue their exertions for enlightening and informing the native mind; to afford every facility to voluntary efforts for the propagation of the Gospel; and to protect the rights of conscience and freedom of individual action in all her Majesty's subjects in India, whether or not in her Majesty's civil or military service, and whether European or native; and, in the latter case, whether adhering to their own forms of belief, or acknowledging, together with her Majesty, the one true God and Saviour of mankind."

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FEB. 4.

SIR J. LAWRENCE AT DELHI.

Earl GRANVILLE said,—In the course of a debate last year I gave, as an instance of Lord Canning's firmness, that a question of negotiating with the insurgents having arisen, and being favourably considered by the Commander of the Forces and by Sir John Lawrence, Lord Canning sent a telegraphic message objecting to such negotiations, and desiring the siege to be proceeded with. I made that statement upon information of a most reliable character, but unaccompanied by any details. The communication which I have received from Sir John Lawrence shows that the King of Delhi in July proposed to negotiate, and that Sir John Lawrence authorised General Read (not General Wilson, as I had supposed) to negotiate with the King, on the condition that he could prove that he had never given orders for the murder of any of our countrymen, and that he would put the English in safe possession of his palace at Delhi, thereby enabling them to take the other insurgents in the reverse of their positions. Sir John Lawrence considers that the critical position of the army at that time, the want of siege train, the disproportion of guns, and the almost hopeless prospect of taking Delhi, made this measure most desirable, and would have saved the effusion of most valuable blood. He has reason to believe that his despatch giving his explanations never reached Lord Canning at all, owing to the communications being stopped, and it was only much later—after the negotiations had failed, after our troops had been reinforced, and when the siege was nearly completed—that he got an express from Lord Canning to the effect, "That rumours of negotiation with the King of Delhi having reached him, he objected to any negotiations which would have the effect of replacing the King of Delhi in his former position." It was never my intention to depreciate the character of either of these eminent men in order to exalt that of the other, a feeling which would have been most distasteful to both of them. Sir John speaks in this correspondence in the highest terms of Lord Canning, as Lord Canning has always done of Sir John in his private letters to me.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 4.

INDIAN FINANCE.

Lord STANLEY.—I give notice that on Monday, the 14th inst., I shall call the attention of the House to the state of Indian finance.

THE INDIAN MUTINY.

Colonel SYKES gave notice that on Tuesday next (to-morrow) he should move for a copy of the proceedings and correspondence relative to the court-martial held at Meerut on eighty-five troopers of the Bengal Native Cavalry; also for a copy of the proceedings and correspondence relative to the excommunication of a detachment of the 36th Native Regiment, in 1857, by their comrades in the regiment.

SUPPLY OF COTTON FROM INDIA.

Mr. HADFIELD expressed a hope that the Secretary of State for India would give the House some explanation of the measures in contemplation for facilitating the supply of cotton from India. It was calculated that the manufacturers of England paid to one country for cotton £10,000,000 more than the natural value of the article, and when it had been shown beyond the shadow of a doubt that a great part of the supply could be obtained from one of our own dependencies, it was the duty of the Government to do all in their power to foster its produce, and facilitate its transmission. Roads, and water for the purposes of irrigation, were the two great things needed.

Lord STANLEY declined to enter into details upon these subjects, as he would have an opportunity of entering into the consideration of them in a few days when discussing the finances of India, with which they were connected. He agreed with Mr. Hadfield as to the possibility and the national importance of greatly increasing the supply of cotton. In the present financial difficulties of India, the Government, though unable to continue the expenditure for public works upon the scale of past years, were convinced of the expediency of pressing forward works of a reproductive character.

Mr. BRIGHT condemned the operations of the Enam Commission at Bombay, and complained that a commission under the same name had been issued at Madras. These inquiries into titles, he observed, produced great discontent, as being unscrupulous and unjust.

LORD STANLEY replied that at the time when the appointment of Sir C. Trevelyan to the Governorship of Madras was determined on he wrote to Lord Harris to request that he would suspend all operations with regard to the Enam Commission until the arrival of his successor at Madras. The object of the commission was not to disturb the old titles, but, on the contrary, to confirm them, and to give a Parliamentary title to a great mass of property, the validity of the title to which is disputed.

Colonel SYKES explained that it was not the right to land but the exemption of an individual from paying a Government tax, that was the object of inquiry. With regard to the production of cotton in India, it might be produced there to any extent that the manufacturers of Manchester might require. The manufacturers of this country, if they wished to obtain sufficient cotton from India, should make it worth the while of the cultivators in India to produce cotton rather than sugar or indigo, and they should send out agents to India to obtain cotton.

Sir J. ELPHINSTONE corroborated the remarks of the hon. and gallant colonel as to the cultivation of cotton in India, but added that, until better means of conveying cotton from the interior of India to the coast were provided, it was hopeless to expect the manufacturers of this country to procure much cotton from India, because it had to be dragged by bullocks great distances along the roads, whereby it was much soiled.

Mr. J. EWART briefly insisted on the necessity of enlarging the means of irrigation before the supply of cotton could be sensibly increased.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MAJOR GENERAL SIR EDWARD LUGARD, K.C.B., has been appointed Secretary for Military Correspondence at the War-office, v. Sir Henry Storks, K.C.B.

THE MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SING, well known in English fashionable circles, has, according to a Vienna letter in the German Journal of Frankfurt, chosen unto himself a bride at Pesth. The marriage, the letter states, is to take place at Galatz, and after the ceremony the young couple will proceed to India.

LORD CLYDE'S PARENTAGE.—A number of letters on this subject appear in the Glasgow papers, the writers contradicting the statements put forth by the correspondent of the Inverness Courier, whose letter we recently published. Mr. John Duncan, dating from "Causeyside, Paisley," writes in the North British Mail:—"This intimate friend of Lord Clyde, even after his forty years of friendship, must allow me to tell him that John McLiver, who died at Granton on the 22nd December, 1858, was Lord Clyde's father. John McLiver commenced life as a cabinet-maker, and wrought in Glasgow, just as scores of other cabinet-makers do at the present day. Perhaps this correspondent thinks he does Lord Clyde a service by making him the son of a colonel; but Lord Clyde, I am sure, is not ashamed of the accident of his birth. Amongst our working classes may be found hundreds who are just as great and good as many of our colonels and lords."—In the Glasgow Herald, "W. L. F." sums up the controversy thus:—"The simple fact of it is this, that the christened name of Lord Clyde is Colin Campbell, named after his uncle, the late Colin Campbell of Killinallan, in the Island of Islay, who took more than a paternal interest in the welfare of his nephew, preparatory to his entering the military profession, and also during his life. Lord Clyde, of course, is descended from the Campbells of Killinallan and Ardnahoe. A more honourable and ancient family in the aristocracy of the country did not exist. Lord Clyde is now the representative of that family."

LETTER FROM THE SHAH OF PERSIA.—Her Majesty held a Court at Buckingham Palace, on Wednesday, at which the Hon. Charles A. Murray had an audience and delivered to Her Majesty a letter from the Shah of Persia. Mr. Murray was presented by Lord Stanley.

BUST OF VISCOUNT HARDINGE.—Mr. Foley, R.A., has been honoured with a commission from the Queen to execute in marble a life-size bust of the late Viscount Hardinge, to be placed in the corridor of Windsor-castle. The present Viscount has ordered a bronze statuette, of the large model size, from Mr. Foley's equestrian group engraved in our journal of this month. We rejoice to find that, so far as a reduced copy of this noble work will supply such a deficiency, the country will not be without an opportunity of seeing and obtaining it, for there is little doubt that when the statuette is procurable there will be a demand for it; still, we desire to have it in all its grandeur in our highway, and hope there will be no relaxation of effort to secure such a result. We presume the casting of the bronze statuette will be entrusted to Messrs. Elkington, who so well executed the larger work.—Art Journal.

TRADE WITH JAPAN.—A Supplement to Tuesday night's Gazette contains a Proclamation warning British subjects against now fitting out or despatching vessels to trade at the ports of Japan about to be thrown open; the said ports, according to the treaty, not being declared free until the 1st of July, 1859—and notifying that her Majesty's ships of war had received instructions to prevent the conditions of the said treaty being violated.

CHAPLAINS FOR INDIA.—We have heard with much pleasure that it is the intention of the Indian Council immediately to supply the want of chaplains attached to the Indian army, which has been so much remarked upon of late. Ten additional chaplains will be sent out at once, who will rank at first as supernumeraries, but will be admitted into the regular service as vacancies occur. This addition is independent of an increase in the regular establishment in Bengal of from seventy-four to eighty chaplains.

DIRECT CADETS.—The following gentlemen having passed their examination on the 1st inst., have been appointed to Her Majesty's Indian Army:—M. W. Balfie, C. E. Benthall, T. F. Bruce, H. T. Christie, F. F. Comyn, F. E. Farquharson, A. W. Graham, Walter R. Hamilton, H. A. Hobson, John Hibbert, C. T. M. Higginson, A. G. Hutchinson, A. W. Lucas, H. F. B. Marsh, C. Middlemass, F. M. Newbery, A. W. Roberts, C. B. Wetherall, F. Winterbotham, A. Harrison, E. Maturin, and Chas. Mercer.

BOOKS.

Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine. No. DXX. London: Wm. Blackwood and Sons.

The February number of this prince of magazines, though fully sustaining its world-wide reputation, contains only one short article on Eastern subjects, and that is the continuation of the "Cruise in Japanese Waters." Brevity is by no means the sole merit of this very readable contribution. The description of the threatening gale is excellent, and wonderfully true to nature; but, perhaps, the most interesting portion of this paper is the account of the loss of the Russian frigate Diana, in the Bay of Simoda, statio male fida carinis. A wellmerited compliment, too, is paid to the enlightened liberality of the American Consul, Mr. Harris, who rendered such valuable service to Lord Elgin.

A COLLECTION OF CHINESE FOOD, just received at South Kensington, through Sir John Bowring, will give some little insight into the nature of a Chinese dinner. It includes a collection of Chinese wines; a small number of specimens of tea; some kinds of seaweed; fourteen varieties of Chinese cakes and preserved fruits and vegetables; also a tempting variety of tobacco. Some of the specimens are marked "Mild for women," whilst others are prepared for smoking through water-pipes. These specimens are accompanied by several pipes used in smoking both opium and tobacco. There are various miscellaneous substances of more or less interest; such as seeds, dried fruits, preparations from the bamboo, and condiments of various kinds. Amongst these are specimens of arrowroot from the roots of the water-lily.

THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS,

A WEEKLY SUMMARY OF BRITISH AND FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

This Newspaper presents a comprehensive and perfect view of British and Foreign affairs, with special reference to those subjects in any way interesting to residents in India, or those at home having connections there. The Intelligence is brought down to the latest possible moment prior to the departure of the Mail. The various departments are so arranged, and the intelligence analysed, as to form a weekly register of permanent interest and value, which subscribers will be glad to preserve.

The weekly issue of "THACKER'S OVERLAND NEWS" renders it as eligible a newspaper for Anglo-Indians resident at home as abroad.

Families should send it to their friends abroad.

Parties proceeding to India or China should not fail to order a year's subscription.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the Provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to future Insurers Four-fifths of the Profits, with Quinquennial Division, or a Low Rate of Premium without Participation of Profits.

The next Division of Profits will be declared in June, 1860, when all Participating Policies which shall have subsisted at least one year at Christmas, 1859, will be allowed to share in the Profits.

At the Five Divisions of Profits made by this Company, the total Reversionary Bonuses added to the Policies have exceeded £913,000.

At the last valuation, at Christmas, 1854, the Assurances in force amounted to upwards of £4,240,000, the Income from the Life Branch in 1854 was more than £200,000, and the Life Assurance Fund (independent of the Guarantee Capital) exceeded £1,700,000.

FOREIGN RISKS.—The Extra Premiums required for the East and West Indies, the British Colonies, and the northern parts of the United States of America, have been materially reduced.

INVALID LIVES.—Persons who are not in such sound health as would enable them to insure their Lives at the Tabular Premiums, may have their Lives insured at Extra Premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, provided such Policies shall have been effected a sufficient time to have attained in each case a value not under £50.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written Notices of, received and registered.

MEDICAL FEES paid by the Company, and no charge will be made for Policy Stamps.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances are effected upon every description of property at Moderate Rates.

BONUS YEAR.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is directed to the advantage of joining the Company on or before 25th MAY, 1859, as the SECOND DIVISION of PROFITS will take place as at that date.

The FUND to be DIVIDED will be the Profits which have arisen on the business of the Company since 25th May, 1854, when the last Division took place.

To entitle Parties to Participate in the Division, Proposals must be lodged at the Head Office, or at one of the Branch Offices or Agencies at home or abroad, on or before 25th May, 1859.

PERSONS PROCEEDING TO INDIA can affect ASSURANCES on favourable terms with this Company.

LOANS given to Civil or Military Officers proceeding to India on her Majesty's Service.

Agents at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, and in all the British Colonies, where Premiums can be paid and Claims settled.

The COLONIAL was established in 1846, and its present Income is upwards of NINETY THOUSAND POUNDS per Annum.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New

Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygienic agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygienic system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygienist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—FLUSHES,

EXHAUSTION, GENERAL DEBILITY.—It is difficult for persons who have been enfeebled and depressed by long sickness to believe that they can be restored to strength and vigour by any medicine whatever. They probably have tried multitudes of medical men and a hundred specifics without avail. Let them have faith to test the virtue of Holloway's Pills, which may do good, but cannot do harm. They will, they must, by them gain health and strength. In all cases of exhaustion, flushes, and general debility these pills act like a charm. The patient feels that his lease of life is once more happily renewed. The certainty of cure depends upon their always converting impure to pure blood.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MR. O'MEARA, Surgeon-Dentist, late of Simla (Seven Years resident in India), begs to inform his Friends and former clients returning from India, that he can now be consulted professionally in London, at No. 18, Queen Anne-street, Cavendish-square.

ON THE 1st MARCH, 1859, WILL BE PUBLISHED, PRICE 2s. 6d.,

THE FIRST NUMBER OF

THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW

(A MONTHLY REVIEW)

OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE.

IN announcing to the public the advent of a new Periodical, the Proprietors do not consider it necessary to vindicate, beforehand, their claim to any exclusive position, or to prove the existence of any special want which it shall be their aim to satisfy. They prefer at once to brave the charge of self-complacency, and to say they have determined on addressing the world, because they believe they can persuade the world to listen to them. By way of preface, however, they think it right to offer a few explanatory remarks on the several departments of Politics, Literature, and Social Science, which will month by month pass under review.

In the POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, their attention will be directed to the co-ordination of popular measures with the maintenance of the true conservative principles. They have firm faith in the excellence of the Constitution under which they live. But between those who would preserve it by a periodical re-adjustment of its parts according to the various requirements of successive epochs, and those who believe that its machinery as designed at the Revolution is adapted for all time, there is an essential and a practical difference. It is under the banner of the first-mentioned class of Conservatives that the Proprietors of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW profess to enrol themselves; and they are happy in the conviction that the Government which at present administers the destinies of this country will be found to regulate their policy by the principles of constitutional progress.

In FOREIGN AFFAIRS the Proprietors will recommend an attitude of vigilant neutrality, in the belief that the people of this country now recognise as an historical fact that British interference in the affairs of Continental nations is productive of but little good; and that the resources of Great Britain will be expended more beneficially to herself and others in maintaining inviolate the asylum which she affords to political sufferers than in seeking to promote their cause by a policy of aggression. To this end, however, it is absolutely necessary that our naval and military establishments should be kept in the highest possible state of efficiency, and papers relating to this subject will form a prominent feature in the UNIVERSAL REVIEW.

In all ECCLIASTICAL QUESTIONS the Church of England will receive an earnest and affectionate support; and whenever her position and accidents may come under the consideration of the Legislature, the integrity of her constitution and the sanctity of her ancient creed will be firmly and vigorously upheld.

During the PARLIAMENTARY SESSION an article will appear in each number containing a condensation of the month's debates, with such comments as may serve to elucidate the topics of the day. Particular questions will occasionally be discussed separately and at greater length, but it is not anticipated that articles of this special character will be of frequent occurrence. The great public meetings that are held during the recess, and which constitute in themselves a kind of irregular Parliament, will also be treated according to their interest and importance.

In LITERATURE, the method which the Proprietors of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW intend to pursue is easily indicated. In this department they would feel still less difficulty, were they so inclined, in defining a peculiar field for their exertions. It would be possible to mark out a distinction which should separate their treatment of books and subjects, on the one hand, from the brevity and haste to which newspaper articles are necessarily liable: and, on the other, from the infrequency of publication that attaches to the regular quarterly organs of literature, and which so often prevents them from delivering their judgment, however valuable and conclusive, until the topic has been well nigh exhausted by earlier if less weighty writers. From the monthly magazines, with which they might seem likely to come into still closer competition, they might claim to be distinguished by the fact of their Review being primarily intended for critical purposes, and not—except in very rare instances—as a repository of the lighter class of articles that form the staple of most monthly periodicals. The progress of Foreign Literature will be duly noted in their columns, and all foreign works of interest introduced as speedily as possible to the knowledge of their readers.

The large class of subjects which are at present somewhat vaguely comprehended under the title of SOCIAL SCIENCE, will be carefully and conscientiously analysed in the UNIVERSAL REVIEW. But as that "Science" is obviously in its infancy, any discussions based upon it must at present be rather experimental than judicial. On the Philosophy of Society—supposing that such a philosophy exists—and on questions of social and sanitary reform, upon which so many able authorities are so widely at variance, it would be premature to promise anything like final or exhaustive treatment. It is proposed, however, under this head, to take due notice of the meetings that may be held, or the books that may be written on these and cognate subjects, and to sum up from time to time the most trustworthy results that may seem to have been attained in the progress of public opinion or of individual thought.

The signal success which has in France attended upon an experiment of a similar nature to the present, encourages the hope that a Periodical distinguished by a like preponderance of the critical element, combined with the advantage which the able conductors of the Revue des deux Mondes unfortunately do not enjoy—that of free political discussion—may meet with a support, to the consolidation of which its proprietors promise that no exertion shall be wanting, either on their part or on that of their contributors.

WITHOUT SPRINGS.

110, REGENT-STREET, and 33, LUDGATE-HILL, Are the Dental Establishments of

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans. In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804; and at 134, Duke-street, Liverpool.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

Books under ½ lb. 6d.; under 1 lb. 1s.; and for every additional ½ lb. an additional 1s.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 9th January brings intelligence of two important Government orders. One of these, dated Allahabad, Dec. 21, extends to the North West Provinces the provisions of the Disarming Act of 1857, in the following terms:—

"NOTIFICATION.

"The Right Hon. the Governor-General has been pleased to extend the provisions of sections 1, 2, and 5, Act XXVIII., 1857, to the North Western Provinces of the Bengal Presidency.

"His Lordship having resolved on disarming such parts of those provinces as lie to the north of the rivers Jumna and Ganges, has farther been pleased, under section 24, Act XXVIII., 1857, to authorise a general search and seizure of arms by the magistrates and collectors within the tract above specified. The magistrate and collector may delegate the same authority to any officer of his establishment of a rank not lower than a Jemadar.

"By order of his Excellency the Right Hon. the Governor-General.

"W. MUIR, Secretary to Government, N.W.P."

The disarmament of the natives had been in vain urged upon the Government by the Indian press for many years past. It needed the revolt of the entire Bengal army to enable the great local functionaries to realise the precarious nature of the British power in Hindostan. At last, however, their eyes have been opened, and the same policy is to be introduced into the North West Provinces that was inaugurated by Lord Dalhousie in the Punjab.

The position of a handful of Europeans in the midst of a teeming population possessed of offensive weapons, and not unskilled in the use of them, could not be otherwise than critical, and yet the rulers slumbered on in fancied security. As a natural consequence of the measure of precaution now adopted at almost the twelfth hour, it may be expected that the European army will be gradually reduced, and that the regiments which have been most shattered in this harassing warfare will be sent home to enjoy a well-merited period of repose.

Instructions have also been issued for the formation of entrenched police and treasury stations, sufficiently strong to defy a coup de main. It is needless, we hope, to insist upon the necessity of reserving the custody of these posts for European garrisons. If this be done, and British residents be encouraged to form themselves into bodies of local militia, however small, the peace of the country may be maintained by a much smaller army of Europeans than is now exhausting the resources of the country.

The other order to which we have alluded announces, as follows, the creation of the Punjab into a distinct Presidency:—

"FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

"ALLAHABAD, JAN. 1, 1859.

"Under authority received from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, the Right Hon. the Viceroy and Governor General is pleased to resolve that a separate Lieutenant Governorship for the territories on the extreme northern frontier of Her Majesty's Indian Empire shall be established; and that the Punjab, the tracts commonly called the 'Trans-Sutlej States,' the 'Cis-Sutlej States,' and the 'Delhi Territory,' shall form the jurisdiction of the Lieutenant Governor.

"G. F. EDMONSTONE, Secretary to the Government of India, with the Governor General."

The first Lieutenant Governor, it is stated, will be Mr. Montgomery, the present energetic Commissioner of Oude, while the North West Provinces are to be administered by Mr. Edmonstone, whose name has become familiar to the English public as Secretary to the Government. Mr. Wingfield, Commissioner of the Byraitch district, it is said, will succeed Mr. Montgomery. Other official changes are spoken of, and no fewer than fifteen members of the Civil Service are about to resign.

The Governor General was not expected to reach Calcutta before the 25th of last month. There was not the slightest foundation, we are happy to remark, for the rumour of Lady Canning's death, which was reported to have reached this country by way of Russia.

Among the miscellaneous intelligence from Bengal we give Bishop Cotton's first charge to his clergy.

Our old friend, the Calcutta Review, has again changed hands, having reverted to the able guidance of Mr. Townsend, the well-known editor of the Friend of India.

From China there is nothing to report. Lord Elgin had not yet returned from his expedition up the Yang-tze-Kiang, having been much detained by the lowness of water in the river. The French Plenipotentiary, Baron Gros, was still at Hong Kong on the 30th December.

BENGAL.

CAUSE OF THE INDIAN REBELLION.

The Great Mogul, the Emperor of Hindostan, commonly called the King of Delhi, up to the advent of Lord Amherst as Governor General, had been always treated with great respect. The Company's Government had conquered the North-West Provinces as the friend and ally of this king. It was the universal belief of the people of Hindostan Proper, that the Company acted as his subject, holding the country under certain treaties with him. We are not aware of any treaty in existence between these high contracting parties, nor are we aware when it was determined to throw off the allegiance of the Company to this puppet king. Lord Amherst, when at Delhi, forced the king then on the throne, to receive him as an equal, and seat him on a throne beside his Majesty. When this was completed, the old King was so shocked that he burst into tears. This story became pathetic when it travelled through the country. Lord William Bentinck, when at Delhi, would not press upon the King, especially as his economy would not permit him to sanction the expense of the presents required by the Delhi court etiquette; but he curtailed the magnificence of the resident, and reduced his powers, lowering the court of Delhi thereby. Lord Ellenborough not only followed in the same track but appeared himself as the Great Mogul at Delhi, commanding all his friends and brothers, the princes of India, to meet him there. The splendour of that field of cloth of gold no one will ever forget who saw it. The myriads of tents and pennons—the thousands of elephants, —the assemblage of troops of all the provinces of Western India. The armour and picturesque dresses of these, and the army of European artillery, cavalry, and infantry in attendance on Lord Ellenborough, formed a magnificence of spectacle truly grand. This display was made outside the Delhi palace, while inside sat, on a desecrated throne, brooding over his wrongs, the very Mogul, his hundreds of sons and relatives—all Sultans—steeped in poverty, with their attendants; inculcating hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness against the Feringhee usurpers. Food for the Moslem throughout the land. Lord Ellenborough prohibited the further presentation of the annual Nuzur to his Majesty. This Nuzur symbol of allegiance, or acknowledgment of suzerainty, had hitherto been regularly presented by the resident as the representative of the Company. Lord Ellenborough would not, however, confiscate it. He did not approve of confiscation; therefore he ordered the amount to be added to the sum paid annually for his Majesty's civil list. The King refused to receive it in this manner, the Nuzur was a very important acknowledgment; its money value was nothing.

Hence arose another squabble which added more bitterness to the bad feeling of the Moslem people, particularly in Delhi. We have not room to detail all the slights and insults which the Kings of Delhi imagine they suffered, but they all rankled, they all formed the basis of tales and stories against the English which annually flowed over the land—one very important one we must not omit. The East India Company, besides acknowledging him as the Sovereign in India by presenting Nuzurs, also issued the coin in his name up to 1834; when by Act a coinage was struck in the name of Queen Victoria and the East India Company, without, however, declaring the Delhi dynasty to have ceased to reign or proclaiming a new Sovereign. The question of sovereignty was raised, but neither did the King at Delhi nor the people the less observe the progress of the English statesmen.

In 1849 the last apparent to the throne died; he was the eldest son of the now transported corrupt king. An intrigue was immediately set on foot to obtain the sanction of the Governor-General to the nomination of the youngest son, Jumma Bukht, as heir to the throne, passing over all others. The Governor-General gave no answer, the pear was ripe. He took advantage of the opportunity to propose the abolition of this pageant altogether. We believe Lord Dalhousie proposed to the Court of Directors that no successor should be recognised; that the Great Mogul should cease to reign after the death of the present incumbent. The Court of Directors gave a very timid reply—reluctantly consenting, but leaving the final settlement of the question, and all the responsibility, to Lord Dalhousie.

A negotiation was opened with Futi-hool-Moolk, Mirza Mahommed Sooltan, commonly called Mirza Fokhr-oo-deen, the heir in direct descent, who was a young man of ability and intelligence. He finally agreed to accept the terms proposed; which are said to have been to abdicate the throne, vacate the palace, recognise the English usurpers, retire to the palace at the Kootub, with certain titles and emolument, and allow the large family in the palace to be placed under proper regulation. He was acknowledged heir apparent on some such terms as these being agreed upon, in 1852. The offence given to the reigning King and all the royal family was tremendous: the Begums and the eunuchs took fire, and there is no doubt from this time forward most active steps were taken to create dissensions, and treasonable designs were harboured. Correspondence was entered into with Cabul, Persia, and all Mahomedan princes. Every new Act and law passed by the Legislative Council of India affecting princes and powers in India was scrutinised and perverted. Falsehood flowed from the palace, and was believed. In the midst of these reasonable intrigues, the Act for regulating successions and prohibiting adoption was passed. The annexation of Nagpore, the annexation of Oude, all gave spirit and life to the treason now taking shape and form at Delhi. The army began to look round and count the Europeans in the country, and a general uneasiness was felt.

Now Mirza Fokhr-oo-deen was found to be a great obstacle, the acknowledged heir apparent the friend of the English was in the way. Reports became rife that he was going to turn Christian, or that he was going to aid the Feringhee in forcing Christianity on the people; and in 1855 or 1856 he died. It was reported he died of cholera, but it is now believed that he was poisoned. We do not know if the truth has ever oozed out, but at all events poor Fokhr-oo-deen died at a most convenient period for the conspirators. The lying stories, of which the cartridge tale was one, now increased in intensity; we have no doubt promoted and extended by the King of Oude's followers in Calcutta.

The Hindoos became more uneasy; they did not understand the conspiracy. It was not as yet an organised conspiracy, the poison being circulated to prepare the army and people. The treason was cast upon the waters, to be found after many days. But the fortune of the English was in the ascendant; the apparently ill-judged punishment of eighty mutineers at Meerut brought on the crisis prematurely, and the long-hatched treachery burst upon all parties unexpectedly.

Oude was only waiting for an opportunity which now presented itself, and the talookdars were not slow in showing their dislike of the English and their revenue systems. A policy which nothing but overwhelming force could ever have compelled them to submit to, was tried with most inadequate means. They did not care one iota about the king, or the annexation, but they dreaded pukka collectors and benevolent recognition of rights of ryots and village communities.

They knew they would lose power and influence, and everything which they cared for in life,—that they would sink into mere tax gatherers, oppressed by a galling superintendence. What wonder that they were prepared on the first glimpse of an opportunity to endeavour to throw off this hateful yoke.

With regard to the English Government, the most remarkable circumstance at this period was its blindness, its fatal reliance on its prestige. The phrases, "We hold India by opinion," "India was gained by the sword, and we hold it by the sword," passed down from generation to generation, until they remained with us but as dry sticks. Our Government never condescended to inquire into the real opinions of the people; the under-current of feeling was ignored. The insolent contempt of what kings, princes, or people could do was so obvious, that the conspirators had a clear field and nothing to fear. The sword our Government held and believed in was the mercenary sword of a native army. Whilst it pursued a very strong policy of usurpation, trampled on all old and rooted habits of the people, initiated strange and incomprehensible measures, no adequate provision was made, by increasing the European army, to support it. We are far from saying the policy was not good which was intended to get rid of so much that was obsolete and mischievous, but we say that Government did not know the danger of its proceedings, and that to its rash acts we owe the rebellion and mutiny of 1857. Whilst Lord Dalhousie was penning his famous remark that we never could be certain for one hour that peace could be maintained in India,—that a cloud on the horizon but as small as a man's hand might suddenly cover the sky with darkness,—at that very time the cloud had risen, but he could not see it; our statesmen were blinded by their pride and egotism. Lord Dalhousie left to his successor a loaded mine with the match lit.

Thus have we rapidly traced the most prominent causes of the mutiny and rebellion,—causes very different from the puerile ideas put forth by the Times' correspondent. It was not a consequence of the conduct of a few Englishmen resident in the country, but we owe it to the mistaken policy of Government, which too hastily adopted reforms, unsuited as yet to the state of civilisation in which we found the people, to the paucity of European troops, our real strength, and to the infatuated belief in the loyalty of a mercenary native army, notorious for its mutinous disposition.—Englishman, December 29.

THE MUDRUSSEH.

In 1781, but twenty-five years after the introduction of British power, Warren Hastings founded the Mudrusseh. It was part of his policy at the time to keep up a Mahomedan judiciary, and he determined that they should be educated. A few years afterwards the Mussulman judges were found incapable, and disappeared, their places being supplied by law officers, who, one in each zillah, expound, when called upon, the Mahomedan law. The college, partly for their sake, partly because anglo-Indians in those days had a reverence for all Oriental learning, was maintained. Its ample revenues, Rs. 30,000 a year, were not, however, spent in teaching Arabic. That might have been beneficial in a high degree. The language, though now the sacred tongue of ignorant races, still embalms a literature not without its value. The schools of Bagdad and Cordova may not have rivalled those of modern England or Germany, but they gave us arithmetic, algebra, the elements of chemistry, a beautiful architecture, and poetry which scholars say has much of the fervour of the East. All this, however, was ignored, and the luckless student condemned to study theology and law, the subtle disputations of a few doctors and the Hidayeh. The latter, a commentary on law which brutifies and degrades the really just precepts of the Koran, is at this moment the common law of India. A scholar every now and then wasted a remonstrance, but the Mahomedan College was exceedingly popular. The teachers were well paid, and taught only those misty dialectics in which Orientals, German professors, and Scotch dominies have always revelled. Science was beneath them, history beyond them, literature a study of which they had no conception. They deemed it more advisable to sharpen their wits, and impoverish their minds by arguments on impossible cases, and quips which to the Western mind seem only farcical, and they were indulged. The pupils liked the system, for it secured them ease, just as much study as they chose, and for the rest a sleepy content, broken only by funeral ceremonies. So matters went on till 1850, when Dr. Sprenger, the best Arabic scholar on this side of India, was appointed President. With the assistance of Government, after a rebellion which the police were called in to quell, he introduced an Anglo-Persian class. This by degrees succeeded; and though the Mussulman gentry still, as a body, detest the heretical learning, several pupils have succeeded in acquiring a fair knowledge of English. The old Arabic studies were, however, left intact, and are, of course, as useless as of old. The students usually learn very little, and the few who do succeed achieve the brilliant intellectual position thus described by the Lieutenant-Governor:—

"A learned Mahomedan in Bengal means a man of extremely narrow, prejudiced and bigoted views, even on the subject of Arabic learning itself. He neither knows nor cares for literature, as we understand the word. He has never read any Arabic poetry, and never means to read any. He probably could not understand it if he were to try. He is profoundly ignorant of all history and geography, even as connected with his favourite language, with his nation, and with his religion. Of science he knows nothing, and does not believe in it when it is explained to him. But (if he be not a pretender, as is very often the case) our Moulavee in Bengal is a skilful grammarian, a verbal logician, a technical rhetorician, and a profound and painful metaphysician. As a lawyer he grounds his knowledge on no general principles, but knows certain formal treatises by heart. As a politician he abhors with consistent zeal the domination of infidels; and as a theologian he is barren, credulous, and casuistical."

In other words, a learned Mahomedan is at the best in the position of a learned "Schoolman" of the fourteenth century, with one difference. The schoolman often did know Greek, if he misused his knowledge. The Mahomedan knows only a part of Arabic, and that part the least useful or available. The question therefore arises, is a Government of the nineteenth century to go on wasting resources in a fruitless endeavour to communicate to a few pupils a half acquaintance with a portion of the most useless knowledge of the fourteenth century, the only result being extensive "political evil"? The College is a "nursery of disaffection," as of course a strictly Mussulman College logically ought to be. Nor can we see how it befits a "neutral" Government to pay money for teaching Mahomedanism. Surely, to employ their own argument, it is "indirect persecution" to spend Hindoo taxes in teaching the Koran.

The Lieutenant-Governor decides in the negative. He would abolish Arabic school altogether, substituting for it an Arabic chair in the University. A really competent professor would keep up all of Arabic learning, viz., the language and the literature, which is worth knowing. Lawyers, under the new code, we certainly shall not want. Theologians it is not our business to create. Conceited dialecticians are a nuisance rather than a benefit, even were the basis of their dialectics a philosophy less antiquated and erroneous. The College, therefore, has no one utility, which the Arabic chair would not possess, while by diverting the attention of Mussulmans to profitless studies, it fosters a spirit and a tendency at variance with intellectual development.

While, however, cordially agreeing in the recommendation to abolish the Mudrusseh, we cannot coincide in two of the arguments put forward by the Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Halliday lays exceeding stress on the difficulty of finding a competent Principal. He says that failing Principal Lees there is no one to succeed him. Arabic knowledge has been neglected by Government until there are really no competent scholars remaining. That is a very narrow view of the resources at the disposal of the Government of India. There may be no Arabic scholars in Bengal, but there must be twenty at least in Western India. We have a Mission at Zanzibar, all kinds of official connection with Muscat. Somebody at Aden must be a decent scholar, and Captain Burton would scarcely pronounce himself wholly disqualified. Besides, if India fails us, Germany is not an unknown land. There must be at least a dozen Arabic scholars in the German Universities to whom Rs. 600 a month would be wealth incalculable. There are always men where there is pay, if it be only to teach Kamschatkan. Mr. Halliday advises also that if the Mudrusseh is kept up, it should be let alone:—

"If, however, we are to do this, it will avowedly be chiefly for the satisfaction of the people; and it is therefore important to bear in mind that it is only by adhering to this obligation in the sense in which it has heretofore been interpreted that we can succeed in satisfying the people for whose sake we are acting. What they chiefly expect and require of us in the old College is, that we shall teach Mahomedan Law in the old books and in the old way. But the moment we 'improve' the College, dissatisfaction begins, and any interference with the established course of teaching is resented as offensive and ineffectual. Moreover, we are certain not to succeed in our improvements; we rouse a passionate discontent, and shall, after all, be infallibly defeated in all our efforts."

That sounds accurate, but contains after all a fallacy. It matters nothing, of course, to a young Mahomedan whether he learns or only half learns a useless science. In either case he adds nothing to his knowledge. But it matters a great deal whether the way in which he learns that science braces his mind or not. Nothing can be much more useless for any purpose of practical life than the Platonic philosophy. Yet it is quite certain that an Englishman who learnt that philosophy thoroughly, who intelligently mastered every difficulty in his way, would be fitter for active life than a lad who learnt it unintelligently. It is not a knowledge of blacksmithing we want to impart, but the muscles which make a blacksmith. Most lads in England might as well learn Kamschatkan as Greek for any advantage they gain in positive knowledge. But the effort to acquire has given their minds a tone no other system of instruction appears able to impart.

While, therefore, we would abolish the Mudrusseh, we believe that it is possible to keep it up, and better to keep it efficient than let it drag on neglected.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NARAIN RAO.—The magistrate and special commissioner of Banda reported upon the trial of Narain Rao and Madho Rao under the Jemadar Mokoond Rao for rebellion and treason against the British Government. The Governor General, taking into consideration the extenuating circumstances in favour of Narain Rao, has remitted so much of the sentence passed upon him as directs transportation beyond seas for life, and has resolved that he shall reside at Hazareebaugh under the surveillance of the magistrate or other local authority during the pleasure of Government, receiving from Government during the period of his detention an allowance of Rs. 700 per mensem.

NONE BUT THE BRAVE, &c.—According to the Englishman the Commander-in-Chief's intended return to England is to lay his title and fortune at the feet of a fair lady. It is supposed that he is encouraged in undertaking his new campaign by the example of his illustrious brother in arms, the Duke of Malakoff.

THE ANDAMANS.—The Superintendent of Port Blair lately proposed to Government the following plan for the prevention of collisions between the aborigines and the convicts. The plan is to select a suitable portion of the great Andaman Island of sufficient area for cultivation for many years by several thousand convict settlers, and which, from the natural formation of the land, is susceptible of isolation by a military cordon, and then to expel the aborigines out of the settlement land, and keep them out by the military guard, unless they manifest a desire to cultivate friendly relations. For this purpose the Superintendent has selected the southern, Mouat part of the great Andaman, bounded on the north by Port Blair and Port Mount and the intermediate neck of land about two miles in breadth. On this neck the Superintendent proposed to construct entrenchments, fortlets or stockades and establish a Military Cordon with the local corps of Madrazees, now being raised for service in the Andamans; with a view to protect the convicts from the attacks of the aborigines, and to avoid the necessity for arming the convicts in self-defence. The Government, I understand, observed that it might perhaps be beneficial to the settlement, in a sanitary point of view, to cut a broad vista through the jungle from Port Blair to Port Mouat, and it might have the effect of inducing the savages to keep to the north of the line thus laid down; but if any attempt be made to drive them by force out of the southern part of the island, the orders of the late Court of Directors and of Government, which restrict the use of force against the aborigines, except for the purposes of self-defence, will be contravened. Moreover, it appeared to the President in Council, that the plan formed by the Superintendent is based on an expectation that the number of rebel and mutineer convicts at the settlement will be indefinitely increased, and may amount to several thousands, an expectation which now that an amnesty has been proclaimed and the rebels are beginning to surrender on promise of pardon is not at all likely to be realised. There has been found great difficulty also in inducing men to enlist for the service, and though terms have been offered, some time must elapse before the company of seebundies can be raised and placed at our disposal; even then, as it appeared to Government, the seebundies will be required for the ordinary duties of the settlement, in addition to the Europeans guarding such a line as the Superintendent proposed at a distance from head quarters. Taking these circumstances into consideration, it appeared to the President in Council, that it would be on the whole a more prudent measure, after occupying the island in Port Blair, to clear the main, and gradually and uniformly from the south shore of the bay, establishing advanced posts near the edge of the jungle, leaving only cultivation and the dwelling of the colonists in the rear. In this way the operations of all the convicts will be carried on under the Superintendent's own immediate view, and almost within call of Ross Island, where the Superintendent has established the head quarters of the settlement. It is not likely that the savages would venture out of the jungle to attack the convicts in the cleared country or in the villages, lest should they do so they would be repulsed, and there is no reason for abstaining from the use of such force as might be necessary for the purpose.—Letter to the Englishman.

RAJAH OF PACHETE.—The Harkuru states that the Rajah of Pachete has been released from Burdwan jail, and is allowed by Government to reside with his family at Santipore. He will be permitted to return to his estates, as soon as the country in that neighbourhood shall have been thoroughly tranquillised.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY has submitted to Government the expediency of founding at Calcutta an imperial museum. The society on certain conditions propose to make over to Government the whole of its collections except the library. The proposal is under consideration.

OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS.—All officers in the service of Government have been called upon to state their views in reference to the following questions, on the subject of judicial oaths and affirmations; and with a view to obtain a more complete expression of public opinion on this important subject, the questions are now published, with an intimation that the Lieutenant-Governor will be glad to receive any remarks or suggestions which European or native gentlemen, not in the service of Government, may be willing to favour him with. 1st. Is it desirable that any change should be made in the present law respecting oaths and affirmations, with the view especially of improving the character of the evidence given in courts of justice? 2nd. Is it desirable that the Act (V. of 1840) which provides that persons of the Hindoo or Mahomedan persuasion shall make solemn affirmation instead of being compelled to swear by the water of the Ganges or upon the Koran, should be repealed, and that all persons should hereafter be sworn in the manner which may be considered most binding on their conscience? 3rd. Is it desirable that, in lieu of every form of oath and of the solemn affirmation now authorised or required by law, a simple affirmation, without any reference to religious sanction, should be required from all persons, of whatever persuasion? 4th. Is it desirable that witnesses should be examined without oath or affirmation, or any warning as a preliminary to their giving evidence, or with a warning only?

WANT OF ROADS IN EASTERN BENGAL.—"I have to observe that the time is not yet come when educational officers in East Bengal can travel by land. A few short pieces of road are beginning to appear here and there, but no one would dream of taking a wheeled conveyance above sixteen miles from Calcutta, as metalled roads fade into mud at that distance. I have heard that a towing path was once completed from Calcutta to the Cobbabuk river for about one hundred miles. It does not now exist; the path made one year would be obliterated the next, owing to the growth of jungle and the rapid melting away of the path, when reduced to its normal state of mud by heavy rains and constant traffic. To keep up the path in its proper state, unceasing attention, much labour, and consequently a heavy expenditure, are required. At present nothing is seen but miserable makeshifts or more generally no makeshifts at all. Even in the few places where a little bank, a foot high and six inches wide at the top, appears as a weak representative of a towing path, it is perpetually broken by small but deep unbridged water courses, through which the boatmen, regardless of crocodiles, swim or flounder up to their necks in water. During the course of a hundred miles I did not see a single bridge even of bamboo. The poorest villager can afford to provide such a structure, but the commerce of India cannot or rather does not. What is everybody's business is nobody's business. It is my duty to visit schools as fast as possible, and therefore it is my business to complain of the obstacles which oppose my travelling with speed."—From the Report of Mr. H. Woodrow, Inspector of Schools.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—The Lahore division it is now decided is to be divided into two commissionships—Lahore and Sealkote: Mr. Cust is to have the latter, and Mr. Saunders from Delhi goes to Lahore. Report says that several other changes are soon to be effected: that Mr. Barnes, Commissioner Cis-Sutlej States, is to be sent to Oude, and that Lord W. M. Hay, Deputy Commissioner of Simlah and Superintendent of the Hill States, goes to Nepaul, but it is not mentioned as yet who are to be the successors of these officers, nor is it finally decided that they leave their present appointments.

CAPITAL SENTENCES.—The Governor-General has requested the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal that he will cause every sentence of death passed by any of his subordinates under the penal Acts of 1857 to be immediately reported, with a full statement of the case for his consideration, and will direct that no such sentence be carried into effect without his approval and confirmation.

THE NEW PRESIDENCY.—A correspondent of the Phoenix writing from Agra says, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North West is to be appointed on the 11th of January, Lord Canning leaving Allahabad on the 10th. The remaining offices in Agra have been ordered to move to Allahabad during January. No notice, however, has as yet been received by the Sudder Court. Perhaps that venerable and mischievous institution may yet be abolished.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—Sir Wm. O'Shaughnessy in an official memo, published in the Bangalore Herald, expresses his hope that telegraph communication between Bombay and Calcutta via Madras will speedily be instantaneous. Morse's instruments are succeeding admirably. He adds:—"An order lately issued to the department is forwarded for publication, with the view to show to those who wish to employ the telegraph, that every practical precaution is now taken to prevent the disclosure of their private and confidential messages." But is every telegram sent read by Government or not? Is it, for instance, possible to send a telegram to Delhi via Allahabad without some secretary or other seeing it?

AMERICAN HORSES.—The Phoenix mentions that a batch of South American horses, recently sold in Calcutta, realised between three and four hundred rupees a piece. They were very much out of condition. The Phoenix considers the price obtained exceedingly unsatisfactory. How much does he want an ordinary horse to sell for? The price, as it is, is nearly double the English charge for a beast of about the same class, and far superior in strength and speed.

A FANATIC.—Do any of our readers recollect a black man, who some six years ago was wandering over India, calling himself Lord Emanuel Gordon, and a missionary of the Church Missionary Society? The man excited some interest, partly by his absurd choice of titles, partly by the odd contrast between his appearance and his education. He looked like a disreputable, under-sized negro, and talked like an educated English gentleman. He has turned up again as a schoolmaster at Jaffna in Ceylon.

MUTUAL ASSURANCE.—There has been some discussion in the Calcutta papers as to the position of the Indian Laudable and Mutual Assurance Society. We have no opinion to give on the position of the individual association, for the facts published are only assertions, but one thing is patent. The principle of Mutual Assurance, sound everywhere else, is exposed in India to one most serious risk. A whole community may be destroyed at a stroke, and every policyholder is liable not only for his own proportion of loss, but to his last penny as a shareholder in the coparcenary. A writer on this subject in the Englishman says:—"The most important consideration in undertaking a risk is the expectation of life of the party applying. One would have thought that the doctor's certificate, and not the opinion of directors, was necessary to determine this point," and therefore many doctors are more necessary than many directors. Is it quite certain that the certificate is a real protection in this country? It is in England, but its value is greatly diminished in a country where an attack of dysentery, or a twinge of the liver may in a week alter the value of life fifty per cent. The next great fortune will be made by the society which abolishes all certificates, and grants policies not according to a fanciful idea of the possible longevity of the applicant, but according to the length of his residence in India.—Friend of India.

MR. RITCHIE.—The Hurkaru says the Puisne Judgeship vacated by Sir Arthur Buller was offered to Mr. Ritchie and rejected. If so, his chance of the chief seat is greatly diminished. Lord Stanley must have known that the offer would be refused.

BANK OF BENGAL.—It is reported that Mr. Plumb is about to resign the Secretaryship of the Bank of Bengal, and that he is to be succeeded by Mr. I. H. Fergusson, a good man and true. When this has been properly arranged, the directors will, of course, advertise for candidates.

HER MAJESTY'S CIVIL OFFICERS IN THE N.W.P.—We (Bengal Hurkaru) have before us an official paper, printed at the Mofussilite Press, Agra—entitled the "Distribution of Her Majesty's Civil Officers in the North-Western Provinces on the 1st November, 1858." It was prepared in the Civil Auditor's office, and bears the signature of Mr. J. A. Loch, officiating Civil Auditor. Our readers will doubtless imagine that the Government of the North-Western Provinces has published a good sized pamphlet, something like the work that lately appeared containing the names of all the officers in the department of public works. What, then, will they think when we tell them that the document we allude to is but a single sheet of paper, and the names occupy only three pages? Perhaps, as the civil officers in the North-Western Provinces are counted by thousands, it may be supposed that the printer has used diamond type, and that the names only are published. Not so; it is in long primer type, and about half the space is blank, and in addition to the names of the said "civil officers," their appointments are given, as well as the periods of leave of those on furlough. But not to keep our readers longer in suspense, we announce the astounding intelligence that "Her Majesty's civil officers in the North-Western Provinces" are the ex-company's civil servants!! We are, therefore, most anxious to learn under what head the uncovenanted assistant secretaries, deputy commissioners, deputy magistrates, registrars, accountants, sub-deputy opium agents, postmasters, and hundreds of others employed in the civil department of the Government, are to be classified. The Queen's Proclamation states:—"We do hereby confirm in their several offices, civil and military, all persons now employed in the service of the Honourable East India Company," and the natural inference is that all—both covenanted and uncovenanted—who are filling Civil appointments, are officers of Government. As Mr. Loch thinks otherwise, may we beg him to inform us to what genus in his opinion the uncovenanted officers belong? But seriously speaking, we have in this document, a proof that the "caste" amongst Europeans which prevailed to so ridiculous an extent during the former administration still exists. The barrier which divides the covenanted and the uncovenanted has not been removed by the local authorities, although it is pretty evident that Her Majesty is not desirous of adopting the exclusive system of the old Qui Hies.

CALCUTTA REPORTERS.—They are introducing a new kind of reporting into Calcutta. Mr. Peterson defended Nusseem Gubbaye, accused of murder. Instead of telling us what Mr. Peterson said, the reporter says:—"Mr. Peterson's appeal to the jury in behalf of his client was energetic, powerful and eloquent, and characterised by that determination to do his utmost to see his client safely through the battle, which as a barrister is so eminently his characteristic. The learned gentleman demolished the oral evidence completely, subjecting it to a species of analysis which must have had the effect of rendering it perfectly worthless in the estimation of the jury." That is reporting made easy with a vengeance.

AGRICULTURAL BANKS.—Mr. Hume, the Magistrate of Etawah, lately proposed, we learn from the Mofussilite, the establishment of Government Agricultural Banks in the North-West Provinces, for the purpose of advancing loans to Zemindars, so as to extricate them and their properties from the hands of the money lenders. Government, it is said, was not unfriendly to the proposition, but considered that it could hardly take the management of such a concern.

UNFOUNDED RUMOUR.—As will be seen from the subjoined extract from the Englishman, there was no foundation for the rumour ascribing mutinous conduct to the European troops at Lucknow:—"Our informant now sends us the following explanation. I sent you a letter in which I mentioned a disturbance having occurred in Lucknow among the European troops; guess my astonishment on learning that the report had its origin something like Prior's three black crows.

It appears that a drunken fellow wished that some meeting would take place among the European troops, and this wish was rolled about until it took the form I gave you in my note the other day."

GOVERNMENT PARTIALITY.—The President in Council has recommended that every member of the civil service ordered to India with six months' furlough remaining unexpired shall have an extra six months. Moreover, such servant "shall draw from the date on which he was first appointed to act in any office to the date on which he was or may be confirmed in that office, special allowance, which together with his subsistence allowance shall be equal to the full salary of the office, and that his total allowances thus settled shall be regarded as a substantive salary in respect to all deductions made in consequence of leave of absence, whether on account of sickness or otherwise." Whoever else in India does not get justice, the civilians do. The justice, too, is sometimes that kind which Carlyle says the Hohenzollerns loved. "Fair play for all the world; fair play for myself first."

AFFRAY IN CASHMERE.—The Punjabee reports that a British officer, Lieut. H. H. Godwin Austen, has been attacked and nearly murdered in Cashmere. He was at a village about twenty miles from Jummoo, and asked the headman his road, when he was called a kafir, and attacked. Lieut. Austen drew his sword, but was knocked down by a blow from a club, and left senseless on the ground. The village, it appears, is full of escaped poorbeahs, whom the Maharajah is still most reluctant to hunt out.

STUD DEPARTMENT.—for the future all officers appointed to the Stud Department will be for the first year on probation. At the end of that time they will be examined in Hindostanee, arithmetic, and the management of horses, purchase of fodder, and office system generally. The candidate is specially to prove "his ability to prepare monthly disbursements from checked accounts of native agents, with an account current, and his knowledge of the vouchers required to support charges under the different heads of expenditure." An English stud master really understanding his work will, of course, under such circumstances, be wholly useless.

SCARCELY CREDIBLE.—The Delhi Gazette publishes an extraordinary rumour. "Somebody," it is said, "has altered the word 'arms' in the proclamation to 'hand mills,' thus making it penal for any one to possess or use the latter, and the same individual has made another alteration in that document to the effect, that no flour, attah, &c., is to be made except by the servants of the State, or by persons licensed by the State."

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—It is reported that there is an intention on the part of Government to disband the Calcutta Volunteer Guards. We (Hurkaru) think that to do so would be a great mistake, and, therefore, we hope that the report may prove to be without foundation. What is wanted is not to break up the regiment altogether, but to place it somewhat on the footing of the yeomanry corps at home. The constant weekly parades should be discontinued, but the regiment should be kept up, and the men called out for exercise for a fortnight in every year, or perhaps even for a fortnight in every six months. On that footing the corps would remain always available, in case its services should be required again, which it is perfectly possible they may be; and we doubt not that many who have got tired of constant parades and have resigned would, if requested to do so, be glad to restore their names to the rolls. The regiment having been once got up at a very considerable expense, it seems a very great pity that it should not be retained at least as a nucleus on which upon any occasion a larger corps might be formed.

JAIL INSPECTORS.—The Englishman gives the following list of salaries sanctioned by the Home Government for five inspectors of jails:—In Bengal, Rs. 28,000 per annum; in N. W. Provinces, 22,000 do.; in the Punjab, 18,000 do.; in Madras, 22,000 do.; in Bombay, 22,000 do.

CHARGE BY THE METROPOLITAN.—"Bishop's Palace, Nov. 23, 1858.—My Reverend Brethren,—The public prints will have announced to you my arrival in India, and installation into this Episcopal See and Diocese. In assuming an office of such great responsibility at a crisis so important in the history of India as the present, I earnestly desire the prayers of my brethren the clergy, and of all faithful Christians, that I may be strengthened by God's spirit to fulfil the high trust which has been unexpectedly committed to me, and that while I am permitted to preside over this diocese, whether this be for as short a time as that allotted to its earlier bishops, or whether my Episcopate approach in length to that of my revered predecessor, who has just entered into his rest full of years and honour, the cause of Christ's Church may not suffer in my hands. The clergy of India have before them two great objects: first, that of bringing the Gospel practically home to the hearts of all who call themselves Christians, and next of extending among the heathen, by all legitimate means, the knowledge of God's revealed will. Though for each of these duties in this country a separate division of the Christian ministry is directly responsible, yet the two are in fact inseparably connected, both are equally under the care of the Bishop, and it is impossible for any one rightly to discharge the one, unless he also appreciates the greatness of the other. A Missionary's best hope for converting unbelievers consists in showing forth the practical power of the Gospel in his own life, and helping all Europeans to exhibit it in theirs, just as of old the lives of Christians prove to the heathen the truth and excellence of Christianity. More particularly should he be anxious at this time to quiet all those feelings of exasperation which the crimes committed during the mutiny have naturally produced, and which must be equally injurious to the growth of Christian faith and love, both in our own hearts and among the heathen, who are so closely associated with us, and for whom, as for ourselves, Christ has died. Again, a chaplain who feels no interest in the extension of Christ's gospel among those who as yet are strangers to it, will soon find that his own heart grows cold, that his faith is weakened, that his work among his own flock is carelessly and imperfectly performed. It is impossible for any one to be indifferent to the progress and extension of God's truth among his fellow men, who feels and knows that, according to our Lord's Prayer for His disciples, by this truth he himself is sanctified, that through it alone he is enabled now to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with his God, and to look forward hereafter to a perfect communion with Him and with His Son. Nor indeed can the clergy feel that they have all a common object, if either class is uninterested in the work of the other; for if one member suffer, all the members should suffer with it, or if one member is honoured, all the members should rejoice with it. All, therefore, I trust will feel that though the special duties of each may differ, yet we are fellow-workers in the same vineyard, sent forth to serve one Master, looking forward to the day when he will come to demand of each and all the fruits of our common labours. 1. With reference to the first of these objects, I am exceedingly desirous of pressing upon your attention the claims of the Diocesan Additional Clergy Society, and the Church Building Fund. I hope that at least every clergyman ministering to Europeans will take all measures in his power for collecting subscriptions and increasing the resources of each. Of the two, the claims of the first seem to me at present the more urgent, for we may hope that when, through the exertions of a devoted Christian minister, a living church of faithful men is built up in any place, the material church of wood and stone will soon follow. At the same time, as the existence of a central fund to excite and assist all local efforts is of the highest importance, I trust that the Church Building Society will not be neglected. But in regard to the Additional Clergy Society, I should feel greatly obliged if every one belonging to this division of my clergy would regularly preach or cause to be preached a sermon for it once a year, besides exerting himself to collect annual subscriptions. I would even suggest that Quinquagesima Sunday should, if possible, always be set apart for this purpose throughout the diocese. The liberal offer of the Government to add one hundred rupees a month to the salary of any clergyman supported by such voluntary efforts, ought to stir up our own zeal and anxiety to increase its means of usefulness, while the actual and probable increase to the number of Europeans in India makes it daily more necessary to exert ourselves for their highest good. 2. I have heard with great pleasure that it is in contemplation to commemorate the character and episcopate of Bishop Wilson in the N. W. Provinces, by raising a fund for a native pastorate. As the project is yet in its infancy, I will do no more at present than express my cordial approbation of it, both as a permanent memorial of one, whose name is inseparably connected with the Christian cause in India, and as a scheme from which, by God's blessing, great good is likely to result, both in preserving from evil those who are already won from heathenism, and in adding others to the church of Christ. We are all no doubt agreed that our blessed Lord has forbidden us to attempt to increase the number of His disciples, except by convincing the conscience and influencing the heart. No secular interference, no fear and no favour, no weapons but Christian precepts and the pure example of Christian holiness and self-sacrifice, may be employed in the glorious work of winning citizens to that kingdom which is not of this world. And therefore we must remember, that as Christ permits no means but these, so He requires us to use these constantly and devoutly, in the spirit of self-denying activity, and gentle piety, and firm resistance to evil, to devise constantly new schemes for employing them more efficiently, and above all, to live in constant prayer for His blessing, that our weakness may be strengthened by His power, and our erring judgment taught by His wisdom. It is my earnest desire to have before me as soon as possible the means of forming an accurate opinion on the state of the diocese. I will, therefore, ask the chaplains to be punctual in sending me the quarterly returns of their spiritual duties, and I invite all the clergy to the freest communication with myself, not only that I may, as far as I am able, help them by my best advice and encouragement, but that I may myself be informed by their experience. I pray God to have you and all to whom you minister in His holy keeping, and I remain, your faithful friend and brother, G. E. L. CALCUTTA."

DONATIONS TO OFFICERS' WIDOWS.—The Honourable the President in Council has been pleased, with the concurrence of the Right Honourable the Governor General, to rule, that in the case of widows of all officers below the rank of field officers who have lost all or nearly all their property in the mutiny, a donation shall be given to the widows equal to what would have been allowed to the husbands, had they survived.

THE BAMBOO.—The gardener of the Agri-Horticultural Society of India gives an instance of the extraordinary growth of the bamboo. The shoot was planted in July last, and in four months had attained the height of forty-five feet, and a width of twenty-two inches. The plant must have grown the sixth of an inch an hour, a speed nearly, if not quite, visible to a careful watcher.

INDIAN LIVE STOCK.—The Calcutta journals announce the arrival of 105 elephants on board the Belgravia. They were brought from Maulmain, and form the largest cargo of these animals ever imported in a single vessel.

THE NEW PIER.—The Bombay Standard mentions that a tender for building a screw pier at Madras has been accepted by the Council of India. The price to be paid is £103,000 and the work is to be completed in two years and a-half.

CAPTAIN LEWIS PELLY, 17th N.I., is appointed major of brigade to the Scinde Irregular Horse.

FREIGHTS.

To London, £1. 17s. 6d. To Liverpool, £1. 12s. 6d.

EXPORTS Calcutta, Jan. 8.—Exports remain generally inactive for Great Britain and America. The native merchants who have been holding firmly were inclined to give away when freights took an upward tendency, in consequence of the demand for Ceylon, which prevented any further operations for England. Indigo sells freely at the public auctions at a slight reduction. Rau Silk dull, and nothing doing. Sugar in demand for Bombay. Saltpetre is held firmer since the arrival of better accounts from England, but the stocks are heavy, and the quantity expected from the interior is large. Jute begun to be inquired after, but has again fallen into disfavour owing to the movement in freights. Rice for En. had neglected from the same cause. Linsed quiet. Rape and other seeds in moderate demand. Corals still neglected, all parties waiting further advice. Hides—stock moderate, and supply moderate; the demand continues brisk for the better sorts. Snufflower—good parcels command high prices and are sought after. Catch—no new arrivals and prices sustained.

IMPORTS Calcutta, Jan. 8.—During the last fortnight the position of the market has been quiet, and very few transactions have taken place. Prices of nearly all fine goods are very well sustained, and in some instances an advance has taken place. Advances from the principal up-country markets continue unfavourable, nor do they give us any hope of an immediate improvement, owing to the late very heavy despatches for all the up-country markets. The stocks begin to increase, and some time must pass, therefore, before we can expect our market to improve. The Metal market begins to show symptoms of animation, and as up-country transit becomes easier, a further general improvement may be looked for, as most up-country marts are bare of stocks. Freights to the North-West continue high, which materially affects the despatches of metals. There is a better feeling for copper in the market, but prices are still very low. Australian copper is much wanted.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

QUICK WORK.—The message from Bangalore announcing the defeat of Feroze Shah was sent at 5.20, on the 19th December. It was received in Calcutta at 6.20, and the difference of longitude reduces the time to sixteen minutes. This is splendid work, and shows a great improvement in the condition of the telegraph.

PROFITS OF COFFEE CULTIVATION.—The Madras Athenaeum publishes, on the authority of a coffee-planter of fifteen years' experience, the following estimate of the expenditure to be incurred, and the profits to be expected, from the cultivation of coffee on the Neilgherries:—"The size of the estate was one hundred acres, the purchase-money of which, at three rupees an acre, amounted to Rs. 300. The first year's operations were as follows:—bringing into cultivation (felling forest, planting, &c., all the details being given), Rs. 2,797-8-0; tools, Rs. 210; weeding, Rs. 960; temporary buildings, Rs. 110; superintendence (manager and others), Rs. 2,196. The second year's operations were the same in kind, but less costly. The same may be said of the third and fourth years, but in these last periods another item entered with the expenditure, namely, gathering the crop; which for the small yield of the third year was Rs. 1,325, and for the increased crop of the fourth year Rs. 3,650. The total amount of expenditure on all heads (inclusive of interest at 5 per cent.) was, for the four years, Rs. 24,000, or £2,400. But the crops in the two last years realised Rs. 32,000, or £3,200, giving a profit of Rs. 8,000, or £800; not a bad return for the expenditure, it being of course presumed that the operations on the estate were conducted on the best and most economical system. But it is not until the fifth year that a coffee estate yields its full harvest to the owner. Then it is, too, that the greatest expenditure is incurred—the bungalow, stores, and coolies—lines are completed in that period; and the gathering, carrying, and exporting the crop of fifty tons of coffee amount to a very considerable sum. The total expenditure of the fifth year is put down in our statement at Rs. 16,000, or £1,600, but the selling price of fifty tons of coffee being estimated at Rs. 30,000, or £3,000, gives the handsome profit of Rs. 14,000, or £1,400, and this after deducting large items of expenditure in the construction of a house and buildings. It has been seen that a fair return was yielded after four years' operations, during which period the capital sunk amounted to £2,400. Supposing this to have been derived entirely from the owner's private funds, it is certain that for the fifth year's operations he could have raised sufficient capital upon easy terms to have carried them in. It will be seen, therefore, how comparatively small a capital is required to enable the colonist to realise a good thing in one species only of agricultural enterprise in India. In the fifth year the person starting with £2,400 gets a profit of £1,400; or, with £1,200 an income of £700, and this, too, on the assumption that he not only does not do the work of a labourer, but employs a European manager on a salary of Rs. 150 a month; which, if he himself superintends operations, is just so much saved. In the sixth year the profit, owing to the cessure of expenditure on buildings, would be doubled."

A NOVEL PHENOMENON has been observed at Madras. A living whale was seen off the beach at St. Thome. It was first recognised by its tail, fin, and a portion of his back. Soon after the monster presented his whole body. This is, perhaps, the first example of a whale traversing the warm regions of the Indian Ocean. In Bombay dead ones are occasionally found stranded.

WATER & RAIL.—The Government of Madras have decided upon giving Cochin water communication with Jeypore, or with some point on the Ponany river, in conjunction with the railway, instead of entertaining the idea of a branch line. The estimated cost of a branch line was Rs. 31,20,000, whilst, on the other hand, a canal can, it is said, be completed for Rs. 3,00,000.

SIR CHRISTOPHER RAWLINSON made a farewell charge to the grand jury. In this charge he referred to the fact that India had been brought under the direct government of the Crown, and observed that he confidently expected great benefits from the change. One of these benefits, Sir C. Rawlinson seemed to think, would be the abolition of centralization and the introduction of self government, ample materials for the carrying on of which, he contended, existed in this on 28th December, on his way from Dickoya Estate, Ambegamao. He was forty-two years old at the time of his death, and leaves behind him a wife and a large family, without, we fear, any provision.

THE PEARL OYSTER.—"I have the pleasure of announcing to the scientific world, that I found the ovaries of a pearl oyster filled with pearls of various size and shape. I have preserved the specimen for transmission to Professor Owen, to be by him placed on the shelves of the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons as a proof of the accuracy of the late Sir Everard Home's doctrine, which has for many years been exploded. I obtained from one of the ovaries as many as thirty-two pearls, and the other egg bag, still unopened, seems to contain as many more."—Dr. Kellart's Report.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Our advices from Cabul are to the 16th Dec.

The agent of the King of Bokhara arrived at Cabul on the 24th November, and on being asked by the Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan whether the taking of Kokan had cost his master any bloodshed, he replied that he was only opposed by Meer Roostum Beg, ruler of Ourateea, whom he had dethroned, and appointed Bazar Beg, one of the King's own tribe, in his place. On the 27th a letter was received from Sirdar Mahomed Uslum Khan, from Bameean, stating that Meer Hujjub Ally, who had been turned out, had returned and presented twenty slave girls and boys to him. The country of Ekka Oolung had been given to him; and he (Sirdar Mahomed Uslum Khan) had married his daughter. Also that the perwunnah for Sirdar Ahmed Khan, who had marched for Bulk, and is waiting at Seeghan, had been sent to him. On the 28th Abdool Guffar Khan, son of Nawab Jubbar Khan, petitioned that when on his way to Cabul he had arrived near Jachee, the people of the Ahmudzie tribe plundered all the cattle and property belonging to him and some merchants who accompanied him. The Dost wrote to Mahomed Azeem Khan to investigate the matter, and to keep strict watch on the road to Kurram. On the 30th the Ameer sent for the agent of Bokhara, and, after giving a khillut of shawls and cash, and a letter of congratulation to the King, dismissed him. The Dost also deputed Ameer Mahomed Khan as his agent to the King of Bokhara. On the 2nd December news was received from Peshawur that two infantry and one cavalry regiments, with eight guns, of the British, were encamped at a place called Thanah Boorj Hurree Sing. On this Sirdar Koosh Dil Khan persuaded the Ameer not to go to Jellalabad. The Ameer said that he was a friend of the British Government, and that his going there would do the British no harm. On the 3rd the Dost ordered Meer Dad Khan to proceed to Jellalabad the next day. He (Meer Dad Khan) proposed to wait at Sees Sungh for the Dost's arrival, and accompany him to Jellalabad.

A quarrel having taken place between a Hindoo and Mussulman, both sellers of salt, the former beat the latter so severely that he died a few days after the occurrence. The culprit has ran away, and Sirdar Mahomed Shureef Khan has arrested all the Hindoos of the city, and ordered that they should either produce the man or pay a fine of 2,000 Rs. On the 5th Naib Zoolfakar Khan returned from Huzara, where he had been sent to collect revenue. He has brought with him some sheep, cows, and blankets, which he presented to the Ameer, who was greatly pleased by them. The Ameer also inspected his Artillery horses this day, some of which were rejected and replaced by others. On the 6th a letter was received from Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan, stating that, owing to a large number of Kohistanes coming into Koondooz, the price of provisions and stores has risen a great deal, and grain is selling at thirty-five seers per rupee. On the 7th Dost Mahomed Khan issued pay to the regiments of Sirdar Mahomed Shureef Khan and Sirdar Mahomed Hussun Khan, and also paid their arrears. On the 8th a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan stated that the King of Bokhara has sent an agent to the Ruler of Hissar, with instructions to request him that he should give aid to the ruler of Koondooz in case the Affghans make an attack on the Goondooz. He (the King) has also informed the ruler of Koondooz by an agent of his instructions to the ruler of Hissar. On the 9th a quarrel took place between a servant of Sirdar Gholam Maheodeen Khan and Sirdar Sultan Mahomed Khan's Nazir, when the former fired a gun, which missing the latter, hit the son of a grocer, who died of the wound on the 12th. Mahomed Shureef Khan made over the murderer to the relatives of the deceased, who cut him in pieces. On the 10th a company of rifles and one hundred sowars with ten camels of Mahomed Azum Khan arrived in Cabul. On the 11th a paper was received from Mahomed Azum Khan, asking permission to have an interview with the Ameer, as he had something very private to say. The Ameer replied that he should either communicate the secret through a confidential person, or present himself in Oospan. On the 13th, a letter was received from Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan from Balkh, stating that the Ruler of Koghan had sent his son with a present of ninety horses, ninety camels, nine white hawks, forty slave girls and boys, and eighteen thousand Tillas, to the King of Bokhara, who had accepted them and was greatly pleased. On the 14th, Dost Mahomed Khan ordered all his courtiers to present themselves, as he was going to Jellalabad. They accompanied him to Sees Sung, where the Ameer arrived in the evening with about eight or nine thousand men. On the 16th, the Ameer arrived at Boodkhak and sent orders to Nawab Foujdar Khan to present himself at this place.—Lahore Chronicle.

BURMAH.

THE KING OF AVA, it seems, has taken a lesson in King-craft, and given up, under a pressure which he could not withstand, the position which he so long occupied, of the sole trader in his dominions. Starvation and discontent among the people compelled the royal merchant to give up his cherished monopolies, and instead thereof, he has adopted the more usual method of replenishing his treasury by imposts on goods imported and exported into and from his dominions. These imposts, as we learn from a correspondent, have been fixed at the following rates:—On all exports an ad valorem duty of six per cent. On imports an addition of two per cent. to the original duty of ten per cent., making twelve per cent., and an increase of the tax called "goin," from two to two-and-a-half per cent., giving an aggregate import duty of fourteen-and-a-half per cent. It is said that two products are still exempted from the influence of the newly-introduced free-trade principles, viz., timber and earth-oil, but even these remaining monopolies are said to be threatened with an early abolition. Possibly free-trade in timber is excluded, in humble imitation of the system pursued by his Majesty's enlightened British neighbours, but if the monopoly is not better managed, or does not pay better, in Burmah Proper than in Pegu, we should imagine it will not be very long maintained. We find in Major Phayre's report on the administration of Pegu for 1857-58, that the total timber revenue amounted to Rs. 1,17,286-5-3; add to this the amount realised from "forest produce" 11,238-14-4; and we have a total of Rupees 1,28,525-3-7; against this we have to set off the expenses of "forest department," or Rupees 2,55,112-10-11; and we have this notable monopoly producing a clear loss to the state in one year of Rs. 1,26,587-4. If these are the results of our monopoly under the able and vigilant supervision in which it rejoices, what can his Majesty of Burmah expect from his?—Rangoon Times, Dec. 4.

THE LATE REBELLION.—Some of the Twantay rioters and would-be insurgents, we are happy to learn, have been already disposed of. Of ten, who were in the first instance arraigned before the court of the Commissioner, the sentences are as follows:—Condemned to death, 3; ditto to transportation for life, 4; ditto to transportation for 14 years, 2; ditto to imprisonment for seven years, with hard labour in irons, 1; total, 10. Thus miserably close the careers of ten of the heaven-inspired founders of a new monarchy. The three convicts upon whom sentence of death has been passed are Shwe Hla, the leader of the enterprise, Shwe Meik, and Nga Thoon Tha, two of his most active abettors; and of those sentenced to transportation for life the principal is Moung Huyeen, for whom a fate of this description has long been anticipated by those who knew him most intimately. He, as we are informed, is one of those who were charged with the murder of the late Mr. George Macral, and although, with others of a similar stamp, he escaped through a defect in the legal evidence, the conviction was very generally entertained that he was far from guiltless in that matter.—Times, Dec. 8.

NEWS FROM BURMAH was brought yesterday by the Megara to the effect that the King of Ava was dead, and that his successor had declared war against the English. The first part of the intelligence is probably correct, the latter, however, is more than doubtful, and probably originated in the fact that the successor to the throne of Burmah was at the head of the old war party.—Madras Spectator, Dec. 22.

ABOLITION OF THE ROYAL MONOPOLY.—It is stated that the King of Burmah has abandoned his position as sole trader. The excessive discontent of the people has induced him to abolish the monopolies, and impose instead an ad valorem duty of 6 per cent. on exports, and 12 per cent. on imports. Timber and earth-oil must still, however, be sold to the King at a fixed rate.

DACOITS.—It is announced that fears are entertained in Pegu of an emeute near Meaday. A body of 2,000 men have been for some time collecting at a post twenty miles from the frontier, and three companies of Europeans with two guns have been sent out to oppose their entrance into the province. A further reinforcement has been ordered to hold itself in readiness to march at a moment's notice. The 2,000 men are believed to be mere dacoits, emboldened by the comparatively defenceless condition of the frontier.

THE STRAITS.

COLONEL CAVENAGH, it is said, has been appointed Governor of the Straits Settlements. The appointment is mentioned as an undoubted fact, but is one we find it difficult to believe. Colonel Cavenagh is a gallant soldier, an excellent political officer, but the interests of Singapore are purely mercantile.

A WISE MEASURE.—The Straits Times announces that an European regiment is for the future to be stationed at Singapore. The first Highland corps relieved will be sent on to that station. The climate is said to be excellent, and the place will form a kind of sanatorium. It appears certain, notwithstanding the refusal to accept Sarawak, that our interests in China must increase, and Singapore is perhaps the best available basis.

A DUTCH STEAM COMPANY intends to run vessels between Java and Borneo, Singapore and China. They hope gradually to extend their operations all over the Archipelago. They will be valuable feeders to the P. and O. Company, which will collect the streams of passengers at Singapore.

THE GOVERNMENT OF BATAVIA are about to send a powerful expedition against Boni, the leading State in the Celebes. The expedition will comprise 5,000 men, and the object is supposed to be conquest.

Batta to Medical Officers.

The following extract, paragraph 19, of a military letter from the hon. the Court of Directors to the Govt. of India, No. 288, Sept. 1, 1858, is published in general orders:—

"Letter dated June 18, 1858, No. 92, paragraphs 4 and 7.—Claim of Dr. McAndrew, Inspector-general of her Majesty's hospitals, to share in the donation batta granted for Delhi and Lucknow, in the rank of colonel, which is his relative rank with military officers—Government express their opinion that the higher grades of medical officers should be placed with respect to donation batta on the footing of corresponding ranks in the army."

We concur with you in opinion that the higher grades of medical officers, both of her Majesty's and the Company's service, should be placed with respect to donation batta, on the same footing as the ranks in the army with which they have relative rank, namely:—

Director general, with brigadier general.
Inspector general, with colonels.
Superintending surgeon and deputy inspector general, with lieutenant colonels.
Senior surgeon, with major.
The donation batta for the late services will be issued accordingly.

FLATTERING TO HUSBANDS.—We were startled during the morning by hearing some loud shrieks and much weeping. We all sprang up at once, and running out, found that all the noise was made by two young women, who were walking slowly at a short distance from the bungalow. As they went along they continued to cry, and throw their arms about with much apparent grief. Whenever they met any other woman, they embraced, throwing their arms around each, one by one, and leaning their heads over the shoulders of the woman whom they were embracing—first to the right and then to the left. We were informed that they were two young wives who were returning to their husbands after a visit to their parents, and that it was considered only proper that they should thus testify their sorrow.—From New York to Delhi.

Operations in the Bansee District.

To Lieut. col. Mayhew, Adj. gen. of the Army, Hd. Qrs., Allahabad.

Camp Bustee, District of Goruckpore,
22nd Sept. 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., that on receiving requisitions from Mr. Wingfield, the comr. of Goruckpore, and Lieut. Pullan, comdg. a detach. of 250 Sikhs and 2nd milry. police batt. for a detach. of troops to be sent up to Bansee, about 32 miles north of Bustee, I immediately despatched on the 5th and 6th inst. a detach. of troops as detailed below,* under the command of Capt. Mulcaster, 6th Madras cav. The detach. arrived at Bansee at nine a.m. on the 8th Sept., and the garrison relieved. The rebels retreated as our troops approached. They attacked Bansee on the 3rd Sept., plundered the town, and burnt the treasury, on the south bank of the river Raptée. Lieut. Pullan and his Sikhs, from an entrenchment near the Rajah's house, on the north bank of the river, gallantly repulsed the assaults of the enemy, killing and wounding about 50. The insurgents made another attack on the night of the 6th Sept., but not a bold one.

2. A detach. of 100 men of the 27th regt. Madras N.I., under Capt. Condy, were called in from outpost duty at Sekreegunge; arrived here on the 7th, marched again on the 8th, and reached Bansee by noon on the 9th Sept.

3. Brigdr. Fischer, lately comdg. the 27th regt. Madras N.I., comdg. Madras troops in Bengal, being at Goruckpore, I availed myself of his most readily-offered services. The brigdr. marched from Goruckpore on the 7th Sept., with 50 men 13th L.I., and 150 men of the 27th Madras N.I., with spare ammunition for the Sikh detach., and reached Bansee on the 10th Sept.

4. I beg to enclose copies of reports, detailing the operations at Bansee. The rapid pursuit and attack on a body of about 300 rebels, on the south bank of the river, on the evening of the 9th inst.,

by a party of the Ben. yeo. and 6th Madras cav., under Capt. Mulcaster, of the latter regt., and Lieut. Percival, B.Y.C., was very gallantly and boldly carried out, 40 of the rebels being killed; our loss being only one trooper of the B.Y.C., slightly wounded, two horses killed, two badly wounded (since shot), and one missing of the same regiment.

5. The troops are reported to have gone through much fatigue, over difficult flooded roads and a swampy country with great zeal and cheerfulness; and I beg to recommend Brigdr. Fischer, the officers and men of all arms, to the most favourable notice of the C. in C.

6. Brigdr. Fischer and detach. returned to Camp Bustee on the 17th and 18th inst., and I have reinforced the post at Bansee with the regimental hd. qrs., 8 European officers and 230 men of the 27th M.N.I., under the command of Capt. Howlett.

H. ROWCROFT, Brigdr.,
Comdg. Goruckpore district.

To Capt. Morgan, Brig. major.

Camp Bustee.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Brigdr. Rowcroft, that I received at an early hour this morning intelligence of 200 rebel sepoys, 100 budmashes, and 50 or 60 irr. cav., being at the village of Purseeah-ka-Pokra, about three miles from Bansee, on the south bank of the river, on the Doomreahgunj road, and also that there was a body of rebels, consisting of 700 rebel sepoys, 50 irreg. cav. and 950 budmashes, total 1,700 rebels, at the village of Malwa or Burgudwah; the former about four miles, and the latter across a deep and difficult nullah to cross, nine miles north-west from this on the Etawah road.

2. I immediately despatched two cav. patrols, one of the B. Y. C., under Lance Corporals Hely and Ryves, with directions to proceed on the Etawah road, and ascertain, if possible, the enemy's whereabouts, strength, position; and one of six privates, Madras lt. cav., under Havildar Baboo Row, with directions to cross the river, and proceed on the Doomreahgunj road. The former patrol returned with intelligence that the enemy, 1,700 strong, or thereabouts, were at the village of Burgudwah, nine miles north-west from this, and had taken up a position across the nullah, and were erecting earthworks, and fired several shots on the patrol. Havildar Baboo Row, 6th Madras cav., also returned, and reported that a body of rebels, about 300 strong, was at the village of Purseeah-ka-Pokra, and on the patrol nearing turned out and formed up.

3. Being of opinion that the rebels on the south bank of the river would endeavour to cut off our communication with Bustee, I considered it advisable to attack them at once, and Capt. Grant, R.N., comdg. detach. Pearl's Nav. Brig., being of the same opinion as myself, I ordered the detach., as detailed below,* to cross the river, and expected everything to be across by four p.m., or thereabouts, and crossed the N. Brig. and H.M.'s 13th L.I. the last, so as to expose them as little to the sun as possible.

4. I directed the detach., as detailed below,* under Lieut. Gillott, H.M.'s 13th L.I., to remain for the protection of the Rajah's kote, on the north bank of the Raptée river.

5. At about twelve a.m. my advanced guard had crossed, or was crossing, when Capt. Condy, 27th regt. M.N.I., arrived. I informed him of my plans, and handed over the command to him. Capt. Condy, being of the same opinion as myself regarding the advisability of attacking the rebels, proceeded with the expedition.

6. The detach. left the south bank of the Raptée river at about four p.m., and on nearing the village of Purseeah-ka-Pokra an advanced patrol cav., which had been sent on under Lance corporals Hely and Ryves, B.Y.C., returned, stating that the rebels were in a tope, and shortly after it was reported they were retreating. Capt. Condy immediately ordered me to advance with the cav., and endeavour to cut off their retreat. After advancing at the gallop for about four miles from the village of Purseeah-ka-Pokra, I came in sight of the rebels, and, advancing, saw them retreating by the road, which at this particular place was in some places three feet deep with water, and full of holes, and the surrounding fields full of water, and almost impassable. I rapidly advanced to the attack, and charged them, and cut up about forty of the rebels. Their dead bodies were lying on the road for about one mile.

We had then come about seven miles from Bansee, and, horses being much fatigued, and as it was late in the afternoon, and about getting dark, Capt. Condy ordered me to return.

7. I am much indebted to Lieut. Percival, B.Y.C., and Jemadar Syed Fuzul Ally, D troop 6th M.L.C., and to all officers and men of the cav. engaged, for their gallantry on this occasion.

8. I am much satisfied with the conduct of Lance corporals Hely and Ryves, of the B.Y.C., and Havildar Baboo Row, 6th M.L.C., who proceeded in command of the patrols, whose information turned out to be perfectly correct.

9. I regret to state that trooper Herklotts, B.Y.C., was wounded slightly; two horses were killed, two horses were wounded, and one horse is missing.

SIDNEY MULCASTER, Capt.
6th Madras L.C., comdg. cav.

Camp Bansee, north bank of Raptée river,
11 p.m., 9th Sept., 1858.

To the Brig. Maj., Sarun Field Force, Bustee.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of the brigdr. comdg., that I arrived here yesterday about noon, with the detach. 27th M.N.I., under my com. On crossing the river I found a detach. proceeding on service, by order of Capt. Mulcaster, who had received information of some rebels, stated to be about 400 (of whom 200 were sepoys, and fifty cav.), being within three miles of Bansee, and were entrenching themselves. The troops ordered out by that officer were as detailed below,* to which I added fifty Sikhs. The detach. 27th M.N.I., having just come off a long march of sixteen miles, and over a very bad road, were too much fatigued to take any part in the affair.

The force had crossed the river Raptée by four p.m., and marched on the rebels; we could only proceed very slowly on account of the road, which was in some places upwards of two feet deep in water and mud.

We had proceeded about three miles, when one of the advanced cav. patrols rode back and reported that the rebels were marching off. I directed the cav. under Capt. Mulcaster to pursue (the B. Y. C. leading), and accompanied them. After a gallop of nearly four miles we came up with the rebels, who were marching off, some on the road, and others in the fields, where it was very difficult indeed for the men to get at them. However, it resulted in upwards of forty being cut up; it was then approaching dark, and the inf. and guns being far in the rear, I did not conceive it advisable to follow them up further.

I sounded the halt, and returned to Bansee, reaching it by nine p.m. The troops immediately crossed, and were in their barracks by eleven p.m.

I am happy to say there are no casualties among the men, beyond one of the Y.C. slightly wounded; but two horses were killed, two so wounded as to render it necessary to shoot them, and one missing. Total five horses.

All did their duty well. The affair was entirely with the cav. The B.Y.C., under Lieut. Percival, leading, behaved as they have ever done; the 6th Madras cav., under Jemadar Syed Fuzul Ally, also did their duty well. Capt. Mulcaster, in riding well ahead at several of the enemy (his horse falling into a deep nullah and over him), was for a moment surrounded, and in a dangerous position.

* Ben. Yeo. Cav., 40 sabres, under Lieut. Percival; 6th Mad. Cav., 40 sabres, under Capt. Mulcaster; Pearl's Nav. Brig., 80 men, with 2 12-pr. mat. train howzrs., under Capt. Grant, R.N.; H.M.'s 13th L.I., 70 men, under Lieut. Gillott.

* 30 sabres Ben. Yeo. Cav., 30 sabres 6th Mad. Lt., 2 guns, 1 rocket; 30 men Pearl's N. Brig.; 35 men H.M.'s 13th L.I.; 122 Sikhs.
 † 10 sabres Ben. Yeo. Cav., 10 ditto 6th M.L.C., 35 men H.M.'s 13th L.I., 25 men Pearl's N. Brig., 90 Sikhs.

* 30 Ben. Y. cav.; 30 Madras cav.; 2 guns; 1 rocket; 30 naval brig.; 35 13th L.I.; 122 Sikhs.

I must beg particularly to bring to notice the conduct of the Sikhs; the advance guard (one sub-division under a native officer) doubled in for nearly two miles, endeavouring to keep up with the cav., and were well up, but not in time. I conceive they deserve great credit, and expressed myself to that effect to them.

As I only joined from a long march in time to assume command of and accompany the party going out, I consider that any credit Brig. Rowcroft may consider due for the planning of the attack must be rendered to Capt. Mulcaster and Capt. Grant, R.N.

G. J. CONDY, capt., comdg. at Bansee.

Camp Bustee.

Sir,—I have the honour to report for the information of the brigdr. comdg. the district, that on my arrival at Bansee, on the morning of the 10th inst., I found that the rebels, to the number of 1,800, who had been threatening Bansee for some time past, had entrenched themselves nine miles from Bansee, at the village of Burgudwah, astride the roads leading from Bansee to Biskohur, and to Doomeeragunj. A third road led from the front of their position to Jhurao, and thence into the Terai. In fact, their position secured to them the only three communications with Oude and the Terai. On their south was the Raptée, an impassable jheel nullah, protected their right flank; on the north were dense unhealthy jungles and the same impassable jheel nullah, effectually protecting their left flank, and circling round their front. Behind the bend of the nullah were thrown up their entrenchments, surrounding three sides of the village of Burgudwah.

2. The Rajah's kote at Bansee, a square enclosure, was occupied by Lieut. Pullan, with 230 Sikhs, and blocked the road to the eastward.

3. As the object of detaching the force was not simply to drive the rebels from Bansee and Goruckpore district, but to bring them, if possible, to action, and punish them, I resolved to manoeuvre round their right flank and seize their communication with Oude.

4. Requiring Lieut. Pullan, who was well acquainted with the country in which I was about to act, to accompany me with a few of his Sikhs, I substituted in his stead to hold the post at Bansee an experienced officer, Capt. Condy, of the 27th M.N.I., with 40 men of his regt., in lieu of the Sikhs I had withdrawn from the post.

5. Capt. Condy was instructed, immediately on hearing my guns, to proceed with 120 Sikhs and his 40 M.N.I., to the large village of Pucker, about six miles from Bansee, for the purpose of forestalling the rebels on the road to Jhurao, their only remaining line of retreat.

6. The 11th was occupied in making my arrangements to send boats twelve miles up the Raptée to Toorkowlea, where I intended crossing the river; I have now the honour to report, that on the morning of the 12th inst., I started with the troops noted as below,* to carry my plans into operation, and encamped at Toorkowlea, where I found Lieut. Pullan, whom I had sent with the boats up the Raptée, the north bank of which was in possession of the enemy. Capt. Kenny, of the 27th M.N.I., with two divisions of that regt., and one div. H.M.'s 13th L.I., each of 40 men, had proceeded by land up the south bank, in support of Lieut. Pullan.

7. On the evening of the 12th I received information that a body of rebels, 400 strong, were entrenched at Doomeeragunj, on the south bank of the Raptée, only seven miles distant from Toorkowlea. I resolved to disembarrass my left flank of this party, and on the morning of the 13th marched for that purpose to Doomeeragunj. The rebels held a strong entrenched position, in front of my line of march from the eastward, having the Raptée to the north on their left. Capt.

Mulcaster, of the 6th Madras cav., with his troop and the tr. of B.Y.C., preceded the march of my column by half an hour, with instructions to place his cav. in observation on the west and south of the rebels' entrenchments, without being himself seen by the rebels; unfortunately he was observed by an advanced picket of the rebels, and fired upon, as stated in a report which I enclose.

8. Shortly after I received a report that the rebels were in full flight. I immediately ordered Capt. Grant, of the nav. brig., to take his guns to the front, and join the cav. in pursuit, and directing my inf. to follow with all expedition, I joined the advanced party of cav. But pursuit was hopeless; the nature of the country favoured the rebels, who, leaving the roads, took advantage of the innumerable topes and jheels and wet cultivation to elude their pursuers. Capt. Grant fired a few rounds, but with little effect. Having scattered and driven the rebels some six or eight miles from Doomeeragunj, I relinquished further pursuit, and encamped at the ghaut where I intended to cross the river.

9. Between one and four o'clock on the morning of the 14th, I threw my whole force across the Raptée, with the view of seizing their line of communication with Biskohur, and of attacking Etawah on that line, where my force would have been within six miles of, and immediately in rear of, the large rebel force at Burgudwah, which place being surrounded by the impassable jheel nullah, stretching on both flanks, far beyond Etawah, as exhibited in the enclosed sketch, the rebels would have been secured within a cul-de-sac. After crossing the river I proceeded about two miles when, despite the information of several spies that the road was passable, I was stopped by a large jheel through which the road to Etawah passed. It would have taken me another day to have passed round this jheel. Immediately afterwards certain information having been received that the whole rebel force both at Etawah and Burgudwah were in wild flight too, and had neared Biskohur, I recrossed the river, and purposed returning by easy marches to Bustee.

10. The object for which this force was rapidly concentrated at Bustee from distant parts of the district has been attained, although unsatisfactorily, by the total dispersion and flight of the rebels, who have been for months past in possession of and disturbing these parts of Goruckpore. I regret that the state of the roads and the absolute impossibility of rapid movements, have foiled my attempts to force the rebels to action.

11. Allow me to express my entire satisfaction at the cheerfulness and zeal with which officers and men of all arms have sustained the harassing and irksome marches exacted of them; and my obligations to Capt. Grant, nav. brig.; to Capt. Mulcaster, comdg. the cav.; to Lieut. Percival, of the B.Y.C.; to Capt. Howlett and Condy of the 27th M.N.I.; to Capt. Brown, comdg. detach. H.M.'s 13th L.I.; to Capt. Drury, my brig.-major; to the asst.-magistrate, Mr. Wilson; and to Lieut. Pullan, of the Sikh police batt.

Exploits of the Kuppoothulla Contingent.

Camp Duriabad, Sept. 3, 1858.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Maj. gen. Sir J. H. Grant, K.C.B., comg., that in consequence of my receiving information from Maj. Carnegie, the dep. comsgr., Duriabad, on the 30th ult., that the rebels intended attacking Rudowlie, I directed Lieut. Chamier to march, the following morning, with the Kuppoothulla contingent, to that place, distant sixteen miles from this, which he accordingly did, with the intention of remaining there the day, and returning the next morning to this post.

After arrival at Rudowlie, Lieut. Chamier, being apprised that some sepoys of the late 17th N.I., with other followers, were plundering a village six miles from thence, he decided upon moving immediately to disperse them, which he did after sharp firing on both sides, killing from 150 to 200 of the rebels, and with a loss on his side of 2 killed and 7 wounded.

I have the pleasure to forward the report from Lieut. Chamier for submission to the Maj. gen., and trust the successful exertions of Lieut. Chamier will meet his approval.

ALEX. HUME, Major,
Comg. troops at Duriabad.

J. Hope Grant, Maj. gen., comg. Oude force.

From Lieut. Edw. Chamier, Asst. Commr., in political charge of Kuppoothulla Contingent.
To Maj. Hamilton, Asst. Adj.-Gen., Oude Div.

Dated Duriabad, 1st Sept., 1858.

Sir,—In obedience to orders received from Maj. Hume, 1st B. fus., comdg. at Duriabad, I proceeded yesterday with a portion of the Kuppoothulla contingent (strength as below),* to punish refractory zemindars close to our Tehseel at Rudowlie; and I am happy to be able to report, for the information of Maj. gen. Sir Hope Grant, K.C.B., a decisive success obtained over the enemy at the village of Gohemiya, distant six miles s.-w. of Rudowlie.

2. We reached Rudowlie at nine a.m. About one p.m. a zemindar came and reported that some sepoys of the late 17th N.I., with numerous followers, had plundered the village of Gohemiya, and were still there.

3. I directed Ens. Woodgate to gallop up to the village with some cav., to prevent their escape by surrounding it. Ens. Roddy, always willing to volunteer, I permitted him to proceed with fifty more sabres; the two officers succeeded in drawing a cordon round the village till I arrived with two guns, inf. following.

4. Our art. fire kept the enemy occupied. At the very commencement, Ens. Roddy received a slight wound in his hand while laying a gun, the bullet lodging in the arm of a jemadar, who stood behind him. On the inf. coming up, four cos. of the 1st regt. dashed into the village, headed by Ens. Roddy, whose art. fire was now no longer required; and Serg. Sheridan, H.M.'s 53rd foot. Finding there was more opposition than was anticipated, I sent in a company of the 2nd reg. under Serg. Dynan, H.M.'s 53rd foot. An hour afterwards, Ens. Roddy applied for a gun to breach a house, from which there was yet a heavy fire. Col. Williamson (of H. H. the Rajah's service) with a company, was sent in support of this gun.

5. The result of these arrangements was, that after a three hours' contest for every inch of ground, the village was in our possession, and not a man had escaped. At one time the enemy rushed out, but Ensign Woodgate, eager to participate in the fight, charged a little too soon, and sent them back into the village, to be there shot down.

6. The contingent came into action after a march of twenty-two miles, and for the first time in their lives became hotly engaged. They were nobly led by Ensign Roddy, and two sergts. of H. M.'s 53rd. regt., and to the united fearless bearing and bull-dog courage of their leaders, this success is mainly to be attributed. Col. Williamson also gallantly led his company into the thick of the fire. To Col. Mahatab Khan, comdg. the 1st regt., and especially to Nubbee Buksh, the spirited comdt. of the arty., I must record my thanks for their services, and for those of the men under their command.

7. His Highness the Rajah, his brother, and his general, accompanied the force; and by their presence in action instilled confidence, and stimulated the troops to cheerfully face the heavy fire.

8. The cav. under Ensign Woodgate, encouraged by the coolness of their comdt., well preserved their formation, and would doubtless have struck deep, had an opportunity afforded. Ensign Roddy is one of those who are ever ready to show the way at the time of the greatest danger.

9. Many rushed out of the village during the engagement, asserting they were ryots. As their appearance confirmed their statements, they were not harmed.

10. The loss of the enemy was between 150 and 200 killed. I rejoice to add, ours was only two killed and seven wounded.

11. We returned to Duriabad this morning.

Brigadier Troup's Operations.

No. 578 of 1858.—The Rt. Hon. the Gov. Gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following despatch from Brigdr. Troup, comdg. a moveable column, reporting his operation against the rebels at Mittoulee, on the 8th Nov., 1858.

The Gov. Gen. entirely approves of the operations of Brigdr. Troup, and of the conduct of the officers and men engaged in this action.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. Gen.,
Secy. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Dept., with the Gov. Gen.

No. 3.

From Brigdr. C. Troup, comdg. moveable column, to Maj. Gen. Sir W. Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff.

Camp Mittoulee, 8th Nov., 1858.

Sir,—Since my last—No. 15, of the 4th Nov., 1858—I have had the honour of receiving your telegram; but before it arrived, however, I had made up my mind to defer my advance on Mittoulee no longer, as the rebels were collecting there in great numbers, and saw no probability of the Mittoulee rajah coming in.

2. Having now fully determined to take Mittoulee, and having received no camels to relieve me of my carts, at noon on the 5th I started the whole of my heavy baggage, tents, carts, &c., off to Mahomdee, having first obtained Sir Thomas Seaton's sanction to the arrangement, and requested Col. Watson, who was comdg. there, to take charge of my baggage, and so leave me unencumbered to operate against the rajah of Mittoulee.

3. The escort which accompanied the baggage to Mahomdee returned to camp at noon on the 6th, having been out twenty-four hours.

4. My position at Nikana was immediately opposite the Pumorah Ghat on the Rutna, by which I intended crossing the river, and advancing on the fort; but hearing of the preparations the rajah and his allies had made to oppose my progress, and the obstacles they had thrown across the road, by felling large trees and cutting double rows of trenches at intervals across the track through the jungle, this was represented to be so narrow as barely to admit of a passage for the light guns. This information has since proved true. I abandoned this project, and determined to make a flank movement by Mahouly, and so come on to the south-eastern face of the fort, where the enemy did not expect me.

5. I kept my own counsel, and continued sending patrols in the direction of Pumora Ghat, so as to deceive the enemy and lead the rajah to suppose that my advance was to be by that road.

6. The deception was more successful than I thought it possible for it to be; the rajah seemed quite sure that I should advance on this ghat, and sent guns to command it, which he placed in such a position (a sketch of which is enclosed) that had I gone that way my troops might have suffered considerably, and the loss of life might have been great.

7. My plan being matured, my column fell in at one A.M. on the morning of the 7th, and marched (via Norrungabad) to a ghat some miles down the river, called the Simara Ghat, but on arrival there found it impracticable, so I had to move about two miles further down the river, and crossed the river by a fine stone bridge to Mahouly, and bivouacked there for the day.

8. Mahouly is a very large village on the eastern side of the Rutna, occupying a commanding position on the Seetapore road, with a small ghurree on an eminence, on the river side, viz., the west, with various other commanding sites on either side of the river; had the enemy occupied this position the passage of the river by the bridge would have been accomplished with great difficulty. The reason for my digressing to describe the position of Mahouly is to make Lord Clyde acquainted, as far as possible, with the passage of the Rutna, between Norrungabad and Seetapore.

9. At daybreak on the 8th I formed my column of march, as shown in the margin,* with my flanks protected by cav. and skirmishers, and moved on Mittoulee about sun rise.

10. Proceeding about two miles to the village of Chuhor, through light jungle, I found a large body of rebel cav. watching us. The ground was very unfavourable for our cav. to act on, so I brought my light guns, under Lieut. col. Remington, C.B., under the direction of Lieut. col. Brind, C.B., comdg. the art., to bear upon them, and after a few rounds cleared the place.

11. I then went on two miles further to the village of Burragaon, where I expected to find Khan Ali and Feroze Shah, but they had disappeared, and I passed through the village unmolested; a little delay took place in getting my column through the village. As soon as the column was closed up, which was rapidly done, I again advanced, and proceeding a short distance I saw the enemy's cav. to my front a second time. I again cleared them with my light guns, supported by a party 6th drag. gds. and rifles.

12. After this I went on feeling my way to a village called Lulloa, and then a mile on to Tundoa, a small village just within very long range of the guns of the southern face of the fort.

13. In rear of this village I halted the head of my column and, reconnoitering the fort, moved up my guns and attacked the south-eastern bastion, my light guns being on the left, the heavy battery in the centre, and the mortars under cover of trees to the right. My guns were in position, and opened fire between one and two P.M., at a distance varying from 800 to 1,200 yards, the enemy's guns playing on our art. while we were getting into position, and their fire increasing as they brought nearly all their guns to the southern face.

14. The guns were supported as follows:—By four cos. 60th rifles, with the lt. art. strengthened by the hd. qrs. of that regt., as the heavy battery came up, the carabineers being judiciously placed in support on the flanks, while the Mooltanee cav. were feeling the jungle and country about, and watching the enemy.

15. The fire from the fort increasing, and it being evident that the enemy was bringing all his art. to the southern face of the fort, both on the enciente and in the jungles on our front, it was found necessary to advance the heavy battery to within 600 or 700 yards, so as to overpower the rebel guns, the two guns No. 7 lt. field baty. being judiciously placed under cover to the left front, to keep that flank clear, Lieut. col. Remington having at the same time been detached with four h. art. guns, to the left of the main body, with instructions to watch the enemy, but reserve his fire as far as circumstances justified; these guns were not again required to come into action. The other two guns of his troop remained for the protection of the baggage and parks.

16. Towards dusk the favourable effect of our fire became perceptible, and as it appeared that the enemy were still unshaken, arrangements were made for a night bivouack, the advanced art. was consolidated with the mortar battery in judicious order, with reference to a night attack. The night passed without molestation, with the exception of a shot or two fired from the fort, and a few shot from matchlocks.

17. In conjunction with Lieut. col. Brind, comdg. the art., and Capt. Maunsell, comdg. the engrs., I made arrangements for continuing operations on the following morning, but from ignorance of the nature of the ground around the fort, and the impossibility of collecting trustworthy information from the people of the country, though the largest inducements in the shape of pecuniary rewards were offered, together with the darkness of the night, I deemed it advisable to defer all operations till daylight, with the hope of obtaining by observation, and expected information from our scouts, a clear knowledge of the difficulties we might have to encounter.

18. At daylight, on the morning of the 9th, I directed Capt. Cureton to reconnoitre the fort; he advanced with one troop of his regt. to the south-west angle, and seeing no sign of its being occupied, proceeded close under the walls. Not being molested in any way, he sent me information to this effect. I immediately directed some light troops to move on to the front, Lieut. col. Brind, C.B., comdg. them; this party entered the fort, and finding it empty, took possession of it; I followed immediately after, and went over the fort and its defences, a description of which by Capt. Maunsell I do myself the honour to enclose.

19. The Rajah and his allies carried away or secreted all the guns they had, with the exception of those shown in the return of captured ordnance.

20. It is now my pleasing duty to bring to the notice of the C. in C., the conduct of the whole of the troops under my command. The behaviour of the artillery was remarkable, who followed the noble, energetic, and cool example of their comdg. officer, Lieut. col. Brind, C.B. Both officers and men worked like slaves throughout the entire day, to the admiration of all who witnessed them. On this occasion the branch of the service upheld its reputation. The fire that our guns and mortars were under from the fort guns, worked under cover of the works of the fort, was very severe; notwithstanding this, our artillery engaged the enemy without shelter of any kind, and doubtless, by their coolness and precision of fire, paralysed the enemy, and forced him to take advantage of the night to make a hasty retreat. To Col. Brind, C.B., comdg. the art., every praise is due, for the cool and judicious manner in which he placed his guns; and I wish particularly to bring the assistance I received from this officer on every occasion, whether connected with his own branch of the service or any other, with reference generally to the operation in which we are engaged, prominently to the notice of Lord Clyde. Lieut. col. Remington, C.B., comdg. 3rd tr. 3rd brig. H.A., with his guns cleared our road of the enemy's cav. wherever they showed themselves; my thanks are especially due to him for the splendid manner in which he worked his troop throughout the entire day. I was greatly pleased at the way Capt. Cox, with the heavy guns, and Capt. Stubbs, with the mortars, and Lieut. Wake, with two guns, No. 7 lt. bat., commanded their respective batteries, and at the manner the guns and mortars were worked. I wish to bring the names of these officers to the notice of Lord Clyde, as being art. officers of great coolness, judgment, and experience, and well worthy of his favourable consideration. I fully concur with Lieut. col. Brind in the high estimate he has formed of Capt. Bishop, divisional staff to the art., and recommend him strongly to the favourable notice of the C. in C.

21. Capt. Maunsell, comdg. the sappers, is worthy of every praise I can give him, and is well known to his lordship; he has rendered me most willing and able assistance since the time of his joining my column, and, with his sappers, is a very great help to me. He is now engaged in the heavy work of destroying the fort of Mittoulee, on the completion of which I will more fully allude to the valuable services of this officer. I must beg to be allowed to bring to his lordship's notice, in conjunction with Capt. Maunsell's services, the name of Lieut. Humphrey, adj. of the sappers, who had volunteered to undertake the important but dangerous duty of blowing open the gate of the fort in case of an assault.

22. To Lieut. col. Custance, C.B., I feel indebted for the manner in which he disposed of his cav., and kept my flanks completely protected. On Capt. C. Jones, com. H.M.'s 1st batt. 60th rifles, and his officers and men, I cannot bestow too much praise; in bringing Capt. Jones's name to his lordship's notice, I am sorry to be obliged to add that he received a severe contusion from a round shot, just as it was getting dusk; on Capt. Jones being wounded the command of the regt. devolved on Capt. McQueen. I hope it may not be out of place for me to add that the 60th rifles, although employed on bad ground, under most harassing circumstances, performed their duty with great willingness and cheerfulness, and with a degree of order and precision that would have done credit to a review parade; to every officer and man of that regt. I wish to tender my best thanks.

23. I also offer my best thanks to Col. Hay, c.b., comdg. 93rd Highlanders, and Capt. Hockly, comdg. 66th Goorkahs, who with the men under their respective commands carried out all the duties allotted to them to my entire satisfaction. It is my pleasing duty again to bring to his lordship's notice Capt. Cureton and his regt. of Mool-tanee cav.

Commanding officers and men are always willing and ready to perform any duty, whether fighting the enemy, seeking information, or whatever may be required of them. Whatever they undertake they perform right well.

24. To my own personal staff, viz., Brev. maj. Cox, maj. of brig. to the col., Capt. C. Warde, offg. dep. qtr. mr. gen., Lieut. Prendergast, orderly officer, I beg to tender my best thanks for their services, and for the ready and efficient aid they gave me on all occasions throughout the entire day.

25. To Capt. Law, sub. asst. comy. gen., I am deeply indebted, and thank him for the excellent arrangements he made under considerable difficulties for provisioning the force, and wish to bring him prominently to the notice of the C. in C. as an excellent commissariat officer.

26. Doctor Tienin, senr. surg. of the force, ably and readily assisted by the other medical officers of the column, made all their arrangements entirely to my satisfaction, and my best thanks are due to them for the manner in which all the medical arrangements were carried out.

27. It is now with great satisfaction that I record the obligations I feel myself under to Mr. Balmain, Lieut. Clarke, and Capt. Wm. Hearsay, civil officers with my column, for the ready and cordial assistance they have rendered me, in an unknown and difficult country, where the greatest judgment is necessary in testing the information received from doubtful sources.

Capt. Hearsay, in a bad state of health, has at all hours of the day and night being engaged in his duties connected with the intelligence department, though suffering from great pain, and unable to mount a horse; I beg therefore that I may be allowed to solicit his lordship's interest and most favourable report to Government of this meritorious officer.

Comdg. Moveable Col.

MR. E. J. THACKWELL.—At a pension of the Society of Gray's-inn, held on the 26th of January, Mr. Joseph Thackwell, the first son of Lieut.-General Sir Joseph Thackwell, c.b., was called to the bar. Mr. Thackwell was, until within the last few months, in the army, and is favourably known as the author of "The Second Sikh War," in which he served as aide-de-camp to Sir Joseph Thackwell.

REAR-ADMIRAL HOPE, c.b., proceeds, by the mail of the 4th of March, from Southampton, to take naval command in the East Indies, relieving Sir Michael Seymour, who retires from ill-health.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, Feb. 11, 1859.

A GREAT STRATEGIST.

How much longer will the British public submit to be blindfolded by the Times and its "Special Correspondent?" How much longer is the conduct of military operations in India to be confided to an obtuse, obstinate old man, simply because he is hospitable to a Times reporter? Is the suppression of the mutiny to be protracted for an indefinite period, in order to furnish the Homer of the Lyceum Pantomime with materials for celebrating the wonderful strategy of the great M'Liver? Already the finances of India are unequal to the strain caused by the unnecessary presence of such a vast European force. Already is another loan of at least seven, probably of ten, millions sterling required to cover the excess of expenditure over receipts. Already there are no fewer than eighty-two regiments of the line, three battalions of rifles, and thirteen regiments of cavalry, besides artillery and engineers, serving under the chief command of a general whose combined courage and imbecility render him worthy to rank with the British generals who flourished in the American War of Independence. And now we learn that ten additional batteries of artillery are under orders to proceed immediately to the East, while reinforcements are being continually despatched to maintain this legionary host at its full complement. It is not men, however, that are wanted, but a general. Vis, consili expers, mole ruit sua. Send out a hundred thousand men if you will, but what will it avail without a head to direct them? There is no occasion for more artillery. There are already guns enough and to spare, and men sufficient to work them. Indeed, it may be questioned whether any but the very lightest guns are not now an encumbrance rather than an advantage. The rebels are almost totally devoid of that arm, and have lost all heart to stand by their artillery if they possessed any. A swift and unceasing pursuit is all that is now wanting to effect their complete dispersion. A handful of Europeans, armed with Enfield rifles, mounted on camels and elephants, and supported by a small body of cavalry, would now be equal to cope with any troops the rebels can bring into the field. There is no call for strategical manoeuvres that leave fords unguarded and jungles accessible. A dashing onslaught carries more terror into the hearts of the discomfited enemy than the most scientific combinations, or the most brilliant word-painting in the leading journal. Wherever British officers have been permitted to act on their own judgment, unfettered by instructions from "Army Head Quarters," a series of decisive successes has ever marked their progress. Are examples demanded? Look at the triumphant marches of General Greathed, Sir Thomas Seaton, Sir Hugh Rose, General Roberts, and so many other active and efficient commanders. It is a painful duty to animadvert on the shortcomings of a veteran, whose personal gallantry has so often and so conspicuously been displayed. But something more than mere valour is now wanted. Audacity and rapidity of movement can alone bring the campaign to an early and prosperous conclusion. As these qualities are not to be expected in the present Commander in Chief, we respectfully submit that it is incumbent on her Majesty's Ministers to insist on his immediate recall, and his supersession by a younger and more vigorous leader, and one who better appreciates the true character of Indian warfare. The Times and its Special Correspondent might possibly be offended; but, on the other hand, the final suppression of the disturbances, and the restoration of the finances by a large reduction of the army, would certainly ensue.

INDIAN FINANCE.

THE City articles of the Times carry much weight, and generally are based on good intelligence, and display correct views. But the note of alarm sounded by its correspondent on Wednesday on the subject of Indian finance, and which appeared in the Times of Thursday, is not characterised by these qualities. We quite agree in the writer's observations as to the necessity of setting a limit to the grant of guarantees of five per cent., or any other rate of interest, to the projectors of works pretending to be of urgent public benefit, and of certain reproductive profit. The market of London, rich as it is in capital, cannot bear straining beyond a certain limit; and that limit has been reached, if it has not been exceeded, by the guarantees already given to railways that will cost more than fifty millions to complete. The portion of the East Indian line that has been constructed, though the most expensive, from proximity to Calcutta, yields, nevertheless, seven per cent. in the working; and we have little doubt that the traffic up to Delhi on this great line will prove remunerative. Still at each successive call for fresh capital the price of the stock falls, showing evidently that the market will not take off more than has already been sent into it. There cannot be a clearer indication of the folly of forcing on new schemes when this, the very best of those afloat, shows such weakness; and we quite go along with the Times in warning the public and the authorities against putting out fresh schemes, and attempting to throw their guaranteed stock into the market while in such a condition.

But the Times' correspondent has discussed the finance of India also, of which he evidently knows nothing. Of the fifty crore of rupees of registered Indian debt, two-fifths are held by natives, and three-fifths by Europeans. It is only those stockholders of the latter class who are resident in England that will think of having their promissory notes enfaced for the receipt of interest in London by bills drawn there on the treasuries of India. It is a convenience to them to receive interest in that manner, and no doubt the enfaced notes will be saleable in the market here, which may give them additional value to the holders. But this will not affect the selling price in India so long as the existing loan is open, to which subscriptions are invited at a rate equal to six per cent. Native holders will not sell to Europeans for encasement, but English capitalists who wish to embark their capital in this kind of investment because of the encasement benefits will subscribe to do so, and thus give the Indian Government the additional means it wants. There is no doubt that the prospects of Indian finance are not very flourishing just at present; but how can they be so while the Government is maintaining a force of 100,000 British troops there, and most of them in the field, and on field allowances, in place of the 25,000 or 30,000 that used to be paid out of ordinary revenues when the income of India was barely sufficient to meet the current expenditure? Let this drain cease, and we doubt not the ability of India again to support her own expenditure. To meet it while it lasts will require a recourse to the loan market, both there and here. We shall learn from Lord Stanley on Monday what demand he means to make for the year on this market. Of course if there should be a fresh issue of debentures on the same terms as last year their selling price will fall, but we doubt if that price will be at all affected by the enfacing privileges of the Indian Registered Stocks, for the debentures are held by quite a different class of capitalists, and not for purposes of fixed investment, as is the case with the promissory notes of the Indian Government, whether enfaced or not.

THE REBELS AND THE AMNESTY.

A curious illustration has lately been afforded of the distrust entertained by the rebels with respect to the spirit and operation of the proffered amnesty, and of the general inefficacy of proclamations addressed to a suspicious, because unscrupulous, people. On the 19th of November, 1858, a body of rebels, consisting of five hundred sepoy, one hundred sowars, and one hundred ragabonds, under the command of Hurkissen Sing, descended from the hill country into the jungles of the Shahabad district. Their progress was marked by the wanton murder of a mail driver and three native police constables at the point where they crossed the Grand Trunk Road. A few days afterwards they sent an Eurasian woman, whom they had taken prisoner, to Major Fowler, commanding at Jugdespore, to ascertain the precise nature of the terms of the amnesty. At that time Major Fowler was not aware of the murders they had so recently committed, and accordingly forwarded a copy of the Proclamation, with a summons to come in on the morrow and give up their arms. This was on the 24th, and a little after midnight Mr. Alonzo Money, magistrate and collector of Shahabad, arrived at Jugdespore from Arrah with twenty-six men of the mounted European police, and nine of the Military Train. At an early hour of the morning of the 25th Colonel Walter also appeared on the scene, having made four long marches from the foot of the hills. Just then it was announced that the rebels had gone off to the northward, and the whole force immediately started in pursuit. The fugitives were soon brought to bay in a village near Muhoolan. In the hope of gaining time they sent out a messenger to request that the British force would retire to Jugdespore, while they discussed the propriety of accepting the amnesty. This modest request was, of course, peremptorily declined; but Mr. Money proposed that some of their number should meet Colonel Walker, himself, and three other gentlemen, under a tree some six hundred yards from the village, when the conditions of the amnesty should be fully explained to them. No answer being returned, Mr. Money took the bold step of advancing, accompanied only by a Sikh Ressaldar, towards an embankment, behind which the rebels were seen, in order to open a parley. When about fifty yards from their position he halted, and made signs that some one should meet him, when one of the leaders invited him to approach nearer. He did so, and then five horsemen rode forth and drew their swords, but made no other hostile demonstration. After a few words of encouragement from the English magistrate, the five sowars, and a sepoy armed with a musket, came sufficiently near for the purposes of conversation. The conference began by Mr. Money telling them that if they were disposed to surrender, and would send two or three of the Sirdars, or chief men, and eight or ten sepoy, to the tree previously indicated, in a quarter of an hour, he would afford them the fullest explanation of the meaning of the Royal pardon. One of them, Ram Narain Sing by name, replied that nothing could be done in a quarter of an hour; but if the British force would return to Jugdespore, an answer should be forwarded in the course of the night. This cool proposition being at once declined, he suggested that the force should fall back at least two or three miles, to give his companions an opportunity for consultation. Mr. Money promptly replied that he had not come to discuss conditions, but to remove any doubts they might entertain as to the meaning of any particular expressions in the Proclamation, and then remarked, "You are now without much choice: you can do nothing but run before the troops of the Sirkar (the Government), and you should therefore appreciate the more the goodness which gives you safety and life." Ram Narain Sing's answer was remarkable, as showing the impression conveyed to the native mind by the promise of pardon. "You are harassed," said he, "as well as we. The war has been going on a whole year for you as well as for us, and it is your interest therefore as well as ours to put an end to it." To this Mr. Money indirectly assented, but added:—

"There is this difference, you cannot fight any longer. The Government has more troops than ever; as it beat you when you were strong, it could, if it chose, now destroy you all: these are mere words, and we have not come here to talk. I came to tell you what kindness and mercy the Queen has determined to show you: you can accept it or refuse it, as you please." One of the other men then called out, "If we do give up our arms what guarantee have we that we shall not be killed afterwards?" Mr. Money answered, "the guarantee of the word of the Government which has never told you what is false." "Why then are we rebels?" cried out another man. The sepoy then came forward in front of the sowars and said, "I am a padre; I rebelled for my religion. What do I get by the amnesty?" "You get pardon for your rebellion," said the magistrate, "if you think that is not enough you need only remain where you are, and at the end of the quarter of an hour after my return to the tree we shall attack you, then what will be, will be." Three or four of them waved their swords, and said, "Return; we cannot accept your conditions." "You sent to me," replied Mr. Money, "and I will adhere to what I said. I give you one quarter of an hour, if within that time you do not meet me you will be attacked."

While this singular parley was going on several more sepoy and sowars approached to within earshot, and listened eagerly to what was said. Mr. Money then went back to the tree, and, as he naively remarks, was very glad that no one took a shot at him when his back was turned. After the lapse of half an hour a second conference took place, and we cannot do better than transcribe Mr. Money's own narrative of the proceedings:—

"I said, the Queen, having taken the government of the country into her own hands, had determined to show kindness and mercy to all her ryots, and had, therefore, forgiven the crime of rebellion to such as should surrender and retire to their homes; that this pardon, a full one to the sepoy, was not so to the sirdars; that the word 'sirdars' did not mean sirdars of the old army, such as subadars and non-commissioned officers, but such as had been leaders among the rebels: that all murderers of English men, women, or children were also exempted from pardon; and I then added, 'This proclamation was promulgated twenty-five days ago; I sent it to you on the hills, through Rut Bunjun Sing, who has relatives and friends among you. My deputy magistrates sent many copies also to you. You, therefore, knew of it; and yet, knowing it, aware of the great kindness shown you, you, four days ago, murdered, without provocation, three burkundazes, Government servants, and a mail-driver. This cannot be forgiven. Your rebellion is forgiven to you; but these murders are the guilt of all, unless you give up the men who with their own hands killed the burkundazes, and the man or men who ordered the murder to be committed. I cannot,' I said, 'receive your submission, and declare you freely pardoned, until this is done; and to do it I give you one hour.' One of the men in red, either Ram Narain Sing or Debee Ojah, exclaimed, 'What are three or four men killed, more or less. I (or we) have committed many other murders.' I said, 'The difference is this. These murders were committed after the terms of the amnesty had been made known to you.' 'We never knew of the amnesty,' they said, 'till we had left the hills, or we would not have committed these murders.' I answered, 'I could not believe that, but upon the murderers being made over to me I would ascertain that fact, and that, if proved, it would have some effect upon the sentence I should pass.' 'Well,' they said, 'we'll think about that.' 'But,' said one, 'all these matters will take a long time to arrange. Move your force back to Jugdespore and we will send you an answer to-morrow.' 'I have already said that cannot be, you must accept or refuse the amnesty within an hour after our conference. If we retired to Jugdespore, I should probably to-morrow morning hear of you as being on the other side the Ganges.' At this they all laughed like men detected. One man again asked the same question as was asked of me at first. 'How do we know when our arms are all given up that we shall not be hanged?' I said, 'You know it, first, because the Government has never told you a lie; secondly, because English gentlemen speak the truth, and I promise you no one shall harm you; and thirdly, because you must have heard that since the 1st of November I have released some fifteen rebel sepoy who were in gaol. What more proof can you want?' 'It's true, it's true,' they said. 'But,' remarked one man, 'when we have given up our arms and gone home, complaints of looting and plundering, &c., will be brought against us, and we shall be put into prison.' I said, 'of course, that may be; but these complaints will not hang perpetually over you. I have fixed a limit for the institution of such complaints.' 'Yes, but we shall be imprisoned. Any man can bring a true or false case against us to put us in gaol.' 'True,' I answered, 'but, on the other hand, if you don't surrender, you'll be hunted to death.' 'And if we do surrender,' said Debee Ojah, one of their leaders, 'what will be done to the sirdars?' 'That depends,' I answered, 'on their conduct while leaders. Those who have merely held posts of authority and committed no great crimes or oppression will be treated leniently, the others severely.' 'Will they be imprisoned, and irons placed on their legs?' 'Yes,' I answered, 'in many cases; and in the worst they will be transported across the sea.' 'What sort of an amnesty is that,' said a young fellow, a brother of Hurkissen Sing; 'if you proclaim a pardon it should be to all alike.' 'No,' I answered; 'those who have spoilt the sepoy must be punished.' A sepoy then asked, 'What would be done to subadars and jemadars?' I answered, 'Subadars and jemadars of the Company's army receive full pardon as such; but if they have held any high command among the rebels they will be tried as leaders. Those who merely held such command and were not distinguished for any gross cruelties or oppression will be leniently dealt with. In short,' I added, 'the meaning of the amnesty and the intention of the Queen are kindness and mercy (Meerbanee Warahum); and if you understand your own good you will desist from your rebellion and your folly, and surrender your arms, first giving up the men who committed the murder on the Trunk Road.' I thought I could see that what I said made an impression upon the sepoys. The men in red, I fancy, observed this also, for one of them called out, 'We have muskets and swords, and can fight; and this Proclamation offers us punishment and imprisonment.' 'It gives you life,' I said, 'and what hope have you in rebellion; you have been driven out of this district into the hills, and out of the hills again. Here are troops ready to attack you, and you know more will come; what can you do? You are but some five hundred men, and you can get no reinforcements.' 'We are a thousand fighting men,' cried out a sowar, who had shortly before, in answer to a question of Saadut Khan, said he belonged to the 3rd Cavalry, and mutinied at Meerut. 'Yes,' said Hurkissen Sing's brother, 'we will fight; and so saying, he flung up his turban and waved his sword. The sowars then began to move off, but seeing the sepoys still hesitating, I said, 'I'll do what I promised, and give you an hour to consider, provided you do not move from the village; if you move you will be attacked at once.' The rebels then returned, and we did the same. Presently three or four men on horseback again came into the plain; I met them, and we talked for a few minutes. The conversation was a mere repetition of the former one; the hitch was evidently the doubt that hung upon the fate of the leaders, who wanted to get the same terms as the sepoys. Again, twenty minutes later, three more men on horseback advanced, and with Saadut Khan I rode to meet them. The two men in red were there, and a third man in white. On this occasion the demeanour of the rebels was much more respectful than before. They all saluted me as I came up. The man in white said, 'The Baboo sent his salam.' 'What Baboo?' I asked; 'Hurkissen Sing?' 'No, Ummar Sing.' 'What is he here?' 'Yes; he sends his salam; he says he has well considered what you said, and which has been repeated to him. He quite appreciates the kindness and mercy of the great Queen. But this is all new to him; he never heard it before. He cannot do anything at once; if you will return to Jugdespore, he will send you an answer there very soon.' 'Tell him,' I replied, 'if he is really with you (which assertion turned out to be false) that he cannot know more than he knows now, and than he knew some time ago. Tell him, also, he must make up his mind quickly, for half of the hour is passed.' I added: 'Remember, too, that this amnesty is not only for Shahabad, but for all Hindostan; if you escape out of this district, and get across the Ganges (though I tell you I have taken measures to shut that road up), you will perhaps find your brothers giving up their arms in the northern districts.' 'True, we know that,' was the answer. Again the man in red asked 'why the leaders should not be forgiven as well as the sepoys?' but I told them I had said all I wished to say, and we parted."

An hour and a half having elapsed without any apparent result, the British force advanced to the attack which the rebels did not stop to receive, but sought safety in superior rapidity of movement. Although this conference failed of its immediate object, it is not less creditable to Mr. Money that he should have risked his life to spare the further effusion of blood. It is also of great service in demonstrating the futility of any appeal to the better feelings of the sepoys. In their despair they refuse to believe in mercy, and distrust the possibility of their abominable crimes being ever forgiven. They evidently regard the amnesty as a snare, and it is not a little significant of the popular detestation of our law courts, that they should dread the trumping up of false charges and consequent imprisonment. In short, the general tenor of the observations made on this occasion is by no means flattering to our amour propre, as indicating a total loss of the confidence formerly placed in the word of a British officer, and in the assurances of the British Government.

MILITARY PAY will be issued at the Treasury, East India House, on Monday, February 14th, and following days.

THE QUEEN has conferred the honour of knighthood upon Joseph Arnould, Esq., Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Bombay.

RETROSPECTIVE RANK.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—As one interested, permit me to ask, through the medium of your columns, if the provisions of the revised Royal Warrant, which accords to all lieutenant-colonels of 1854 retrospective rank as colonels on the 28th Nov., 1854, are to be extended to H.M.'s Indian forces? I am a lieutenant-colonel in the latter arm of 1852, and, consequently, a colonel of 1855; but as I am (pro tem. only, I trust) superseded by lieutenant-colonels of 1854 becoming colonels of that year, the effect of such supercession needs no illustration where the higher commands in these days of innumerable brigades are of importance and in question.

Yours obediently,

ENQUIRER.

[No chance of such a thing, at least for the present.—Ed. A. I. M.]

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

REGIMENTAL CHAPLAINS IN INDIA.

MR. KINNAIRD begged to ask what permanent increase to the regular Bengal establishment of chaplains to the Protestant troops had been made during the last twelve months, and whether it was the intention of the Government to make any further permanent increase, in consequence of the probability of a much larger English force than formerly being kept in India?

LORD STANLEY said that up to September, 1857, the permanent strength of the establishment of chaplains of the Church of England was: in Bengal, 68, Madras 35, and Bombay 26, making 129 in all. Since that time they had been increased from 68 to 80 in Bengal, from 35 to 40 in Madras, and from 26 to 30 in Bombay, making 150 in all, or an increase of 21. The whole of that increase had taken place within the last twelve months. In addition, ten supernumerary chaplains had now been sent out to meet the urgent wants of the troops, who were not placed on the permanent establishment, but would be absorbed into it. There had also been an increase of Presbyterian chaplains from six to thirteen.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 8.

MEDALS FOR INDIA.

In reply to a question by Mr. Laurie, General PEEL repeated the statement he made last year that a medal would be granted to the troops serving in India, with special clasps for Delhi, Lucknow, the relief of Lucknow, and the garrison of Lucknow. Seven regiments of infantry and one of cavalry, whose term of foreign service expired last year, will shortly return to this country.

MUTINY AT MEERUT.

Colonel SYKES moved an address for copies of correspondence and of the proceedings of the Court Martial at Meerut, in April, 1857, upon eighty-five troopers of the 3rd light cavalry, and correspondence and other documents relating to the 36th regiment of Bengal N.I. having at Umballa, in March or April, 1857, expelled from their caste those of their comrades engaged in learning the Enfield rifle practice. He detailed at considerable length the facts connected with the transactions in question, contending that the papers already laid before the House gave an imperfect and a partial view of them.

LORD STANLEY promised to write to India for the papers, but recommended that the motion should be in the meantime withdrawn; which was accordingly done.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FEB. 9.

COLONISATION AND SETTLEMENT (INDIA).

On the motion of Mr. EWART, it was ordered that the select committee on colonisation and settlement (India) do consist of eighteen members:—Mr. William Ewart, Mr. Baillie, Mr. Campbell, Mr. De Vere, Mr. Gregson, Mr. Kinnaird, Mr. Knight, Mr. Lowe, Mr. Lygon, Mr. Arthur Mills, Mr. Nisbet, Sir Erskine Perry, Mr. Richardson, Mr. Danby Seymour, Mr. John Benjamin Smith, Mr. William Vansittart, Mr. Villiers, and Colonel Sykes.

NAVIGATION OF THE INDUS.

The first vessel of a series, which is destined and expressly constructed for the river traffic of the Indus between Hyderabad and Mooltan, was tried down the river on Monday the 7th, in the presence of a numerous party of scientific gentlemen and some of the directors of the Scinde and Punjab railways, to whose enterprise it is due that steamers really fitted for Indian river navigation are at length being adopted. The difficulties which have hitherto lain in the way of keeping up continuous communication along the waterways of the Indian empire during the dry season have been chiefly, if not entirely, mechanical ones. Steamboats for such service, indeed, require the perfect reconciliation of what at first sight appears to be almost impossible conditions, such as great power, high speed, and ample stowage for cargo, with less than two feet draught of water. The directors, therefore, of the new flotilla company wanted a vessel combining, in the best way it could, the many opposite qualities required for the navigation of the river. The engineer of the company, Mr. Yarrow, being aware of the peculiar nature of the difficulties to be overcome, and having obtained all the information which the limited experience of Indus navigation would yield, decided that it was necessary that the steam flotilla for such traffic must be composed of vessels able to pass all bars and shallows by only drawing two feet of water, and that they must further have a speed of twelve miles an hour, be 200 feet long and thirty-eight feet wide, in order to convey the goods and passengers, and, above all, that they must be of sufficient power to be able to tow barges and river boats up the stream with them. Plans and specifications of the requisites were accordingly prepared, and the company invited the competition of engineers and shipbuilders. Of all the designs sent in Mr. Scott Russell's was selected, and that eminent builder was accordingly directed to construct the first vessel of the flotilla, in order that it might be tested by experience as to how far the mechanical difficulties in its structure had been overcome. This vessel, therefore, was yesterday for the first time tried down the Thames, and the result of the trip was in the highest degree satisfactory, surpassing even the expectations which had been formed as to speed, power, &c. The boat in appearance is precisely like the American river steamers, flat bottomed, square shaped, and with a deck-house which almost covers the entire vessel. Her length over all is two hundred feet, breadth thirty-eight, draught of water one foot ten inches. As a passenger boat, and with average cargo, her speed is equal to little over thirteen miles an hour, and with boats containing five hundred tons cargo in tow she can be depended on to average eight miles an hour on the Indus. The hull is constructed in a peculiar manner, in order to carry the weight and sustain the propelling power of large machinery. Two longitudinal wrought-iron girders run the whole length of the vessel, rising nearly ten feet above the deck, so as to form the walls of the deck cabins. The girders constitute the main strength of the hull, and are applied in a manner peculiar to Mr. Scott Russell, and which he has already employed in the construction of the Great Eastern and other vessels where great strength and great length are necessary. The engines of the vessel are nominally of 120 horse-power, and though only constructed to work up to 400, in reality, in the indicator, give more than 600. They are constructed on Mr. Russell's three-cylinder principle, which bids fair soon to become the only one in use, whether for paddle or screw engines. During the whole of the trial, though these engines sometimes exerted their full power against a head wind and strong tide, they worked with the most perfect ease, and with very little of that vibration generally produced in vessels of large power and light draught of water. Mr. Scott Russell undertook that the draught of water, when laden with passengers, and an average cargo of 350 tons, should not exceed two feet. On Monday, however, when in this trim, her draught was almost under 1 foot 10 inches, and forward scarcely 20 inches. The satisfactory nature of the principles on which she has been constructed was considered as conclusively proved, and a greater thickness and strength of hull will be allowed to the other vessels of the flotilla which will shortly be constructed and despatched to India as soon as finished.—Times.

BOOKS.

The Life and Times of Carey, Marshman, and Ward. By J. C. Marshman. In two vols. London: Longman and Co.

The Serampore Missionaries have been fortunate in finding such a sympathetic chronicler of their labours and triumphs as Mr. John Clark Marshman, himself the son of not the least distinguished member of the Mission. Although the greater portion of this voluminous narrative is of a character chiefly to interest the sectarian denominations, there is also much to rivet the attention and command the respect of the general reader, whatever may be his peculiar profession of faith. The story of the humble beginning, the long struggles, and the final success of the Baptist Mission at Serampore, is full of encouragement to all who engage in arduous enterprises, with a full consciousness of the rectitude of their purpose. It is impossible to peruse, however cursorily, Mr. Marshman's account of the almost superhuman patience, meekness, and perseverance of the three large-souled men whose lives he has so feelingly illustrated, without experiencing a profound admiration for those who "Knew how sublime a thing it is,

Their earnestness in a cause which they regarded as that of their Divine Master could alone have enabled them to endure with such touching humility the misrepresentations and contumely to which they were so unjustly subjected. Their total abnegation of self, the purity and simplicity of their lives, and the high courage with which they faced every difficulty and danger, were worthy of the earliest ages of the Christian Church. Looking back from our present stand-point of knowledge and experience, it seems almost incredible that the motives of these worthy men should have been so pertinaciously misconstrued, and their actions so cruelly maligned. It is curious, too, to observe how completely the predictions of their enemies have been contradicted by the inevitable progress of events. At the same time, an obvious inquiry obtrudes itself on the mind of the reader, as he compares the actual results with the expenditure of human energy and of human treasure since Dr. Carey's arrival in India in 1793. It is, no doubt, a commendable thing to offer the truths of Christianity to Hindoos and Mahomedans, but how much more practical good might have been done had these earnest men devoted themselves to the Christianising of their fellow-countrymen at home. It was the perusal of Captain Cook's "Voyages Round the World" that first led Dr. Carey "to contemplate the moral and spiritual degradation of the heathen, and to form the noble design of communicating the gospel to them." Had he looked around him in his own town, he might have contemplated a moral and spiritual degradation not less intense or less to be regretted. But it is the attribute of certain temperaments that they remain unaffected by the ordinary and real phenomena of social life, but are roused almost to fanaticism by whatever appeals to their imagination. Thus the humble preacher, whose poverty compelled him to labour with his own hands to obtain his daily bread, overlooked the moral and spiritual destitution festering around him, while he fixed his eyes afar off on the naked and benighted Hindoo washing away his impurities in Ganga's holy waters. But passing over this aberration of their mental vision, we cannot refuse our belief in their perfect sincerity. They acted in strict accordance with the dictates of their conscience, and accepted without a murmur all the hardships and persecution which followed them to the grave. Their success in making converts was certainly not calculated to encourage them to persevere. It took seven years to make a single proselyte, and this one a few days afterwards returned to his native village and apostatised. Similar disappointments perpetually pursued them, and yet they persisted without despondency as if secure of ultimate success. But our limited space forbids us to undertake a critical review of the progress of the Christian missions in Bengal, nor is it necessary to do more than refer those who are interested in such matters to Mr. Marshman's excellent history of the three great pioneers of Christianity in British India.

MODERN DOMESTIC MEDICINE.

Forming a Comprehensive Medical Guide for the Clergy, Families, and Emigrants.

By T. J. GRAHAM, M.D.,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons of England.

"To recommend a work like the present to our readers is only to manifest a proper regard for their welfare. The author is everywhere conscientious and candid."—Literary Journal.

"Undoubtedly the best medical work for private families in the English language. It is invaluable."—Literary Times.

"We always rejoice in an opportunity of calling public attention to Dr. Graham's 'Domestic Medicine,' which we have long considered as far excelling every publication of its class."—British Standard, Feb., 1859.

Published by SIMPKIN & Co., Paternoster-row; and HATCHARDS, 187, Piccadilly. Sold by all Booksellers.

THE SERAMPORE MISSION.

Just published, in two vols. 8vo., price 25s. cloth,

THE LIFE and TIMES of CAREY, MARSHMAN, and WARD. Embracing the History of the Serampore Mission. By JOHN CLARK MARSHMAN. London: LONGMAN, BROWN, and Co., Paternoster-row.

DR. FORBES'S HINDUSTANI WORKS.

DICTIONARY, HINDUSTANI-ENGLISH and ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI. Second Edition, greatly enlarged, and revised throughout. By D. FORBES, LL.D. In one vol. royal 8vo. cloth or half-bound.

"This edition of Dr. Forbes's Dictionary contains a greater number of words, with their explanations, than are to be found in any other dictionary in the language, and is the first time the whole of the Hindee words have been printed in the Devanagari as well as the Persian characters.

GRAMMAR of the HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE, in the Oriental and Roman Characters, with numerous Copper-plate Illustrations of the Persian and Uvayanagari Systems of Alphabetic Writing. To which is added, a copious Selection of easy Extracts for reading in the Persi-Arabic and Devanagari Characters, forming a complete Introduction to the Bagh-o-Bahar, together with a Vocabulary and Explanatory Notes. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. 8vo. cloth.

HINDUSTANI MANUAL: a Pocket Companion for those who visit India in any capacity, containing a compendious Grammar, Exercises, and Vocabulary of useful words. By D. FORBES, LL.D. 18mo.

BAGH-O-BAHAR; consisting of Entertaining Tales in the Hindustani Language. By MIR ANJUMAN, of Delhi. A new Edition, carefully collated with original Manuscripts, having the essential Vowel-points and Punctuation marked throughout. To which is added a Vocabulary, by DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo. cloth.

"The Bagh-o-Bahar is the text-book in which Cadets and Assistant-Surgeons have to pass an examination in India. This edition was prepared under the authority of the Honourable the East India Company.

BAGH-O-BAHAR; or, Tales of the Four Darweshes, translated from the Hindustani of MIR ANJUMAN, of Delhi. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. A new Edition, revised and corrected throughout. 8vo. cloth.

TOTA-KAHANI; or, Tales of a Parrot. In Hindustani. A new Edition, with the Vowel-points, &c., carefully marked, and accompanied by a Vocabulary of all the words occurring in the Text, by DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. Royal 8vo. cloth.

ORIENTAL PENMANSHIP; an Essay for facilitating the Reading and Writing of the Ta'lik Character, as generally used in the East in Persian and Hindustani Manuscripts and Printed Works, consisting of various Specimens of Fine Writing, accurately Lithographed from Original Native MSS., accompanied by Letter-press Descriptions, together with Explanatory Notes and Observations. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D. 4to. cloth.

London: Wm. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

8vo. cloth, price 12s.,

THE MILITARY ENCYCLOPEDIA; a Technical, Biographical, and Historical Dictionary, referring exclusively to the Military Sciences, the Memoirs of distinguished Soldiers, and the Narratives of Remarkable Battles. By J. H. STOCQUELER, Esq.

"Mr. Stocquer's former works, and his well-known proficiency in the military sciences, will insure a favourable reception for this very useful book, which possesses the advantage of compressing into one portable volume a vast mass of information on military subjects, arranged especially for reference. No one could be better qualified than Mr. Stocquer for such a task, and certainly he has accomplished it in a very able manner. In a volume which occupies but little room, the officer and soldier may here command at a glance the cream of many valuable works, and obtain information on almost any point of interest. This work, indeed, forms for the camp and barracks what Maugher's 'Treasury of Knowledge' represents in the counting-house; and we cannot doubt that it will obtain corresponding success."—United Service Magazine.

London: Wm. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

DR. MCCOSH'S ADVICE TO OFFICERS.

ADVICE TO OFFICERS IN INDIA.

By JOHN MCCOSH, M.D., late of the Bengal Medical Staff. Post 8vo., price 8s.

OFFICES—9, BILLITER-STREET, LONDON.

The Directors give notice, that in consequence of the great and undiminished demand for steam-vessels upon the Indian rivers, and the wide field presenting itself for their profitable employment, they have resolved to double the capital of the Company.

The Directors have the satisfaction of announcing that the steamers and barges, consisting of twelve vessels in all, which they forwarded from this country in August last, have now arrived safely in India, and will commence plying upon the rivers without delay. An equal number of vessels of still greater power is at present in preparation, and will be sent out as soon as possible.

Before embarking in the present undertaking the Directors had not only satisfied themselves of its eminently profitable nature, but they had secured for it the marked co-operation of the Indian Government, by the acquisition of a subsidy; and the Government, both by the gift of land for stations, workshops, and depots, of wood for fuel, and in every other way, has rendered every possible aid to the present undertaking. At the same time, the Directors have insured complete exemption from Government control or interference; and this is the only Company so distinguished which possesses any Government support.

The Directors have the satisfaction of finding that not only the Reports of the Company's servants in India, but the whole concurrent testimony of the advices received from that country, through whatever channel, completely confirms the favourable anticipations they long since formed of the profitable character of the present undertaking. It would be impossible, however, within the limits of an advertisement, to recapitulate the numerous evidences of this truth which the Directors are constantly receiving; and they content themselves, therefore, with giving the following quotation from a recent leading article in the Times, which shows that similar information had been reaching that paper through its Indian correspondents.

"It is not only Government but the whole nation that seems remiss. Any day during the last year we might have filled our columns with the complaints of shipbuilders at the decline of their trade, owing in a great measure to the happy termination of the Russian War. But what do we now hear from India? They wonder there what our shipbuilders are about. Month after month they are expecting the steamers that are to come. 'The Indian General Steam Navigation Company declares this month,' says our correspondent, 'a dividend of 100 and upwards per cent. The Home Government had been requested to send out six river steamers, and it had sent out only one, which, it said, would be enough. Next month,' continues our informant, 'the Indian Government had to engage all the freight of six for two trips at a price which would have bought the new vessels wanted twice over.' There is room and work, we are told, for 300 steamers on the Ganges alone, flowing, as it does, through a territory with a population of 850 to the square mile, with an export trade of £16,000,000, and an internal trade beyond human calculation. Yet, with this vast opening before us, there are found men in the prime of life, neither schoolboys nor dotards, who can waste their time in holding meetings and memorialising Government to find them customers for their shipping. Many a time ere this has war ministered to peace, infusing a quicker element into its idle, dreary soul. To this mutiny, perhaps, we owe the real opening of the Indian navigation to British enterprise, and the railways which are certain to follow. But verbum sat; we have said enough to start our shipbuilders and shipowners, if they are Englishmen."

The Directors have all along felt that neither the vessels which they have already sent to India, nor those which they have at present in preparation, could do much to satisfy the great want of Inland Steam Navigation which exists in that country. But they have also all along felt that the only safe way of entering upon such an undertaking was not to rush into it with sanguine precipitation, but to advance with gradual and cautious steps, and without being dazzled by the large prospect of profits it holds out. The first steps, however, having now been successfully taken, the whole of the existing shares in the Company having been allotted, and being at a premium in the market, and the field being so large as to require a large capital to work it in an efficient manner, the Directors are of opinion that the time is come when the capital of the Company may be advantageously increased, and they have therefore resolved to raise the capital to half a million sterling without delay.

Applications for the new Shares must be forwarded to the Directors, at the Offices of the Company, 9, Billiter-street, London, on or before the 28th day of February next; and existing Shareholders will have a preference in the allotment. A Deposit of 2s. per Share to be made on application.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer, is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discovery.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—ATMOSPHERIC CHANGES.

The keen winds, succeeding the warm moist weather so long prevailing, will have a deleterious effect on the complexion, skin, and nervous systems. Blisters, boils, rheumatism, colds, and sore throats already surround us, but yield to the early administration of Holloway's remedies. On first symptoms presenting themselves these invaluable medicines should be at once resorted to, when each and all, diphtheria included, will either be prevented altogether, or thrown off without damaging the weakest constitution. Erysipelas, blotched face, and hoarseness depart at once before the cleansing, purifying, preservative powers of these twin remedies, which royalty itself has commended, and whose well-merited praise flows from peer and peasant in every clime.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

THE FIRST NUMBER OF

THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW

(A MONTHLY REVIEW)

OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE.

IN announcing to the public the advent of a new Periodical, the Proprietors do not consider it necessary to vindicate, beforehand, their claim to any exclusive position, or to prove the existence of any special want which it shall be their aim to satisfy. They prefer at once to brave the charge of self-complacency, and to say they have determined on addressing the world, because they believe they can persuade the world to listen to them. By way of preface, however, they think it right to offer a few explanatory remarks on the several departments of Politics, Literature, and Social Science, which will month by month pass under review.

In the POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, their attention will be directed to the co-ordination of popular measures with the maintenance of the true conservative principles. They have firm faith in the excellence of the Constitution under which they live. But between those who would preserve it by a periodical re-adjustment of its parts according to the various requirements of successive epochs, and those who believe that its machinery as designed at the Revolution is adapted for all time, there is an essential and a practical difference. It is under the banner of the first-mentioned class of Conservatives that the Proprietors of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW profess to enrol themselves; and they are happy in the conviction that the Government which at present administers the destinies of this country will be found to regulate their policy by the principles of constitutional progress.

In FOREIGN AFFAIRS the Proprietors will recommend an attitude of vigilant neutrality, in the belief that the people of this country now recognise as an historical fact that British interference in the affairs of Continental nations is productive of but little good; and that the resources of Great Britain will be expended more beneficially to herself and others in maintaining inviolate the asylum which she affords to political sufferers than in seeking to promote their cause by a policy of aggression. To this end, however, it is absolutely necessary that our naval and military establishments should be kept in the highest possible state of efficiency, and papers relating to this subject will form a prominent feature in the UNIVERSAL REVIEW.

In all ECCLESIASTICAL QUESTIONS the Church of England will receive an earnest and affectionate support; and whenever her position and accidents may come under the consideration of the Legislature, the integrity of her constitution and the sanctity of her ancient creed will be firmly and vigorously upheld.

During the PARLIAMENTARY SESSION an article will appear in each number containing a condensation of the month's debates, with such comments as may serve to elucidate the topics of the day. Particular questions will occasionally be discussed separately and at greater length, but it is not anticipated that articles of this special character will be of frequent occurrence. The great public meetings that are held during the recess, and which constitute in themselves a kind of irregular Parliament, will also be treated according to their interest and importance.

In LITERATURE, the method which the Proprietors of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW intend to pursue is easily indicated. In this department they would feel still less difficulty, were they so inclined, in defining a peculiar field for their exertions. It would be possible to mark out a distinction which should separate their treatment of books and subjects, on the one hand, from the brevity and haste to which newspaper articles are necessarily liable; and, on the other, from the infrequency of publication that attaches to the regular quarterly organs of literature, and which so often prevents them from delivering their judgment, however valuable and conclusive, until the topic has been well nigh exhausted by earlier or less weighty writers. From the monthly magazines, with which they might seem likely to come into still closer competition, they might claim to be distinguished by the fact of their Review being primarily intended for critical purposes, and not—except in very rare instances—as a repository of the lighter class of articles that form the staple of most monthly periodicals. But in this respect, also, they prefer to rest their claims for public support on the broader and simpler grounds indicated in the opening paragraph. The progress of Foreign Literature will be duly noted in their columns, and all foreign works of interest introduced as speedily as possible to the knowledge of their readers.

The large class of subjects which are at present somewhat vaguely comprehended under the title of SOCIAL SCIENCE, will be carefully and conscientiously analysed in the UNIVERSAL REVIEW. But as that "Science" is obviously in its infancy, any discussions based upon it must at present be rather experimental than judicial. On the Philosophy of Society—supposing that such a philosophy exists—and on questions of social and sanitary reform, upon which so many able authorities are so widely at variance, it would be premature to promise anything like final or exhaustive treatment. It is proposed, however, under this head, to take due notice of the meetings that may be held, or the books that may be written on these and cognate subjects, and to sum up from time to time the most trustworthy results that may seem to have been attained in the progress of public opinion or of individual thought.

The signal success which has in France attended upon an experiment of a similar nature to the present, encourages the hope that a Periodical distinguished by a like preponderance of the critical element, combined with the advantage which the able conductors of the Revue des deux Mondes unfortunately do not enjoy—that of free political discussion—may meet with a support, to the consolidation of which its proprietors promise that no exertion shall be wanting, either on their part or on that of their contributors.

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL ARTICLE EVER KNOWN IN THE GROWTH AND IMPROVEMENT OF THE HUMAN HAIR IS

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, proved beyond question by its results for more than Half a Century past, and when other specifics have failed. It prevents Hair from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak Hair, cleanses it from Scurf and Dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, pliable, and glossy. In the growth of the Beard, Whiskers, and Mustachios, it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. For CHILDREN it is especially recommended as forming the basis of A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR. Its invaluable properties have obtained the Patronage of Royalty, the Nobility, and the Aristocracy throughout Europe; while its introduction into the Nursery of Royalty, and the high esteem in which it is universally held, with numerous Testimonials constantly received of its efficacy, afford the best and surest proofs of its merits.—Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d.; and double that size, 21s.

CAUTION.—On the Wrapper of each Bottle are the words, "ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL," &c., in white letters, and their Signature, "A. ROWLAND AND SONS," in Red Ink. Sold at 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz. :—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news brought by the Bombay Mail of the 25th of January is so far important that it announces the complete expulsion of the rebels from the province of Oude. Two days after capturing the fort of Mujeedia, the Commander in Chief left Nanparah with a chosen body of cavalry, horse artillery, and infantry, the last being mounted on elephants. At an early hour on the morning of the 31st of December, this force came suddenly upon the Begum's camp. Unfortunately, the infantry were some distance in the rear, and the cavalry were not sufficiently strong to do more than make a threatening demonstration. When the main body arrived at the scene of operation, the enemy was already in full retreat, with the 7th hussars in hot pursuit. So eager, indeed, were these gallant fellows to overtake their craven opponents, that they dashed into the rapid waters of the Raptree, in which several of their number were swept away. Major Horne and two privates are supposed to have been drowned, together with eight chargers. As the Raptree forms the boundary line between the British territories and Nepal, the Commander in Chief was compelled to desist from further pursuit, taking precautions, however, to prevent the return of the fugitives into Oude. It now remains to be seen how far Jung Bahadur values the good will of the British Government. All the chief leaders of the Oude rebels are in his power; will he give them shelter, or surrender them to justice?

On the 17th of January Lord Clyde returned to Lucknow, with the intention, it is said, of proceeding through Central India to Bombay. At that port his lordship will embark for Europe, to lay his laurels and his loot at the feet of a maiden fair—to whom the Lahore Chronicle assigns a name, though not a local habitation, as Miss Clutterbuck.

The pacification of Oude is spoken of as an accomplished fact. Already one hundred forts have been demolished, fifty pieces of artillery have been captured, and upwards of 300,000 stand of arms taken or destroyed. The terms of the amnesty have also been still further enlarged, and an almost indefinite period allowed for its exercise. Perhaps the wisest and most practical course would now be to offer a free pardon to all, with the exception of certain individuals, whose names should be published. Unless this be done many months may yet elapse before the different bands of desperate men melt away and escape to their respective homes.

No certain intelligence is given of the movements of Tantia Topee and Prince Feroze Shah. It is reported, however, that additional columns of troops are completing the cordon previously drawn round them. Brigdr. Showers, with a force from Agra, for instance, encountered a large number of the rebels, and easily routed them with considerable slaughter.

In the Deccan some serious disturbances have been caused by the Rohillas and Arabs. Sir Hugh Rose has therefore marched to Adjunta, to check their ravages in that quarter; but they appear to have gathered together in great force in the neighbourhood of Rissode. There they attacked and plundered the camp of the Deputy Commissioner of Berar, and offered a determined resistance to the force sent out against them by Brigdr. Hill; Capt. McKinnon being mortally wounded in an attempt to storm a village in which the Arabs had barricaded themselves, when his men fell back after losing several of their number. Finally, the enemy escaped into the jungle, so that neither party had much reason to boast of their success.

Lieut. Osborne, political agent at Rewah, who distinguished himself so conspicuously at an early period of the mutinies, has been severely wounded in a skirmish with rebels. This fine young officer engaged two sepoys, one of whom he shot dead upon the spot, and wounded the other, but was himself cut down, and only saved by the interposition of a European soldier. In Rohilcund a large force of rebels, estimated at upwards of 20,000 men, who were endeavouring to escape from Oude, were attacked and driven headlong across the Sardah; their leaders, Nurput Sing and Beni Sing, being reported among the slain.

As the best proof of the improved state of affairs in the North West, we may mention that ladies are now permitted to reside in Rohilcund and in the greater part of Oude. Not less significant is the fact that four regiments of European infantry, the 10th, 32nd, 78th, and 84th, besides the second battalion military train, are under orders to hold themselves in readiness to return to England.

Unpleasant rumours, however, are in circulation as to the internal condition of Cashmere. It is confidently stated that a conspiracy was on foot to dethrone the present ruler, or rather to shoot him as he issued from his burning palace. Several arrests and two executions are thus far the only result.

We regret to observe that a serious and disgraceful affray has taken place on the Bhore Ghaut Railway, in which a European was killed.

GOVERNMENT MESSAGES.

To James Cosmo Melvill, Esq., India-office, London, from G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, dated Allahabad, 18th January, 1859:—

Tranquillity continues to prevail in Oude. Those of the rebels who have not come in under the amnesty have either dispersed and gone to their homes, or have fled into the Terai. One body of them under Bala Sam is reported to have entered the Nepaul forests. It is known that the Nawab of Furruckabad has surrendered himself.

CENTRAL INDIA AND RAJPOOTANA.

Colonel Benson marched 140 miles in five days, attacked Tantia Topce's force, and defeated it with much slaughter, taking six elephants. Tantia was also attacked and defeated by the force under Colonel Somerset at Chuppra and again at Burrod, in the Kotah territory. Later intelligence showed that the rebels were moving in the direction of Tonk and Jyepore, and Brigadier Showers, with a column from Agra, after marching ninety-four miles in three days, came up with them at Dewsha on the 16th inst., defeated and dispersed them, killing about 300. The rebel leaders are said to have been Tantia, the Rao, and Feroze Shah.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

It has been reported that the rebel Radha Govind and his brother were both killed in the action of the 29th of December near Kurwee. On the 5th of January, Brigadier Carpenter came upon a large body of fugitives, and completely routed them. Captain Osborne, Political Agent at Rewah, has been slightly wounded in a skirmish with a body of rebels, whom he defeated. The Commissioner of Rohilcund reports, on the 16th of January, that the rebels had crossed the Sardah River from the Oude Terai into Rohilcund, but had been driven off.

No intelligence of any importance from other quarters. G. F. EDMONSTONE.

From H. L. Anderson, Esq., Secretary to Government, Bombay.

NIZAM'S TERRITORY.

Col. Hill's force had a severe action with the Rohillas and Arabs on the 15th inst., at Chicoumba, thirty miles north-west of Hingolee. The British loss was Capt. Mackinnon killed, and three other officers wounded. Sir H. Rose is at Jaulnah. The Bombay Presidency is quiet, with the exception of slight disturbances among the Bheels on the northern border of Guzerat.

H. L. ANDERSON,

Secretary to Government.

Bombay Castle, Jan. 25.

From G. F. Edmonstone, Esq., dated Allahabad, 8th Jan., 3.30 P.M.

Brigadier Smith reports, on the 4th January, that on that day Maun Sing was at Parone, while Tantia and the Rao had marched to Teilwaree, en route for Khairwara. On the 2nd January Maun Sing and Serauj Shah were at Sundeela, on the same road. General Napier reports, on the 5th January, that Tantia and the Rao, and a force said to be large, and chiefly cavalry, had marched on the 3rd January towards Madhoopore, beyond Tonk. Maun Sing was at Parone, and Feroze Shah on the road to Madhoopore. Brigadier Smith would march on the 5th to Nabargunge, and General Napier to Shahabad. Sir Robert Hamilton reports, on the 7th January, that Maun Sing of Nurrur had written to him expressing his readiness to come in.

ALLAHABAD, 11th Jan.—Major McPherson reports that on the 3rd, or perhaps the 4th instant, 3,000 of Tantia Topce's force, under a Nawab, probably Rapeen Ally, crossed the Chuosul at the Dhepeen and Pelpeldia Ghauts, from Lakhazree, en route to Jeypoor.

Brigadier Showers reached Hindown on the 8th. In communication with Captain Eden, of Jeypore, Captain Dixon, of Bhurtpore, and Dr. Matthews, of Kuroowlee. General Napier is at Sheopore. Brigadier Smith at Kilawara. Brigadier Honner, Rajpootana field force, is said to be advancing on Tonk. The accounts of the rebels are conflicting. They appear to be three separate parties, Raheem Ally, and Feroze Shah, and Tantia Topce with the Rao Sahib, all apparently advancing on Tonk and Jeypore.

12th Jan.—The following intelligence has been received, by telegraph, from Bazoda on 3rd inst. Captain Annesley requested Colonel Boyle to halt, as he expected the rebels of Solumbus to attack Khafra; on the 4th, he requested that the detachment 31st Native Infantry might remain, and the European march towards Neemuch, which it did on the 5th inst. Captain Annesley wrote for a head European to return, as it was the undoubted intention of the rebels of Solumbus, with several Bhookia chiefs, to attack Khafra without delay. The head men were sent back in consequence of this intelligence. General Roberts has assembled the regiment from Berar, Ahmedabad, and Bea Dealour; it has been subsequently reported from Baroda that he has arrived. From Captain Annesley, dated 7th instant, giving news of the action with the rebels on the 29th ultimo. The rebels of Solumbus not mentioned, and the resident of Baroda, therefore, concludes that all was quiet. Khafra on 7th instant. The Commissioner of Goruckpore reports that Balla Row, with his family and five head Bhogepore sepoys, entered Nepaul territory on the 6th instant. They gave out their intention of claiming protection from the Nepaulese authorities, and of dispersing to their homes, should protection be refused.

BENGAL.

THE CALCUTTA SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

The guarantee of five per cent. which the Government have agreed to give to the Calcutta and South-Eastern Railway Company, may very possibly in the course of a few years lead to a great change being worked in this good city of Calcutta. Without a railway, the Mutlah scheme would apparently never have come to much, and, in all likelihood, no town of any size would have arisen on the site marked out for it. Since the idea was first started, and Government was induced to countenance it by placing pilots and other public officers on the Mutlah, the mercantile community in general have evinced but little desire to avail themselves of the opportunity offered. During the first season a very few ships—three or four foreign ones, we believe—went and loaded there; but, with these exceptions, all the other vessels kept the old and beaten path, and risked the dangers of the Hooghly rather than trust to the untried attractions of the Mutlah. Since then, scarcely a single ship has approached the river, and no cargoes have been taken in or discharged there now for many months. The fact is, that our merchants having been all their lives accustomed to have their vessels in the Hooghly under their very eye, have no great wish to send them elsewhere to a place unknown to them and beyond their control. The dangers, delays, and expenses of the Hooghly are great; but then the insurance offices gladly take the risks, and all the charges connected with the ships have for years been fixed upon the footing of having these various disbursements to make as necessarily attendant on a voyage to Calcutta. Shipowners, therefore, are glad to allow matters to remain as they are, when the new port opened to them is surrounded with inconveniences.

Another great impediment in the way of any change has been the excessive unhealthiness of the banks of the Mutlah. In the cold season it is all very well. But at other times fever constantly prevails, and prostrates most of those who go there. The crews of the few ships which loaded in the Mutlah, suffered severely from this cause, and in truth the evil is so great that every office requires about twice as many men in it as are necessary in Calcutta, because on the Mutlah one-half are nearly always unable to work from sickness. For the same reason it has frequently been impossible properly to carry on the public works of clearing and laying out the site of the new town. It is not very long, as most of our readers will recollect, since a party of Sonthal prisoners, who had been sent there with the intention of allowing them to remain as settlers once the ground was cleared, deserted the place in a body and found their way back to Allipore, where they presented themselves at the gate of the jail, and begged to be taken in, as they would greatly prefer to work out their time in prison to having to live in such an unhealthy locality as they had been sent to. As the clearing advances, however, and the town becomes peopled, the unhealthiness will gradually cease, and possibly by and by the new Calcutta may become not less healthy than the old.

Although, without a railway to it, the Mutlah might very probably never have been much used, there is little doubt that with the railway it will speedily become a port of considerable resort. The attractions offered by the safety of the river, and the facility with which vessels can reach the sea, will now have their effect. The merchant who did not care to have his vessel lying miles off in the jungles, where he could not reach her without being for a couple of days absent from office, and running the risk of getting an attack of fever, will no longer object to her lying where he can at any time reach her in an hour by railway. So, while formerly he thought it more satisfactory to put his goods on board ship in Calcutta, than to send them wandering through the various unknown canals and nullahs which lead to the Mutlah, in search of a vessel lying he could not exactly say where, it will be a very different thing when he has only to have them put on a railway train and whisked away to the ship without either delay or danger. Once the railway is opened, a town will spontaneously spring up at the terminus—for wherever there is a terminus a town always does spring up, even though the locality be not very tempting. There being an actual town which can be reached in an hour or so, and seen with their own eyes, will do more to make people believe in the Mutlah and its capabilities, than all the writings and all the pamphlets and advertisements in the world. There ought not to be much difficulty in making the line, and if the works are commenced and carried on with the same energy and perseverance which have hitherto marked the conduct of the projectors of the scheme, there is no good reason why the whole should not be opened for traffic before the end of the year 1860. It is to be hoped that there will be as little delay as possible, and that the Government officials will heartily join in forwarding the undertakings. The port of Calcutta is at present overcrowded, and it will be a great relief to the existing pressure when accommodation is found in the Mutlah for some of the ships which now come to the Hooghly. For every reason we hail with much satisfaction the prospect of having the new railway. Independently of the scheme of having a new port, every mile of railway that is constructed is a blessing to the country through which it passes. It is so even where there are good roads already existing; how much more is it so when there are no roads at all, or none that are passable except in the dry season.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ASSAM.—We (Indian Mail) have received the following letter, dated Dibrughur, Dec. 10:—“Whether Cachar or Assam is the best country for the cultivation of tea, is, as far as I can make out, a moot point. As regards climate, soil, &c., both provinces are doubtless equally good. But if it is true that the immense advantage the former was at one time supposed to possess over the latter is a myth, and I have heard it whispered that such is the case—viz., the abundance of labour—I would, all things considered, and knowing what I do, give the preference to Assam. I dare say you have heard that the climate is not favourable to European constitutions, and that before settling in the country there are two things no man ought to omit to do, and those are, insure his life and make his will. This is simply bosh; and in cases where death ensues, you will generally find, on inquiry, that fever has been the result of reckless exposure on the part of the victim. It is not always so, however. There are some people who cannot stand the damp, and who are continually suffering from fever and ague. For those, and such as those, the only wise and prudent course is to take a passage in the first down steamer, and turn their backs on Assam for ever. Since the arrival of the Naval Brigade here, now upwards of fifteen months, I am not quite sure, but I do not think that there has been a single case of death from fever amongst them, which is a rather strong proof in support of my argument; though, in fairness, I must say that at Libsagur they have not been equally fortunate, and have lost several men; but then, again, they underwent a good deal more exposure. In Upper Assam the chief drawback to a tea-plantation is the scarcity of labour, especially in Dibrughur and its vicinity, where there are several tea-gardens; and as each succeeding year the demand increases, so is this dearth more and more felt. I would advise no one to invest his capital in the neighbourhood of the latter place, where there are already tea-gardens; and as each planter is steadily extending his cultivation, one of two things must happen—either that the demand will cause the supply, or the price of labour will rise considerably; and, considering the great number of coolies and bekeals required in a garden of even moderate extent, any advance on the present rates would not be a matter of trifling importance to planters. The pay of a coolie is four rupees per mensem, and one coolie for every poorah, or acre and a quarter, is, I think, about the average—at all events, for the first three years. After that the tea-plants will in a great measure keep the jungle down themselves. Some planters do not employ anything like that number; but in tea-planting, as in everything else, the cheap and nasty is bad policy. Now for the profits. I was told the other day, by a gentleman who has been several years at the trade, that a garden ought, at the expiration of the third year, to yield a profit of 20 per cent., and so on in proportion up to the fifth year; and lots of fellows will tell you that 50 and 60 per cent. is to be looked for; but, in my opinion, this is expecting too much. A remarkably shrewd man, who has lately purchased three large plantations, which bid fair to equal any in the province, is my authority for setting down the profits at 30 per cent., after deducting every possible expense, and allowing 10 lbs. per poorah for contingencies. A wide-awake fellow, with £1,500 to lay out, would do well, and might even look forward to going home at the end of seven years; but he must make up his mind to rough it, and go to work with a will, and not fancy that he will find everything ready-made to his hand, and that all he will have to do will be to sit down and smoke his pipe, and that in a year or so he will be a millionaire, with countless lakhs of rupees. I would not advise him, either, to take the scenes described in the “Arabian Nights” as a sample of what he may look forward to out here, as, if he does, he will be slightly sold, not to say disgusted. Fancy forming visions of marble palaces, lovely gardens, moon-faced houris with necks like the goose and the eyes of the gazelle, and then coming down to the dull reality of a bamboo hut, in the midst of a dense jungle, with rain for nine months in the year. 11th.—I yesterday asked a gentleman, part owner of a large concern, and upon whose opinion I place great reliance, whether what I have stated above was correct. He informed me that it was, except that he thinks I have overstated the profits. According to him, a garden ought to yield, the fifth year, £1 per poorah clear profit. The plant, if properly cared for, never gets used up, but will last for ever. The Royal Proclamation was read here the other day. The natives attended in great numbers, and the excitement was intense. An illumination in the evening, followed in its turn by a dinner at the colonel's, champagne, rum-punch, headaches, and general seediness the next morning, formed the programme. At present, theatricals and cricket are the order of the day. The Naval Brigade Eleven played the Station a short time ago, and—oh, that I should have to say it!—licked us most wofully. The return match is to come off to day; and though I strive to keep up my pluck, I have a dismal foreboding that the setting sun will witness our defeat and disgrace. P.S.—I have just time, before the mail closes, to let you know that my dismal forebodings have not proved true, and that we have gloriously defeated our opponents, with six wickets to go down.”

ANGLIS SPIK HERE.—We publish the following letter “verbatim” as it was sent to us:—“Dear Sir,—I was given to understand on my arrival to the office where I am employed, that a European has hung himself on a tree in the compound of the Nawab (named Syed Mahomed Ali alias Nawab Doolah, of Shumshabad). On my arrival to the spot I found a number of officers, soldiers, and natives present; the officers were engaged in examining the body of the soldier and writing out the report of his death. There were seven rupees and a silver ring found on the man, but the two gold rings were missing. There was a pole and a piece of a bamboo and also a rope. The latter article was round the neck, and also there was a pit dug about the length six feet, the depth was about a foot or more, his cap was hung upon the same tree. If the European had done this dreadful crime on his person, he must have an implement to dig a pit, but to our gaze there were none of the implements, not unless his boots done it, as there were some marks of mud on the tips of the boot. A European soldier would go for the sake of country. The natives will say Sahib Shurab Gaonwein khoot miltee hai. That means in English that there is plenty of mudrack to be got in the villages, for the sake of that liquor, they are prowling all over the Bazzars and dilapidated buildings. No doubt they look for a place purposely to prevent the provost from detecting them in the night. If this man had a side belt on him no doubt he would have presented his antagonist should there be any, I mean the niggers (not unless he had any other occasion to commit a suicide on himself). Mr. Editor I will be able to let you know, should there be any more of this affair hereafter.—HINDOO.”

BERAR, Dec. 27.—With reference to a former communication regarding the non-appearance of four out of six scouts that had been sent out by Captain Davies to gain intelligence of Tantia's whereabouts, I have now to inform you that these scouts made their way to Tantia's camp, and tendered him their services. They appear to have been at once suspected, and were put in durance vile, from which, after a time, they most fortunately made their escape. Their statement is interesting. They were placed under charge of a party of rebel sowars, when one of them, a knowing hand, contrived to make friends with the duffadar, one Byram Allee Khan, who told him that he formerly belonged to the 5th Hyderabad cavalry, but was now connected with Ghoolam Allee Khan of Roy Bareilly, who appears to be the sole commandant of the rebel cavalry, all their movements being directed by him. When the scouts were taken before Tantia, they were most minutely examined regarding the disposition of our troops in Berar, Booranpoor, Asseerghur, and Mhow. They supplied in reply, native like, the most exaggerated reports as to our strength in cavalry and artillery. Tantia, who is described as a middle aged man, was at the time of the scouts' examination holding his durbar in a small rowtee, with two native writers conducting his correspondence. He seemed most anxious to get hold of Captain Keatinge, political agent in Nimar, as he considered him a great thorn in his side, Keatinge having been the means of destroying his allies the Bheel Naiks in the Sindwah range. These Naiks, it appears, had promised to join Tantia Topce with some five or six thousand followers. The scouts state that there was another influential person with Tantia, who, though subordinate, still was called Maha Rajah. He is a young man, between twenty-five and thirty years old, of brown complexion, with very large eyes. He wore a girdle round his waist of solid gold, studded with diamonds and emeralds, and bangles round his wrists covered with precious stones. The scouts learnt that Tantia intended making for Poona, and claiming the gaddee in favour of Nana Sahib, and that the uncle of Nana, an aged man, with the rebel camp, would push for Nagpore with the like intent of proclaiming himself chief of Nagpore. The rebels told the scouts that the Ranees of Jhansi was still alive, keeping company with the aspirant to the Nagpore gaddee. It appears that the female killed at Gwalior, and supposed to be the Ranees, was only the head female attendant.—Madras Spectator.

SIR HUGH ROSE'S COLUMN.—On the morning of the 2nd January, Major Marsh's force, consisting of a squadron of the 3rd dragoon guards, two companies of the 18th royal Irish regiment, and half of Captain Kinloch's field battery of European artillery, arrived at Boorhanpoor, and at 9 A.M., Sir Hugh Rose having received information that the Rohillas were up in the direction of Adjunta, we received orders to march immediately, which we did at 11:30 A.M. of the same day with the following force:—the 4th (Gaye's) troop of horse artillery; one troop of the 3rd dragoon guards; head quarters and two companies of the 18th royal Irish regiment, and the mountain train, the whole under the command of Colonel Call, of the 18th R.L.—Major Marsh's force remaining in occupation of Boorhanpoor. We marched via Atowlee, Edilabad, Bodia, and Thullegaum. At the latter place Sir Hugh received some fresh information, which caused him to send on the morning of the 6th the 4th troop of horse artillery, with forty men of the 18th royal Irish, and all the camp equipage to Adjunta, the rest of the force marching in an easterly direction, crossing the Ghaut about twelve miles from Thullegaum, and halting here, which appears to be about five miles from the Ghaut. We heard that the Rohillas had been here lately, but the time stated varied very much, from twenty-four hours previously to three days. At any rate the general did not seem to think it worth while pursuing them, so we have halted here, and this morning, Jan. 10th, received all our baggage from Adjunta. The general staff went into Adjunta this morning, where, I believe, they intend remaining for the present. Some of the guns are expected here tomorrow.—Poonat Observer.

BANDA, Jan. 8.—From the plains of Punwaree and Dadree, after the thrashing the rebels got from Maj. gen. Whitlock's column, they fled south towards Kotce, in which direction Brigdr. Carpenter had been ordered to proceed from Nagode to intercept fugitives. He got news of them, and sent out a party under Col. Gottreux, of the 1st Madras N.L., consisting of 26 of H.M.'s 43rd, 55 of the 1st Madras N.L., and 30 cavalry, and 150 of the Nagode levies, with Capt. Osborne, the political agent of Rewa, and his assistant, Mr. Coles. They came upon 300 mutineers, belonging to the 8th, 49th, and other regiments, in the village of Kureereah, just at daybreak of the 2nd of Jan., and effected a most complete surprise. The mutineers, however, met them with a sharp musketry fire, and then took to their heels. The cavalry under Lieut. Gompertz, 1st Madras native infantry, however, soon headed them, and drove them back on to the Entfields of her Majesty's 43rd, who made short work of them, and the cavalry again charged into them as they retreated over some very difficult ground covered with brushwood. Some of them fought desperately. We had two Sikh sowars badly wounded, and two or three infantry men also wounded. Our party accounted for upwards of 100 of the enemy, hanged two, and kept one prisoner, who says they were commanded by a Subadar of the 38th N.I., and that they had suffered very severely in the fights at Punwaree and Dadree on the 25th Dec. Our force returned to Kotee, having marched and fought over some fifty miles that day. Capt. Osborne received a nasty sword cut on his right hand, and had a most narrow escape of his life. He was armed with only a Colt's revolver, and, seeing two pandies in a bush, shot one, when the other rushed at him with his drawn sword, and caught Osborne over the right hand when cocking his pistol. Osborne fell over a stone, and the pandy was in the act of cutting him down, when private Addison, of M.M.'s 43rd, came up and warded the blow off with his musket. The pandy was eventually accounted for, but not before the poor fellow Addison had received several bad wounds, one of which has necessitated the amputation of his left leg. Much credit is due to the intelligence department under Mr. Coles.—Delhi Gazette.

GORUCKPORE, Jan. 6.—On the 31st Dec. information was received from Goruckpore that Bala Ram, with 8,000 men and ten guns, had given Brigadier Rowcroft the slip at Toolseepore, and was marching eastward, with the intention of entering Bengal. It was very soon ascertained that he could not have got far to the eastward, and this morning authentic intelligence has been received that he did not succeed in getting further east than Dhuhoorea, on the extreme N. W. frontier of Goruckpore, and that he has taken refuge with his force in the Nepal jungles. The Begum and a large body of rebels are said to be at Sehega, a fort to the N. W. of Toolseepore, and intend likewise flying to Nepal. There is still some plundering going on in Palamow, but the plunderers appear to consist almost entirely of Hill men and Budmashes.

THE CAMPAIGN IN THE JUNGLE.—The following account of an engagement with the rebels at Bankee, in the jungle, near the banks of the Raptée, on the 31st December, has been sent us by a correspondent with Head Quarters Camp. In our last issue our correspondent's letter concluded with a postscript to the effect, that the force under the command of Lord Clyde had received orders to march that evening, the 30th, at 8 p.m., the infantry being mounted on elephants. They marched all night, and halted about 4 a.m. on the 31st, for two hours. The cavalry and horse artillery were considerably in advance of the infantry, and a portion of the cavalry brigade, consisting of the 6th dragoon guards, and two horse artillery guns, under command of Sir W. Russell, 7th Hussars, were at one time within 150 yards of the enemy's guns. In consequence of the infantry not being up in time, or the cavalry and guns being too far ahead, the latter were forced to retire under a heavy fire; there were only, however, three men wounded, and one so slightly, as not to be reported. The behaviour of the 6th dragoon guards is particularly deserving of mention. They advanced rapidly to the front over bad ground and deep ditches, where two horses were obliged to be left, and after standing under fire for a quarter of an hour, retired by alternate squadrons supporting the guns, as if it was a field day. When the infantry came up, the 7th hussars advanced through the jungle, and in the eagerness of pursuit followed the rebels into the river, a rapid stream, where Major Horne and two men 7th hussars and several horses were lost. About fifty or sixty of the rebels were killed or drowned, and many horses taken. The Nana ran away across the river at the commencement of the action, with his elephants. Our correspondent adds, "I wish you people who call this a hackery campaign, had to wear their clothes twenty-four hours, and march thirty miles and fight a battle."—1st Jan.—The affair yesterday was badly managed: we marched all night and only came about fifteen miles and halted just at the coldest time in the morning, from 4 to 6 a.m., then trotted and galloped on for about five miles, and lost the doolies and syces, and went up to the enemy's guns without infantry. The carabineers retired in alternate squadron, about half a mile, fronting with the horse artillery guns to enable them to fire. One man's cap was shot off his head; he was going to leave it behind, when the officer of the troop saw it, and told him to dismount and pick it up, which he did. There is no news of Major Horne: the bodies of the two men of the 7th hussars, who were drowned, have been brought in. Hopes are expressed that Major Horne may have got across the river, and been made a prisoner by the enemy, but in my opinion death is preferable to such a fate. Sir W. Mansfield was in command; the chief intended to come on, but his elephant, I fancy, could not get through the jungle. A false alarm occurred in camp this evening. The irregulars took to firing off their muskets to clean them, when half the force turned out, and I found the 7th hussars saddling their horses; the Punjabees and Beloochees were file firing instead of firing in a volley, and it sounded like sharp skirmishing. Sir Hope Grant is, I hear, on the other side of the Raptée. He ought to find these rebels. They say there are no villages or cultivation between this and the Nepal hills, and that the rebels must starve if they are kept within this tract for long. I am only afraid they will pardon the Nana if he is caught.—Delhi Gazette.

DELHI, Jan. 1.—Nawab Hasun Allee Khan, of the Jhujjur chiefs' family, has, I am told, been seized somewhere near Dholpoor, and sent here; this man was a great favourite of the British officers in the cantonment of Delhi before the mutiny broke out. During the siege of Delhi he also waited upon the king daily, like the nawabs of Loharoo. The natives here wonder that the chiefs of Jhujjur and Bullubgur should be punished, and their jagheers confiscated, while the Loharoo nawabs, no better than they, have been allowed to go unpunished. It is said here that we acted in punishing the one and letting off the other something very like straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. By-the-bye, Kootubooddeen Khan, the Loharoo nawab's servant, who went to fight against the British troops, has petitioned for pension, as if he was innocent.—Lahore Chronicle.

FUTTEHGHUR, Jan. 6.—Clemency seems on the ascendency here. I hear there has been an order passed to inquire into the misdeeds of the Nawab of Furruckabad. This is the miscreant who not only by his presence countenanced, but who actually passed an order for the women and children of this place to be shot down by cannon and files of these blood-thirsty cowardly sepoy scoundrels, and one poor girl the ball spared was cruelly hacked to pieces before him. He was more virulent in his conduct than any one; even the Nana was said to have been mild in comparison to this fiend in human form. If this monster is spared, I hope he will be impeached hereafter, and hanged or executed. I had a letter from Bareilly; it states the amnesty was bringing in thousands and thousands more of fanatical Mahomedans, stained with the most heinous crimes, and anticipates a time of violence will succeed after the excitement of political offences shall have subsided, a rational conclusion, should murderers and fanatical monsters of such a class be passed over scot-free.—Mofussilite.

AGRA, Jan. 12.—On Tuesday morning, the 4th of January, the brigadier was off again with a force of cavalry; and in the afternoon artillery and infantry followed, not known whither, but Futtipore Sikree proved to be the direction, and on the 6th the force was at Minbhara, on the 8th at Hindown, and their object Tantia Topee, but by the last accounts they have not yet met with him, and nobody seems to be aware of his locality. Brigadier Showers is in communication with General Napier, so we hope before this slight campaign is over that Tantia's restless spirit will be quenched. The force under Showers has a good supply of camels and elephants, supplied by the Rajah of Burtapore, to enable the infantry to go ahead with the artillery and cavalry. This is as it should be, for what use is infantry after marches of thirty or forty miles? In the brigadier's expedition to Etawa the infantry were completely knocked up, and even the cattle suffered from the fatigue, three horses and two camels dropping on the road.

MOZUFFERPORE, Jan. 8.—The rebels under Bullaram having fled into the Nepal Terai are likely to do mischief, unless timely precautions are taken. Men are not expected to feed on grass, and unless we admit that human beings can feed on grass we shall not be far wrong if we say that the districts of Sarun, Chumparun, and Tirhoot are far from safe. Guns they have, and men too, and when pressed by the calls of hunger who knows in what direction they will bend their course of devastation and ravage? Districts bordering on the Nepal jungles should be protected at once, not because that "the rebels are formidable," but simply that no encouragement should be afforded to them. To give a zest to all this, it is, moreover, reported that another large body of rebels, with the Begum at its head, is at Setiegra, determined to take the same route as Bullaram.

HEAD QUARTERS CAMP.—Colonel Christie's column, the strength of which I sent you, and which left us on the 21st, rejoined head quarters on the 4th Jan. They saw the enemy and took two guns, one of which was found and brought in by Capt. Merewether, officiating S. A. C. G., while looking for bullocks. Col. Christie, horse and rider, were shot, the horse by a bullet, and the brigadier by small shot; he fell with his horse, and his clothes were rent in twain. The political in charge tried to get a dragoon put under arrest for murder, for shooting a sepoy with arms in his hands, and would not let the commissariat officer kill bullocks to feed the men for fear of injuring the feelings of the natives. A man, the quartermaster of one of her Majesty's regiments, told the civilian that if the natives had a prejudice against bullocks being killed, his men had a much stronger prejudice against being starved. On the 4th we had a regularly wet day. Jan. 8th.—We marched ten or eleven miles this morning, and were a long time on the road, crossing a nullah with the heavy guns. Jan. 9th.—We have marched about twenty miles to-day, on our way back to Baraitch; report says, we are going towards Central India, Bundelcund, or somewhere in that neighbourhood. The 80th foot, with some Punjabees, marched on the 7th for Lucknow, with the Nawab of Furruckabad, who gave himself up with some ten guns.—Delhi Gazette.

RAJPOOTANA.—Some of the rebel thakoors that accompanied the mutinous Jodhpore Legion in their march through the territory of Marwar have returned in considerable force, and are encamped near Moondwah, in the Nagore district, after plundering three or four Khalsa villages. The Raj troops have moved against them.

LULLUPORE.—A detachment of the 3rd Bombay Europeans of fifty men, commanded by Captain Forrest, together with one troop 3rd light cavalry and one gun artillery, marched from Chundeyree on Talbehit, on Christmas-day, to escort some commissariat stores from Talbehit to Lullupore. On marching into Talbehit on the 27th December, the party received a volley from some rebels lying in ambush in a jungle, by which the 3rd Europeans lost one man, named Donovan, killed, and a party of the 24th N. I. which accompanied them had four men wounded, but the rebels immediately fled, leaving forty dead on the field, killed by the 3rd Europeans. Our force marched back here from Chundeyree on the 28th, making it in two days' march. There was a rebel chief named Myhab Sing with sixty followers marched in here on the 31st December, who gave themselves up to Colonel Liddell under the amnesty; but, most strange to say, after two days' detention they were sent back to Jacklaun—from whence they came—as I hear, to do police duty there. The weather is delightfully cool here now, and the troops are in excellent health. Our detachment has not arrived from Talbehit up to this, though they are hourly expected.—Poona Observer.

LUCKNOW, Jan. 7.—In the absence of facts odd rumours get afloat. The movements of the chief, however scientifically conducted, appear somewhat tardy, and on dit has it that our passage across the river is opposed by the Nana in person, who has thirty guns with him planted along the opposite bank, and defies our troops to attempt the feat. The chief will do so in a day or two, when his combinations are completed. Meanwhile the cordon of columns is drawn closer and closer round the last hope of the Oude rebels, and arrangements made for a contingency which has occurred so frequently as to leave a doubt even on the mind of Sir Colin that the foe may yet slip through his fingers. A large column is being formed in Lucknow, ready to turn out at a moment's notice, consisting of 600 men of the 6th drag. gds., 500 of the 80th regt., 300 of the 88th and 36th, 500 of Hodson's horse, 8 light and 2 siege guns, and probably 60 men of the Bengal yec. cav. The column appears evidently intended to intercept and cut up any fugitives who may come our way.

BARAITCH, Jan. 10.—There is a little excitement going on in this part of the world. Yesterday we were considerably surprised to see the 23rd fusiliers arrive here on their route to Lucknow. The reason of their coming was soon spread about. They brought us news that the war was over, that the chief is on his way to Baraitch, and bringing with him several sepoy chiefs, and 5,000 sepoy prisoners. Brigadier Horsford's brigade is to be kept up near the frontier of Nepal to guard the scattered hordes of rebels which are lurking about there. So the Indian rebellion and the Oude campaign have come to a close. There is, however, a good deal to be done, but no work for the European troops. The police infantry will have dirty work now. The 80th and lots of guns are expected with the chief either to-day or to-morrow, when these sepoy celebrities, amongst whom I regret to say neither the Begum nor Beni Madho, nor the Nana are, will be brought through Baraitch, on their way to Lucknow. I believe they all gave themselves up in a mass, and that it is highly probable that several thousands more will follow their example. What else can they do? They are hemmed in by Brig. Horsford and the Nepaulese, so unless the latter turn traitors, and let the sepoys through their mountain passes, &c., &c., the rebels have nothing more to do than "do or die;" and as they won't do the former, and would rather not do the latter, I think it highly probable that they will take the other alternative, that of surrendering. Among the prisoners who gave themselves up you will be glad to hear that the Nawab of Furrukabad is one. I hope sincerely that he will reap his reward. Mohamed Hossein has also given himself up. I hope soon to be able to communicate more news to you, but for the present this must do. The chief has arrived here with the 6th carabineers, H. M.'s 20th, H. M.'s 80th Belooch battalion, and F. troop horse artillery and Madras cavalry and sappers. General Grant has also ridden over to see the chief; I expect he was only accompanied by some of Hodson's horse. At Bankee Brigadier Horsford commands the 2nd battalion rifle brigade, 7th hussars, 5th Punjab, and Moir's guns. That is the latest, as well as all the news. • • • Another letter from Camp Baraitch, 10th Jan., gives us some additional items:—The chief arrived here about noon to-day, accompanied by a squadron of 6th carabineers, F. troop r.b.a., the 20th and 80th Queen's, and some Madras cavalry and sappers and miners. The 7th hussars, Moir's troop h. a., 2nd battalion rifle brigade, and the 5th Punjab rifles, have been left behind at Bankee. General Grant also came in this morning with an escort of Hodson's horse, it is supposed to have an interview with the chief. The General's column is at Bhinga, under the command of Colonel Taylor. This place has been fixed on as a station for a regiment of Europeans, &c., &c., so people confidently say, but I cannot state whether with sufficient reason. I don't think it will be healthy, however, as the country round must be a perfect marsh in the rains. As it is, there is a large jheel to the north of the town.—Delhi Gazette.

HUE AND CRY FOR TANTIA TOPEE.—CAMP BARODA, Jan. 2.—At Maithpoor, on the 27th ult., we came on the track of Tantia Topee, who, having plundered Dugs, a village, and burned some houses, was going on towards Soonsare. The whole of our brigade being mounted (the infantry on camels), we pursued him at the rate of thirty and forty miles a-day. On the 29th Dec. we came up to Benson's brigade, at Gurapoor, on the northward of this place; that brigade had an engagement with Tantia, took six elephants, with some baggage and treasure, and pursued him for ten miles or more. We kept up the pursuit, and came on him yesterday at sunrise; he having the start of us for six miles, it was with great difficulty, continual galloping for six hours, before we could get up to him, and then the horses were quite exhausted. We could not keep up the pursuit after the engagement; the lancers charged on him, and caused some damage, as also the artillery, by a few shells and grape. The infantry has done very little; the number of killed and wounded on his side is not known, on ours one of the lancers severely, but not dangerously, wounded. During the pursuit the want of provision and rest were greatly felt, in consequence of being eighteen and twenty hours in saddle every day. Amongst the camp followers, and those that happen to be left behind the column, there was such confusion regarding the road that rarely a person came in without going astray for a few miles. One of the most remarkable and perilous of these mistakes occurred to the assistant apothecary Rozario, of the 92nd, who went astray some twelve or fourteen miles to the northward, and was groping about the jungle in the dark till twelve o'clock; fortunately for him he came on Benson's brig. about six hours before ours. Several of the camp followers were plundered on the road. By this it would seem that numbers of the Tantia's men infest this part of the country, it not being safe to move about alone. Weather cool, very cloudy to-day; the troops healthy but extremely exhausted. We halt to-day, and know not where we shall go to-morrow; it depends on the movement of Tantia.—Bombay Times.

CASHMERE.—A letter from the Punjab states that reports emanating from Jummo are rife, that a conspiracy to take away the Maharajah's life has been detected. One of the Maharajah's brothers, Meea Huttoo Sing, an illegitimate son of Golab Sing, was at the head of it. The commandant of artillery was tampered with, and pretended to join, but gave notice. Meer Huttoo is in confinement, and seven of the ringleaders, officers of the Dogra regiments, have been hanged, and some hundreds of small fry are in prison. Two, if not three, of the Dogra regiments are said to be implicated—and our ally, Juhair Sing, the Maharajah's cousin, son of Dhyan Sing, is said to have the credit of it all. This, it is hoped, may be an exaggeration. The present ruler of Cashmere is not liked by his troops, and is said not to have sufficient of the devil in him to keep them and his subjects in general in good order.—Delhi Gazette, Jan. 13.

PROMOTIONS.—Sergeant T. P. Stevens, of the horse artillery, attached to the 24th (pioneer) regiment of Punjab infantry, having distinguished himself in several actions, having been specially recommended by his commanding officer, and being considered by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to be eminently deserving of reward, the right hon. the Governor General, concurring in that opinion, has been pleased to confer upon him the rank of ensign unattached, subject to the approval of the right hon. the Secretary of State for India. The right hon. the Governor General has also been pleased to confer the following promotion on the under-mentioned non-commissioned officers of the corps of sappers and miners, attached to the 24th (pioneer) regiment of Punjab infantry, for their distinguished services during the siege of Delhi and elsewhere:—Sergeant Q. S. Griffith, and Sergeant J. Copeland, to be sub-conductors.

REMOVAL OF COMMISSIONER TAYLER.—The opinion of the Court of Directors upon the case of Mr. W. Tayler, the late Commissioner of Patna, may be summoned up in a few words. They think his removal from office was fully justified by the order which he issued for the abandonment of the various civil stations in his division, although that order was issued by him after mature deliberation, and the issue of it was nothing more than an error of judgment. The Court consider Mr. Tayler highly censurable for his neglect to furnish the Lieut. Governor with information of passing events, and for his private correspondence with the sessions judge in the case of the banker Looft Allee. At the same time, they think he from the first took a correct view of the critical circumstances in which the districts of his division were placed, and that his measures for meeting the impending danger were taken with great promptitude and vigour, and the general peace of the division, in a season of great difficulty and peril, successfully maintained under him. They agree in thinking that he may again be employed in high office, but doubt whether, with reference to what occurred in the case of Looft Allee, he ought to have been made a civil and sessions judge. The Court reserves its opinion with regard to matters previous to and unconnected with the mutinies which the Lieut. Governor stated had deprived him of confidence in Mr. Tayler. On the whole, although the verdict is not one of entire acquittal, Mr. Tayler has cause to rejoice that his case has been laid before the Court of Directors, for their decision is more favourable to him than that of the Governor General, and much more so than that of the Lieut. Governor. As the case is now presented to the public, Mr. Tayler virtually stands acquitted (except in the instance of the trial of Looft Allee) of anything beyond a mere error of judgment, and he has obtained a most favourable expression of opinion as to the general conduct of his duties, from the first rumour of the mutinies up to the time of issuing the order to abandon the out-stations. We have very great doubts whether the issuing of that order deserved to be punished so severely as it has been,—but many other considerations besides that order were at work when he was removed from his office. Whether all the measures he adopted were in their details the best or not, there is no doubt whatever, that while his superiors shut their eyes to the real state of the country, and insisted upon acting as if all were, and always would be, as smooth and quiet as possible, Mr. Tayler appreciated the danger, and by his energy and the precautions he took was the saving of Patna and the surrounding districts, at a most critical and difficult time.—Hurkuru.

OUR INTELLIGENCE DEPARTMENT.—The following suggestions appear in a letter to the editor of the Delhi Gazette:—"I hope I may be permitted, through the medium of your columns, to draw the attention of Lord Canning's Government to the disadvantage which we labour under whilst pursuing Tantia Topee, by our not possessing a well-paid intelligence department. The Pindaree leader pays for information as, perhaps, no person ever did before. Indeed, the perfection in this department of the rebel army is such, that they have their information of our movements renewed, it is said by the natives, every hour in the night and day. This department of our Government is so imperfect, chiefly, I fancy, from its being unpaid, that only with the greatest difficulty can we procure rapid news of the whereabouts of the enemy. Herein lies the whole secret of our inability to catch the rebels except, as it were, by accident. We have not failed because Tantia can out-march us. No—nothing of the kind. Our comparative failure hitherto has been the inevitable—the natural result of distorted, defective information regarding the exact movements and plans of the enemy. Nor can we expect to annihilate him until by some means or other our intelligence of his whereabouts becomes more accurate and more speedy. Let our political and commandants have a free discretion in paying for news, let them pay liberally, and I'll be bound to say that Tantia's force and influence will be destroyed in a month. Would not two lacs spent in the way be the truest economy? I would enlist in this service fakeers, I would pay them only on one condition—by the job. Let the contract be made by British officers to guarantee to each man so temporarily employed a certain round sum which should be sufficient to elicit his whole heart and exertions in the cause. Let these men follow in the course of the rebels, and keep up a continuous chain of daily information with the pursuing forces in the field, so that the latter could always have puckah intelligence regarding the movements and intentions of the former. Unless our intelligence department is improved, somewhat in the manner proposed, I fear the capture of the leaders and dispersion of the followers of the rebel force, now in Rajpootana, and doing no end of mischief, is very distant indeed."

LOSS OF THE "SUTLEJ."—We are sorry to have to announce the total loss by fire of the fine passenger ship Sutlej. She was advertised to sail for London on the 26th January, but a fire broke out on board her this morning early (January 14), and by seven o'clock she was wholly destroyed. She now lies sunk in mid-channel off Fort Point. The Sutlej was a ship of 1,200 tons, and belonged to the Messrs. Green. She was very well known in this port, and has made many quick passages, but she has, on the whole, been rather an unlucky vessel, having on various occasions met with accidents, and her bad luck has attended her to the last, and brought her to a premature end. The fire is supposed to have originated from the spontaneous combustion of a part of the cargo, which, we are informed, consisted principally of jute, saltpetre, indigo, and shellac. Assistance was promptly sent from other vessels, but there was only time to save the crew. It is feared that some lives were lost, as five persons are missing.

MR. DAMPIER is likely to succeed Mr. Currie as member for Bengal of the Legislative Council. The change will be a decided improvement.

THE GERMANS IN CALCUTTA.—We (Hurkarn) are happy to learn that a design is on foot to provide for the spiritual wants of the Germans in Calcutta, especially of those who are not sufficiently acquainted with English to derive benefit from attending a place of worship in which the service is performed in that language. Of about eighty Germans residing in Calcutta, there are thirty who are thus situated. To this number are to be added about 400 sailors—Germans, with Swedes, Russians, Danes, and Dutch, who know German—belonging to vessels in this port, many of whom would gladly avail themselves of the opportunity of attending divine service, if it were performed in a language that they understood. At present it is intended to obtain a room, which can be used for worship on Sundays, and for a reading room during the week; and it is expected that some of the German missionaries, in and about Calcutta, will officiate on alternate Sundays. One of our German fellow-citizens is willing to pay the expenses for the present, but we trust others will join him in the good work, as, in addition to the rent of the room, there will be additional disbursements for a servant or servants, lighting, the purchase of books, &c., which will fall rather heavy on one individual.

THE 10TH REGIMENT PUNJAB INFANTRY, now at Dera Ismail Khan, is under orders for Hindostan, and will march on being relieved by the 6th Punjab infantry from Kohat; the latter regiment marches on the 24th January. The investigation into the Dera Ismail Khan mutiny, which has lasted for five months, has been brought to a close. The ringleaders have been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment, but it is believed they will be pardoned under the terms of the amnesty.

EUROPEAN FORCE AT AGRA.—Two regiments of European infantry are for the future to be located at Agra, H.M.'s 64th and a battalion rifle brigade, relieving the 3rd European, which corps is to go to Gwalior.

A LOOK-OUT.—A force composed of six companies of European infantry, two squadrons of the 4th irregular cavalry, and three guns, under command of Major Redmond, of H.M.'s 61st, was to leave Delhi on the night of the 13th Jan. for Rewarree, in the south of the Goorgaon district, to keep a look-out for, or to stand between Tantia Topee and the Rajpootana states.

REMSSION OF SENTENCE.—The magistrate and special commissioner of Banda reported upon the trial of Narain Rao and Madho Rao under the Jemadar Hokoond Rao for rebellion and treason against the British Government. The Governor General, taking into consideration the extenuating circumstances in favour of Narain Rao, has remitted so much of the sentence passed upon him as directs transportation beyond seas for life, and has resolved that he shall reside at Hazareebaugh under the surveillance of the magistrate or other local authority during the pleasure of Government, receiving from Government during the period of his detention an allowance of Rs. 700 per mensem.

EUROPEAN POLICE.—A body of European police has been raised for Shahabad and Behar. They are to be paid as follows. Two at the rate of Co.'s Rs. 100, and the others at Co.'s Rs. 60 per month, with a small horse allowance to those who provide their own horses.

THE LAHORE DIVISION.—We hear from Umritsur, that it has been definitively settled that the Lahore division is to be parcelled out as follows:—Sealkote, Goordaspoor and Umritsur to form a new division, to be called the Umritsur division. The Lahore division, to have Goojranwalla, Lahore and Ferozepoor. Mr. Temple to have the latter, Mr. Cust the former, Mr. Davies, now or lately at Benares, succeeds Mr. Temple, as Secretary to Chief Commissioner.

BEHREE AND JELLALPOOR.—Captain Hilliard, of the 50th M.N.I., has command of a small force of two 9-pounders and 60 men Madras Artillery, under Lieut. Johnson; 67 men and two officers H.M.'s 43rd Light Infantry; 170 men and two officers 50th M.N.I., and 85 sabres and one officer Jat mounted police. A very nice little party of eight at mess with the doctor. They have had one small affair, having turned Birjoo Sing and his friends out of their snug little nest near the confluence of the Betwa and the Dessau. Captain Hilliard was sent out on this special duty, and nobody expected he should find him. However, he did in less than a week, and gave him a good drubbing, the effect of which has been that that particular district has been profoundly quiet since. Captain Hilliard is now watching the fords at Behree and Jellalpoor, as the enemy is reported to have bolted out of Oude in force, and to have subsequently split into several different parties with a view of joining Tantia Topee.

AN IMPERIAL MUSEUM is to be established at Calcutta. The Asiatic Society have submitted to Government the expediency of founding such an institution. The Englishman states that the society is to make over to Government, on certain conditions, the whole of its collections except the library.

"CALCUTTA AND SUBURBAN BUILDING SOCIETY."—We hear that it is in contemplation to establish another joint-stock company, which, if properly managed, will prove of great benefit to all parties. It is a Calcutta and Suburban Building Society, the capital for which is to be raised by shares at Rs. 500 each, payable by monthly instalments of Rs. 6, and a deposit of Rs. 5 per share on allotment. From the manner in which it is proposed to employ the funds, the society will combine the advantages of a savings bank, and whilst thus affording an opportunity for profitable investment of so small a sum as Rs. 6 a month, it will check in a great measure the enormous increase in the rates of house-rent, which has been caused by the want of sufficient accommodation for European residents.

FEROZE SHAH.—We regret to hear that the rebels under Feroze Shah have cut up a number of Customs chuprassees, and that their leader has found an ally in a rajah of Nurwur, another of the unheard of chiefs who have floated to the surface in the general turmoil. The population in the vicinity of Jhansie, and the people of that town also, are decidedly in favour of the rebels, and cannot be convinced that the game is up. When we first heard of the movement of Feroze Shah with his rabble in the direction of Jhansie, we felt convinced that the excitement caused by the storming of that place, and the death of the Ranees (that is if she really be dead), which appears to be at least problematical, would induce the people at large to lend their assistance to the Shahzadah, and help him to the best of their ability. They are now, it appears, engaged in this highly laudable and loyal work, and the defeat by Sir Robert Napier of Ferozeshah does not appear to have taught him or them a lesson sufficiently impressive. We have thus a couple of fires raging, one on the east and the other on the west of the Peninsula, and if early and vigorous measures are not promptly adopted, we shall see the country lying between them again in a blaze. It is stated that the Shahzadah and his coadjutor the Nurwar Rajah have rejected the terms of the amnesty, and stipulate for jagheers and large pecuniary allowances before laying down their arms.—Punjabee.

MR. W. F. GILMORE has been elected sheriff for the town of Calcutta for the year 1859.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH INCOME.—We are informed that the cash received for private messages by the telegraphic establishment in the month of November is Co.'s Rs. 24,000. The value of service messages at the same rate is Co.'s Rs. 40,000, total Co.'s Rs. 64,000 for one month.

BENGAL MODESTY.—The inhabitants of Santipore (Bengal) have submitted an address to her Majesty, praying for the introduction of the Indian Lotus in the national emblems, the Rose, the Thistle, and the Shamrock. The Welsh will next claim a place for the leek, the Ionian Islands for the olive, Australia for the Kangaroo, and Canada for a lump of Wenham Lake ice.

THE MUTILATED.—It is reported that the Governor General has directed the Commissioner of Allahabad to furnish him with a list of the persons mutilated in this mutiny; with a note in each case showing the nature of the mutilation.

PERTABGHUR, Jan. 4.—We had great fun here at Christmas, horse-racing among the suwars, tattoo-races, camel-races, jumping, running and all sorts of games, for the native soldiers, who were given three days' holiday, and seemed to enjoy it much. They had a grand dinner, 100 sheep having been presented to them by their officers. The quantity of arms collected in this district is something wonderful, and they are not half collected yet.

"EDUCATIONAL GAZETTE."—We understand that the Government of India, in the Home Department, have, on the recommendation of the Director General of Public Instruction, continued the grant of two thousand four hundred rupees for the support of the Educational Gazette, a weekly journal, published in Bengalee in connection with the Educational Department, for one year more. And the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has, in supercession of his former orders, authorized the editor of the said paper to charge all advertisements at the usual rate that may be sent by the officers subject to the Government of Bengal for insertion in that journal.

CHANGES ON THE ALIAHABAD AND CANNONPORE SECTION OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—We (Delhi Gazette) are informed, on good authority, that Mr. Purser, chief engineer of the railway, in the N. W. P., has resigned his appointment, owing, we believe, to his being suspended. Mr. Gower, the locomotive superintendent, delivered over charge of his department on the 13th inst., to a Mr. Campbell, formerly an assistant on the Caledonian Railway. Mr. Buist, officiating traffic manager, is, we hear, to be shortly relieved by a Mr. Cox. What do all these changes mean?

CAMP, MALA GHAT, SARDAR RIVER, Jan. 14.—Smyth's column is watching the Ghauts ten miles above and below this point. The rebels are reported to be making for Burmdeo, with a view of crossing the Sardar and making their way through the dense jungle between that point and Rampoor. Messrs. Colvin and Read are at Burmdeo with 200 men, and Captain Lyall at Sessayah Ghat with 150 irregular cavalry, so that should the rebels attempt to force any of the river crossings, there is no doubt they will be held in check till Smyth's force can come up. The river is only fordable in a few places, and at one of the most favourable Ghauts an irregular Suwar and horse were drowned, whilst attempting the passage.

SHAHJEHANPORE, Jan. 13.—There is not much news here; Colonel Dennis, with a portion of Brigadier Troup's force, is sweeping through the jungles, to clear them of any small bodies of rebels that may be lurking there: when this is done he returns to his post at Mutteearree. Brigadier Troup was to join this party, and Colonel Hay was to be ready with his force to take Colonel Dennis's place in the Dooab.

NYNEE TAL.—We are informed that thirty houses have been secured at Nynee Tal for the Governor-General and staff, the ensuing hot season. We do not know how to reconcile this with what we hear from other quarters, that Lord Canning is about to return to Calcutta.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE, it is said, leaves Lahore for Calcutta on the 15th of February.

A NEW JOURNAL is to be published at Calcutta, under the title of the East Indian. It will be published weekly, its object being the advocacy of the interests of East Indians.

BRIGADIER LOGAN, commanding Vellore, will, it is said, on promotion to Major-General, vacate his command, and return to Europe, and will be succeeded by Colonel W. C. White, of the 48th N. I., whose appointment to the brigadiership we know will give the greatest satisfaction to the whole of the benighted army.

LORD HARRIS IMITATED.—It is currently reported that the Rajah of Cochin was anxious to signalise the reading of her Majesty's Proclamation by much greater pomp and display than was actually witnessed on the occasion; but that the Resident objected to it, on the ground that it was not desirable to be more demonstrative than his neighbour of Travancore. It seems to us rather a novel principle to prescribe the bounds of a prince's manifestation of loyalty, and especially it comes with an ill grace from her Majesty's representative.

MADURA.—KIDNAPING OF RECRUITS.—A shameful practice prevails in the recruiting department, which cannot be too soon put down. It is this. The recruiting party go prowling about Madura and the adjacent villages, and seize young and promising lads, and forcibly carry them off. If the relations and friends of these lads cannot, or are unwilling to buy their liberty again, they are forcibly made recruits of. The price of release is according to the circumstances of the family of the lads, from 2 rupees to 50 rupees. Surely the State cannot desire soldiers made in this way, or sanction a practice so objectionable and so illegal. The recruiting party occasionally get well mauled in these outrageous proceedings, as the records of court and cutchery can testify, but they do not mind it, as the game is so profitable.

SIR C. RAWLINSON has met with an accident while out riding, in consequence of his horse falling. He is confined to his couch, but we trust that the injuries received are not severe, and that his recovery will be speedy.

MYSORE, Jan. 4.—For ten days the Conservator of Forests has been engaged in an inquiry regarding the long pending dispute between the Mysore and Malabar authorities as to the exact boundary between Hoggadevincothah and Wynaad. The corp of horse-gram promises to be remarkably fine in this district, as also of bullar and cholam, but to the eastward it is feared that the rice and raggy crops are below the average. The tanks and irrigation channels are full, and the May crops will derive great benefit from the heavy rains which fell in November: these did not set in early enough to save the present cultivation. Large gangs of Lumbadies and Keeroovas are engaged in carrying a stream of produce to the coast. The coffee-planters look to these wandering tribes to carry their crop to port, as Wellington did formerly to convey the grain stores for his army. Two wild elephants were lately taken in pits—one a tusker, required low diet, confinement, and the society of two tamed congeners for some time before his proud spirit yielded: the other, a young female, became docile in a few days. It is of great consequence to the State that these unwieldy animals should be captured—the herds destroy the crops at night, and retire into the recesses of the forest with the early dawn of day.—Madras Times.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, SIR PATRICK GRANT arrived at the Hyderabad Residency on the 7th January, and was received with due honour and ceremony by the Resident and the Nizam's Minister, Salar Jung, under a salute of seventeen guns, a brigade of artillery having been marched down from Bolarum on purpose. The public road leading to the Residency was thronged all day long with Arabs, Rohillahs, and the tag-rag and bobtail of the city, to whom the chief's visit was of course a great novelty.

BIMLIPATAM.—A very remarkable change is in progress among the lower orders in these parts. The unceasing demand and high prices for oil seeds for exportation have tempted the ryots to cover every available acre of dry land with oil seeds, consequently many of the dry grains, hitherto the principal food of the lower orders, are not procurable, and rice, a more expensive, and in a hilly country less wholesome food, has been resorted to. The fact is one of importance in any district where irrigation works have not placed the possibility of a drought and famine beyond probability. Rice continues to rise in price, and though the retail home market arising from the above mentioned change may account in some degree for high prices, it is a problem how merchants can at present buy here to sell in London at sixpence a cwt., unless it is true that it is known in London how to convert Madras rice into Carolina of treble value, and some such transmutation is probable. The Queen's Proclamation is considered by the natives to pledge Government to a very liberal course as to Enam lands. There is a very strong feeling among the people on this subject.—Madras Times.

THE EARTHQUAKE.—A correspondent at Shirvatoor has supplied us (Spectator) with some particulars of the earthquake felt in Salem on the 30th Dec. "It came on with a rumbling noise, resembling that of an approaching train," he writes; "then there was an undulation, which nearly threw me off my feet, the noise increasing in the meantime. I was in the open air, and never having experienced the like before, but knowing that it must be an earthquake, I fixed my eyes on the ground, expecting it to open, so that I cannot tell you anything about the rocking of trees, buildings, &c., &c.; but I am told by those within my bungalow at the time that it did rock pretty well." It is said that the shock was felt ten miles on each side of Shirvatoor, north and south, though in greater strength northwards. It also appears that at a place seven miles north of the town from which our correspondent wrote, the tiles were shaken off the roofs. The earthquake travelled from north to south. The native idea in Salem is, that the earth was shifted from one shoulder to the other of the goddess on whose back it is supported.

TANTIA TOPEE'S RECRUITING AGENTS.—The following is an exemplification of the system adopted by Tantia Topee for obtaining new levies. A Mussulman had been trying for some time to obtain employment in the Oomrowtee police, and a promise had been held out to him of being provided for so soon as a vacancy occurred. In the meantime he endeavoured to make himself useful in picking up information. One day, whilst thus employed, he went to the suburbs extending some distance from the town of Oomrowtee, and his attention was arrested by seeing two strangers cooking their food in an obscure corner. He quietly walked up, made the usual salutation, and sought to draw the men, who were Mahrattas, into a conversation. His advances seemed far from pleasant, but his suspicions having been roused he resolved to remain with them until evening. He then hurried off to the Cutwall at Oomrowtee and communicated his suspicions. No time was lost in apprehending the men, and on being searched they were found to possess jewels of the value of sixty-five thousand rupees. On inquiry it turned out that on these jewels they were to raise money, and subsidise Rohilabs and other mercenaries in the Deccan into Tantia's service—the scheme, however, proving abortive through the intelligence and vigilance of the Mussulman candidate for police employ.

THE SHIP KOHINOOR, of 500 tons burthen, with a full cargo on board for London, took fire, and was burnt to the water's edge, at Cochin, on Tuesday the 4th of January; the origin of the fire was not known.

BOMBAY.

THE PUNJAB A PRESIDENCY.

The rumour that the Punjab is to be made a presidency is not without interest to the people of Bombay. The latter presidency labours under the disadvantage of a divided territory. We are inclined to think that the new creation may put an end to the present anomalous arrangement whereby the Delta of a great river is made a dependency of a distant Government, and is severed from all political communication with the countries to which it is intended by nature as a commercial entrance, and a military basis. The Punjab itself has long laboured under the disadvantage not only of distance from the seat of Government, and of subordination to the interests of another territory, but also of being politically cut off from its natural sea-board. The great effect of its subordination to the Government of Bengal has been to make the grand trunk-road its main line of communication, both military and commercial, with the rest of the world—a line of communication to the last degree precarious in times of danger, and always objectionable from its length and the nature of the country it traverses. A no less notable and no less injurious result has been a corresponding, and, indeed, constant neglect of the Indus. The Indus is the natural road to the sea for the Punjab. It is in a military point of view shorter and safer and easier than the valley of the Ganges. For the purposes of commerce its advantages are still more obvious. From first to last, we have a navigable river shorter than and superior in facilities of transit to the stream of the Ganges, and not separated from the Punjab by an intervening desert. Moreover, it strikes the sea-board at a point much nearer to Europe than Calcutta, and furnished with a port superior to any in Bengal. The Punjab, too, would not be the only gainer by its erection into a Presidency and the consequent amalgamation of Scinde. It is a matter of constant complaint with residents in Scinde that the commercial interests are, if not sacrificed, at least neglected, by the authorities in Bombay. Without considering the charges made of interested jealousy on the part of Bombay, it is easy to see that the interests of Scinde must always be subordinate in the eyes of a Bombay Government to the rest of the Presidency, for Scinde has no natural connection with the rest of the territories included in the Presidency; except as a matter of revenue, its prosperity can make no difference to the rest of the country. With regard to the other parts of the Presidency the case is the reverse. In the prosperity of Guzerat, of Sholapore, or even Beejapore, this place has a direct interest. Scinde, on the contrary, is for all commercial purposes as far off as Bengal. Even in the way of exports and imports no exchange takes place; but Scinde once united to the Punjab, instead of being a distant dependency, connected with the seat of Government in a political sense alone, it will occupy a far different position. It will find itself to Lahore what the Egyptian Delta is to Cairo, what New Orleans is to Missouri. It will not be considerations of the revenue to be derived from Scinde alone which will induce the Punjab Government to foster its trade, to facilitate the navigation of its river, and to push the construction of railroads. The whole of the Punjab will have an interest in the prosperity of Scinde. Kurrachee will in fact be what it was intended by Sir Charles Napier to be—the Alexandria of the new Egypt. Indeed, the Punjab and Scinde united into one Presidency will found a territory which for wealth and importance will bid fair to rival its elder brethren. The Punjab, by the aid of railroads and steam-boats along the course of the Indus, will be enabled to develop its resources in a way hardly imagined at present. The Punjab is the most northerly part of India. The valleys on its border are capable of yielding all the product of Southern Europe. A few miles of railroad are all that is wanted to carry the productions of these valleys to a river which will bear them into the heart of the tropics. No spot so suitable for European colonisation will be so near to a good market. The ice and snow even of the Hindoo Koosh may yet compete with the American ice in the markets of Kurrachee and Bombay. The European fruits and vegetables which at present reach us from Europe in tin cases and bottles, or are cultivated with difficulty on the monsoon-washed Ghauts, will then be brought with ease from a country where they grow in luxuriance. The mineral wealth of the Punjab, also, will be introduced to a market which is at present wanted to create it.

But Scinde itself will doubtless receive the greatest benefits from the change. The Indus, at its mouth, has a Delta large as that of the Nile and as fruitful; but yet almost entirely uncultivated. There is every ground for supposing that as a cotton-producing country, Scinde will in time surpass most countries in the world. Railways and steamboats, which will not only facilitate commercial intercourse, but give to the Indian planter and the Queen's Government the same facilities of locomotion enjoyed by the American planter on the Mississippi, that is which will enable him speedily and cheaply to obtain relief from the heats of the unhealthy season, will make the question of the colonisation of the plains of India much more simple than it seems at present.

Georgia, Alabama, and Louisiana, are certainly as unfavourable to Anglo-Saxon life as the valley of the Indus. For instance, in South Carolina, at one period of the year it is certain death for a planter to reside on his estates. Planting is still carried on and successfully, for railways and steamboats enable the white cultivator to move his family, at such periods, to the cooler regions of the North. And in the heat of summer a much more grateful climate will be open to the Indian planter than is enjoyed by the American at Saratoga. In short, if Englishmen in India will only give themselves a fair chance they will, we are sure, find the country at least as enjoyable as any tropical country in the world, and we think that the new presidency formed by the amalgamation of Scinde and the Punjab will shortly prove the truth of this.

But not for the inhabitants only of the new presidency has the proposed change an interest. The Punjab and Scinde together may be looked upon as the barrier of India against invasion. With the commercial and agricultural prosperity of a country are closely connected its military security and defensibility. Those same means of intercommunication, which have been hitherto so strangely neglected, and which are so confessedly the indispensable conditions of commercial and agricultural prosperity, are no less necessary to military security from internal revolt and defensibility against external aggression. A system of railways and steamboat navigation, which shall enable us to concentrate at the shortest possible notice on any one point our whole available force on the line of the Indus, would make the project of a successful invasion hopeless. Closely connected with the subject, however, is the question of our North-West frontier. Our North-West frontier may be described as a double line, formed by the Indus in the one instance, and by the mountains of Afghanistan and Beloochistan in the other. Our extreme outposts at present fill up the interval between these two lines of defence—that is, they are between the river and the mountains in precisely the most unhealthy and trying climate to be found in the world. If we went from the foot of the mountains to their summits we should find ourselves in a country in a great measure adapted for European colonization, and in a position which would preclude, to a great extent, the necessity which we are at present under of maintaining in the plains beneath a large irregular native force to repel the barbarous tribes whose aggressions would be at once put a stop to by such an advance on our part. Nor can it be urged in opposition to this that in doing so we should be making a forward step in a course of aggression which is no natural terminus. West of Beloochistan and Afghanistan lie deserts which are perhaps the most formidable in the world. The countries themselves have a climate and soil more congenial than any in Asia to European constitutions. By keeping where we are we gratuitously give up the finest country in Asia for the sake of remaining in the worst, and, what is more, we leave to foreign invaders a spot, which if they once managed to seize, would place them in a position at once most unassailable and most menacing.

In conclusion, we may remark another benefit which will flow, though indirectly, from the creation of the new presidency. We have lately reaped the benefit of the isolation which exists between the men of Hindostan on the one side, and the inhabitants of the valley of the Indus on the other. Sikhs and Belooches are foreigners in Hindostan. This is owing to their geographical position, and it is a circumstance undoubtedly in our favour. The advantage thus given by nature should be improved by political arrangements. Nothing would do this more completely than a measure which would cut off the Punjab from Bengal on one side, and Scinde from Bombay on the other.—Standard.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXTRAORDINARY CONDUCT OF A MILITARY SURGEON.—Dr. Robert Millar, of the 16th regiment Bombay N.I., appeared at the police office on the 17th of January, in compliance with an immediate summons served upon him, upon the information of Mr. Berkley, the chief resident engineer of the G. I. P. Railway, to the effect that Dr. Millar called at his residence on the previous Sunday morning, and sent his card, with the words "professional business" written beneath the name, and drafts of two letters, one to the Governor of Bombay, and the other to the Secretary to Government, purporting to be some grand scheme for the construction of docks in Bombay, which he (the Doctor) considered the greatest boon that could be granted to the island; but as Mr. Berkley had reason to believe that the Doctor's visit was only a motive for intrusion, and as he was a total stranger to him, an interview was consequently declined, but previous to a denial being sent, Dr. Millar entered into conversation with one of Mr. Berkley's grooms, to the effect that a bet of 1,000 rupees was pending between himself and one Hadjee, on a horse race, and he wished to be informed if his (the groom's) master would ride the race for him. On the message of refusal having been delivered to Dr. Millar, he mounted his horse and rode out of Mr. Berkley's compound, but returned shortly after, and having found the gates closed against him, he dismounted and hung some stones, but at whom it did not appear. Shortly after this occurrence the following letter was received from Dr. Millar by Mr. Berkley, and which formed the groundwork of the charge:—

"Bombay, 16th January, 1859.

"Sir,—I came to consult you as a professional man in reference to one of the greatest boons that have been granted to Bombay. You were not obliged to see me, but you were obliged not to insult me as you did through your servants. I swear that for this I will make you repent; I swear it by all I hold most holy. Yes! I swear it by my oath as a Master Mason, an oath which I cannot break; I will meet you when and where you least expect me, sooner or later; but meet you I will, where no one can witness the punishment which I will inflict upon you.—Yours sincerely,

"ROBERT MILLAR."

The defendant made his appearance in court armed with a brass mounted hunting whip, and was evidently labouring under very great excitement, for he declined to lay aside the whip, when his worship requested him, and it was ultimately obliged to be taken from him by force, and his whole demeanour was one of great irritability and violent gesticulations. On the information of Mr. Berkley being read to the defendant, he interrupted his worship on several occasions with most irrelevant questions, and when called upon for his defence, stated that the fabric of the charge fell to the ground in consequence of the prosecutor having deposed upon oath that the alleged insult of closing the door in his face by the prosecutor's servant was not done by his orders, which he (the defendant) believed to be at the time of the occurrence, consequently he extremely regretted what took place, though he would "flog" Mr. Berkley or any other man, even in his worship's presence, if they would dare to insult him wilfully in a similar manner. Mr. Berkley having been called upon to know whether he was satisfied with Dr. Millar's expression of regret, or would proceed further with the matter, requested permission to consider over the matter for ten or fifteen minutes, which being granted by the magistrate, he retired from the police office, and returned in about a quarter of an hour, when he informed his worship that he bore not the slightest ill feeling towards the defendant, but considering the very violent behaviour and language of Dr. Millar, even in his worship's presence, he deemed it prudent, for the safety of himself and the members of his household, to shield himself under the protection of the law. On hearing this, Dr. Millar apparently lost all self-control, declined to cross-examine the prosecutor, requested his worship to define what cross-examination meant, put various questions to him, which he stated he was bound to answer, informed him that he was paid to dispense justice, not to dispense with it, protested against the entire proceedings, accused the magistrate of not being a fair man, and finally threatened to leave the court, which he was about to do, when measures were adopted to prevent his so doing; and when informed by his worship that he must be bound over to keep the peace towards Mr. Berkley for a period of six months, in his own recognisances of Rs. 2,000, and that of two sureties of Rs. 1,000 each, replied that Mr. Berkley had better pay the amount himself, and asked his worship what would be the alternative of not finding the sureties; and on being informed that the county gaol would be the alternative, desired to know for what period, saying, "By — do you call that justice? By — but I will have it!" and that Mr. Berkley must certainly be a very valuable man, and the magistrate a very silly one. These contemptuous expressions were apparently received more in sorrow than in anger by the magistrate, Mr. Crawford; for not the slightest notice was taken of them to vindicate the majesty of the law, evidently from the impression that Dr. Millar was labouring under an aberration of intellect; and his worship, with great regret, finally committed him to the county gaol, as he failed to furnish the requisite sureties; two gentlemen, however, who came for the purpose, declined becoming securities after having had some conversation with him and the magistrate, and no alternative was therefore left but to commit him.

FIRE BRIGADE.—Some of our readers may recollect that a few months ago the municipal commissioners made a proposal to the Government for the remodelling of the fire engine establishment, and the formation of a fire brigade in the town. The Commissioners proposed having only two men instead of the ten now attached to each fire engine who are always in attendance, and by whom, on an alarm of fire, the engines are drawn to the spot, and worked. Of the two men it was suggested that one should be a mechanic, the other a mookadam or head man, who should engage for each engine a party of twelve men, living in the neighbourhood of the engine houses, and be held responsible for them, and have them absolutely and entirely under his control. The remuneration proposed to be paid to these men was one and a half rupee per mensem, i. e. half a rupee on the occasion of attending parade muster, and one rupee after hydraulic drill and exercise, with the prospect of receiving an additional rupee for every fire at which they may be present. Government having communicated with the commissioner of police on the subject, the deputy-commissioner, who has the immediate charge and control of the civil branch of the fire-engine department, has reported that in his opinion the suggestions of the municipal commissioners were impracticable; for, he says, "Even with the services of a first-rate mechanic at command, the repairs to the fire-engines could not be so well effected as they have been hitherto, in the gun carriage department. In the event of a sudden accident while the engine is under use at fire it cannot be put into order on the spot. And no mookadam will be able to keep absolutely and entirely under control twelve men receiving a fixed salary of only one and half rupee a month, so as to make their services available at the instant, for nothing short of instantaneous action would suffice to meet the pressing exigency of fire. Twelve men residing in the neighbourhood of each fire-engine house may be engaged by the different mookadams for each of the seven engines; but, during the day these eighty-four men will be scattered all over Bombay, and their movements be as erratic as their occupations would be uncertain: during the night they would sleep in their own houses, and the difficulty of getting them together would be considerable, and the consequent loss of time would be attended with damage of the most serious kind to the property on fire. The delay of half or even a quarter of an hour might cause the destruction of property of the value of thousands of rupees." As regards mustering fire-engine men for inspection and hydraulic training exercise, the deputy commissioner has expressed his willingness to undertake the duty, and use his best efforts to produce the results contemplated by the municipal commissioners; but he is, however, of opinion that the object of having all the Government engines at all times in effective working order, would probably be better secured by instructions issued by Government to the director of fire engines than by placing them under his general control. After giving the subject his best consideration, the commissioner of police agreed with his deputy in the opinion he has passed relative to the impracticability of the establishment in Bombay of a fire brigade according to the theory propounded by the municipal authorities. He, however, found there was no analogy between the circumstances of Bombay and those of the large towns in England, where such brigades have been organised by the voluntary and gratuitous enrolment of the resident citizens, and he is of opinion that if the measure were adopted here, the efficiency of the fire engine department would be seriously impaired, if not entirely destroyed. Government having requested the municipal commissioners to give further consideration and report on the subject, the latter have informed it, "That there are several points in Mr. Forjett's letter in which they cannot concur, and that they are of opinion that the brigading of the fire engines might be effected with advantage; but Government having since the commencement of the correspondence, on this subject, withdrawn the fund, and so relieved them from the maintenance of the fire engines, they consider it unnecessary to trouble Government any further in the matter."

FATAL AFFRAY ON THE BHOORE GHAUT RAILWAY WORKS.—We (Bombay Gazette) regret to learn that on Friday morning last, Jan. 21st, a serious disturbance occurred on the Bhoore Ghaut works of the G. I. P. railway, which originated, it appears, in a dispute about wages, and resulted in an attack by the labourers upon their European employers and overseers. It took place on Mr. Hepworth's sub-contract at Oonee. It has been ascertained that the outbreak was a general one upon all Europeans in the neighbourhood, and that several women and children, as well as their natural protectors, escaped very narrowly, having had to fly for the bare life to Campoollee. One unfortunate person, named Curran, however, was literally stoned to death, and several others have received various injuries, but none of a very serious nature. A Mahomedan overseer was also seriously injured. In one instance, we are assured, an entire family were indebted for their escape to the intrepidity of Mrs. Cutts, whose presence of mind did not forsake her on the alarming occasion. The military were called out from Khandalla barracks, and succeeded in quelling the riot and taking five persons prisoners. The works are all stopped at Oonee, and it is feared that this disturbance will seriously impede the railway Ghaut operations. We have received no explanation yet of the immediate cause of the fatal outrage, but from what we have seen and heard of the docility and patience of the coolies and other natives engaged in the railway works, we greatly fear that in the present instance they have been goaded into excesses by systematic ill-treatment, insufficient wages included. Mr. Faviell, the chief contractor, has disposed of portions of the line to the sub-contractors, some of whom, we are sorry to learn, "put on the screw" to an intolerable extent, in order to make a profit to themselves. We are told that it is not so much the European as the native overseer who exercises the greatest tyranny over the wretched coolies. If an Englishman, in charge of a number of natives, imagines that one of them is shirking his work, he will give him a hint with a whip or a stick, and there an end; but the cruelty of the native driver to his countrymen is of a more refined nature. The weapon used is the tongue, and the wounds it inflicts may be guessed by such complaints as the following, which are often made to the contractor—"Sahib! Sahib! we don't mind being beaten by our muckadam, but don't let him abuse our mothers and sisters." The labour of natives must be at the bottom of every public work executed in this country; and those who desire to employ them must not only reward them honestly, but treat them with some degree of consideration for their feelings. On a former occasion, the works on this line were suspended in consequence of the oppression to which the coolies were said to be subjected; and we shall be happy if it can be established that the suspension which is sure to follow the present outbreak has not arisen from the same cause.

SERIOUS AFFRAY ON BOARD THE "JAMSETJEE CURSETJEE."—The master and officers of this ship had a very narrow escape of their lives on the morning of the 12th January, in consequence of a most ferocious attack made upon them by the boatswain and crew, armed with handspikes and iron belaying pins. They were only indebted for their safety to the circumstance of H.M.'s steam frigate Feroze lying alongside, the commanding officer of which vessel, having perceived the desperate onslaught on board the Jamseljee Cursettee, despatched to the rescue a party of marines, who succeeded in quelling the affray, and capturing the boatswain, cook, and three seamen, ringleaders in the affray. The master and chief officer are badly hurt, and the second officer is in a more dangerous way from several blows received on the head in the affray, which, it appears, arose in consequence of some trifling punishment having been inflicted by one of the officers upon the boatswain for misconduct, who attempted to revenge himself in the manner described after inflaming the minds of the crew against their officers and captain. On the 13th, H. Russell, boatswain, E. Elderkin, cook, and Keil, Parker, and Smith, seamen, were brought up before the senior magistrate. The faces of both the first and second officers, who appeared to prosecute, presented a frightful spectacle, being scarred and cut all over. The charge was fully established, and his worship was of opinion that the ends of justice demanded that the prisoners should be sent for trial at the ensuing sessions, but as the captain stated that in all probability such a course would subject the vessel to a very lengthy detention, his worship summarily disposed of the case by sentencing the ringleader (the boatswain) to an imprisonment with hard labour for a period of four months for the assault upon the chief officer, and a further term of four months (to commence after the expiration of the first) for the assault upon the second officer, and each of the other prisoners to an imprisonment for the period of twelve weeks for each assault.

THE CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK.—We understand that Mr. G. P. Robinson, manager of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, retires from that office, and proceeds home in March next. Mr. R. Davidson, the secretary of the bank, has been appointed to succeed him.

MR. DOSABHOY FRAMJEE.—This intelligent and public-spirited Parsee gentleman, having returned from England, intends treating his countrymen with a graphic and well-digested account of his travels in Great Britain. We lately observed in the Rast Gofar, from his pen, a long and very interesting description of his visit to St. Paul's Cathedral.

REMOVAL OF THE ELECTED MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.—Mr. P. W. LeGeyt, Legislative Councillor of the Council of India for Bombay, has prepared and submitted to the Governor in Council the draft of a Bill providing for the removal of either of the two elected Municipal Commissioners of Bombay by the Governor in Council on the representation of the justices. As he has not been favoured with any expression of the wishes of Government on this subject, further than that it should be submitted to the Legislative Council, Mr. LeGeyt has solicited that the reasons upon which Government wish for the alteration in the law should be specified, it having been suggested to him that without such expression difficulty may be experienced in forwarding the Bill through its stages in Council. Mr. Secretary Young has consequently transmitted the copies of Mr. LeGeyt's Minute and Draft Bill to her Majesty's justices of the peace, requesting them to furnish a statement of the reasons which have induced them to recommend the proposed amendment of Act XXV. of 1858.

BOMBAY H.A.—The Sind Kossid hears, on the best authority, that the four troops of the Bombay horse artillery are about to return to quarters, after their prolonged period of field service, and that they will be located as follows:—The 1st or Leslie's troop will be stationed at Deesa; the 2nd troop will proceed to this station; the 3rd troop will garrison Nusserabad; and the 4th troop will return to Poona. The whole, however, are to be kept up to war strength, ready for any emergency should their services be required.

RISE OF RICE.—We are sorry to see that grain has risen in price both in Calcutta and Bombay. A committee has been ordered to sit in Bombay, consisting of the three quarter masters of regiments stationed on the island, to determine the amount of compensation to be given to the troops and followers. In Madras there have been grain disturbances, so we may consider ourselves fortunate that as yet we have nothing to complain of, though grain is rather more than double the price it was in Sir Charles Napier and Mr. Pringle's reign.

LIEUT. G. S. MIGNON, who has so ably superintended the cattle and transport branch of the commissariat department, until it was abolished somewhat unaccountably on the 1st January, will proceed shortly to Sukkur, where he will relieve Lieut. Stuart of the commissariat duties of that station, in consequence of the latter officer's presence being required at Kurrachee to give evidence on the general court-martial before which Lieutenant Brett is shortly to be arraigned.

BARODA.—The Sindian learns from private resources that the Guicowar's troops attacked the Wagurs, who gave us so much trouble at the Island of Bate not long ago, and destroyed a great many of these unfortunate men; the remainder gave themselves up prisoners.

COMPENSATION TO NATIVES.—Government has given a large sum as a compensation to the ryots in the Saugor district for injury done to their crops by the Central India field force.

LIEUT. COL. POPE, and the Secretary to the Government of Goap, proceeded on the 22nd inst. to Dia on special duty, per steam-vessel Pleid, Lieut. Nixon, commander.

GARROTING.—This crime, which is scarcely ever perpetrated in India, has been committed by Thomas Williams, one of the boatswain's mates of the Punjab, who managed to attack one Mr. Baker, after the peculiar style adopted by garroters, and rifled him of his watch and chain, which he subsequently pawned with a Marwatee. A warrant was issued for the offender's apprehension, but up to the present period the police have failed to obtain any clue to his hiding-place.

PUNJAB RAILWAY COMPANY.—B. B. Thomas, Esq., agent for the Punjab Railway Company, arrived by the last mail. This gentleman will be stationed at Kurrachee as transit agent for the despatch on arrival of all stores and material intended for the Punjab railway. We believe that from 25,000 to 30,000 tons of stores, &c., are already on their way out, or shortly will be. This will be a golden opportunity for our friends of the Steam Inland Company, and we hope will incite them to go ahead with their works.

MR. J. G. VOLKHART, of the firm of Messrs. Volkhart, Brothers, and Co., Bombay, has been appointed Consul for Sweden and Norway in this city.

LIEUT.-COLONEL BIRDWOOD has been appointed to act as Deputy Commissary General, during the absence of Lieut.-Colonel Pope on special duty in the Political Department.

COLABA OBSERVATORY.—An electric time ball has been prepared and set up, and is now dropped daily at 1 p.m. at the Colaba Observatory, to enable the shipping in harbour to adjust their chronometers.

THE LATE MILITARY AFFRAY.—We (Poona Observer) understand that the Court assembled at Poona to inquire into the fatal disturbance which took place in the lines of the 86th depot on the night of the 1st Jan. has not been enabled from the evidence produced before it to fix the guilt of striking the fatal blow which deprived an artilleryman of life, almost on the spot, upon any individual. Some ten men of the artillery and H.M.'s 86th foot are now undergoing their trial at Poona before a district court martial, charged with having been present during the affray; but there is, we understand, no evidence to prove that any of these men took an active part in it. At a first glance it appears singular that so much difficulty has been experienced in this case, and that the criminal offenders should altogether escape detection; but the outrage was the work of a few moments, and took place in the dark; hence the difficulty in bringing home the crime to the actual perpetrators. Still it certainly appears to us very discreditable that so shocking an occurrence as the killing outright of one man, and the wounding of four others with bayonet stabs, should be permitted to go unpunished. The military authorities of the station have used every exertion in their power to bring home this great crime to the perpetrators, but they have been baffled in all their attempts to bring the guilty parties to justice by the stubborn determination of those engaged in the affray not to implicate one another.

CASUALTY.—We sincerely regret to learn that the public have lost a valuable servant by the sudden death of J. R. Spiers, Esq., the assistant collector and magistrate of Ahmednuggur. This melancholy event, we understand, took place on the morning of the 21st January, and the remains of the lamented deceased were interred in the afternoon. Mr. Spiers possessed many qualities which eminently fitted him for a higher position in the public service than that which he filled, and had his life been spared, in all probability his merits would have been more appropriately recognised by the new Government of India. He was a man of great and varied information and unwearied industry, and his kindly disposition towards the native community secured him a large measure of popularity.

BRIGADIER HONNER'S COLUMN.—We learn by a letter from Nusseerabad, dated the 31st Dec., that that gallant officer, Brigadier R. W. Honner, c.b., of the Bombay rifles, was on that date at Chittoor with a flying column of artillery and cavalry, and 220 of H. M.'s 83rd regiment mounted on camels, watching the movements of Tantia Topee and the proceedings of the various detachments southward of Neemuch. Brigadier Honner had received information of Tantia's escape to Seetamow, and thence across the Chumbul to Patchpahar. The Brigadier intended moving to the eastward, and if the Pindaree chief came within forty or fifty miles of him, he would be prepared to be down upon him like a shot, as he could cross about fifty miles of country in a single forced march. The Brigadier has hussars, lancers, and an European camel corps with his force, all of whom are in first-rate order, sound and healthy, and fit for duty. Our latest accounts, however, of Tantia's movements show that he had got away to Burood in Kotah, where his forces were utterly routed and dispersed by Colonel Somerset, c.b., and he had got himself into something like an awkward fix amongst the jungles of that part of the country. The flying detachment with Brigadier Honner consists of the 8th hussars, 1st Bombay lancers, 2nd troop of Bombay horse artillery, three companies of her Majesty's 83rd regiment, and a company of the 12th Bombay N. I. The remainder of the force had returned to Nusseerabad. The weather at Chittoor was bitter cold.—Poona Observer.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—The Hon. the President in Council has been pleased to make the following appointments in the Electric Telegraph Department:—Mr. H. P. Owen, to be Deputy Superintendent at Bombay; Mr. J. T. Blisset to be Deputy Superintendent at Madras; Mr. W. W. Mayes to be Deputy Superintendent of the East Coast Line.

RAILWAY ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—The electric telegraph belonging to the railway company was opened on the 15th Jan. from the Bombay terminus to that of Poona, and messages are now in constant transmission regarding the various requirements on different parts of the line, which were heretofore made known through the ordinary medium of letters. We understand that the telegraph will be placed at the disposal of the public in a few days.

TEMPTATION TO TREACHERY.—It is reported in Calcutta that Government has offered a reward of Co.'s Rs. 10,000 for the arrest of Tantia-Topee, and the same sum for that of the Rao Sahib.

THE AGRA BANK is to be registered under the Limited Liability Act. A circular reporting the confirmation of previous resolutions to that effect has been issued to all shareholders and customers.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Our last advices from Cabul are from the 28th December, 1858, to the 3rd January, 1859:—"On the 28th some robbers came into the tents of Shah Pussund Khan and Mahomed Raheem Khan, and stole some clothes and other articles of value. On the Dost being informed of this, he was very angry with Shah Pussund Khan and Mahomed Raheem Khan for being negligent in their duties. On the 29th the Dost ordered the two large guns in Jellalabad to be brought out, and having divided all his forces into three divisions under different leaders, marched them respectively on three sides of the camp to keep a strict watch. On the 31st Dost Mahomed Khan told Shah Murny Khan that he had received instructions from the British at Peshawar, requesting him to depute some person to receive the muskets from them, and ordered him to proceed there and bring the same to him; and also gave him a hoondee of Rs. 1,000 to purchase some goolbuddun for him. On the 1st January Sirdar Peer Mahomed Khan with his family joined the camp of Dost Mahomed Khan at Jellalabad. On the 2nd Saadut Khan Lalpooree and other chiefs of Sufed-Koh presented themselves with Nuzzurs to Dost Mahomed Khan. A despatch was received from Sirdar Mahomed Ameer Khan, informing the Dost that the forces under Mudud Khan, which were sent to Punj Shere, have returned to Cabul, and brought the revenues of that country. Also that Khal Mahomed Khan had died at Jakudluk. The Dost was very sorry, and ordered Rs. 200 to be sent to his family, and appointed his son in his place.—Lahore Chronicle.

BURMAH.

MAJOR FYTCHE.—The late Court of Directors has sanctioned the payment of Rs. 5,000 to Major Fyche, deputy commissioner of Rangoon, in consideration of the loss sustained by him in the conflagration at Bassein.

THE EX KING OF DELHI has not yet left Rangoon for Tonghoo, and it is said that his destination has been changed. He remains at Rangoon until further orders.

LOCAL DISTURBANCES.—The Burmese seem determined to give us trouble. Hardly is the Twantay row put down than news come in that some two thousand dacoits, or, some fancy, the King of Ava's people arrive near one of the frontier stations, Meeday, and commit all sorts of depredations within a few miles from where our troops are stationed, marauding the surrounding country, all fully armed too. Three companies of native infantry and two mountain train guns have proceeded out to overtake them, the deputy commissioner accompanying them, and it is supposed this will be sufficient to oppose their further ingress towards our outposts, and check their marauding propensities, and another detachment consisting of fifty Europeans, and three companies of native infantry, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to proceed out at a moment's notice. It is also said that things are not so quiet along our frontiers as could be desired, and Major Phayre, the commissioner, and governor-general's agent, proceeded on Saturday last in the flat Paulang in tow of the steamer Damudah to Froume, from whence the commissioner will proceed along our line of frontier stations, across the country to Tonghoo.—Madras Spectator.

MAURITIUS.

PORT LOUIS, MAURITIUS.—We have much satisfaction in announcing that, to facilitate the recently-established mail service between this port, Australia, and the mother country, the Mauritius Dock Company have commenced the excavations for a vast dry dock to afford every facility for repairing such noble vessels as we shall shortly have calling at our port (Port Louis). The size of the dock is to be 350 feet long, 80 feet extreme breadth, 60 mean, and 40 feet minimum breadth, depth 22 feet; in fact, capable of taking in such magnificent vessels as the Duke of Wellington, of 3,756 tons; length, 278 feet; length of keel for tonnage, 202 feet; depth of hold, 24 feet; breadth, 62 feet; H.M.'s steam frigate Mercsey, length, 336½ feet; length of keel for tonnage, 254 feet; breadth 52 feet; burthen, 3,726 tons; H.M.S. Boscawen, which was lately here, is 2,212 tons; length, 213 feet. Such a vessel would appear like a long boat in the new dock. The most important fact is, that merchant ships of all sizes can be taken into dock and immediately repaired. The pumping machinery is being constructed by Messrs. Gwynne and Co., engineers, London, whose names stand so favourably before the public. Engines of 100-horse power will work three centrifugal pumps discharging 12,000 gallons of water a minute, and the dock containing when full 13,000 tons of water will be entirely emptied in two hours and a-half. Besides these pumps a small one, worked by a separate engine, will keep the dock dry during repairs to vessels. The company have, in addition, a forge and every appliance for the repairs of iron vessels: this fact cannot possibly be too widely known. The contractors have engaged to finish the excavations in a year, but nine months will probably suffice for the reception of vessels.—Overland Commercial Gazette, Dec. 27.

date of H.M.'s warrant of the 6th of Oct., of 1854, or who subsequently, during the operation of that warrant, have completed the period of three years in command of regiments, shall be promoted to col. by brevet from Nov. 28, 1854, or from the date of completion subsequently of their respective periods of command.

2nd.—That all lieutenant-col. in the army, whatever their regimental rank, who previous to the date of H.M.'s warrant of Oct. 6, 1854, or during the operation of that warrant, have held for three years such staff situations as are declared in that warrant, or have been declared by the Govt. of India under the authority of the hon. the Court of Directors, to be equivalent to regimental command, shall be promoted to col. by brevet from Nov. 28, 1854, or subsequently from the date of completion of their periods of staff employ.

The Governor General desires to notify for the information of the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces in the three presidencies, that in a royal warrant dated Oct. 14, 1858, Her Majesty has been pleased to make new regulations for the promotion of officers, which from and after the date of that warrant are to be observed, and will govern the promotion of the officers of H.M.'s Indian forces.

In conformity with the 14th Clause of her Majesty's said Warrant of the 14th of October, 1858, the Governor General directs that lieutenant-colonels who held that rank prior to the 20th of June, 1854, shall be promoted to the rank of colonel,—committees to bear date the 28th Nov., 1854—and that such of the said lieutenant-colonels as have been passed over by officers who have attained the rank of colonel in conformity with the provisions of the Royal Warrant of the 6th of October, 1854, shall be restored to the respective places which they would have occupied as colonels had they been promoted in ordinary succession under the system of periodical brevets.

The Governor General requests that recommendations for promotion, in conformity with this General Order, may be forwarded to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Military Department, without any avoidable delay, under the authority respectively of the Governments of Fort St. George and Bombay, and of the Right Hon. the Commander-in-Chief in India.

Disarming in N.W. Provinces.

By order of Rt. Hon. the Gov. gen., W. MUIR, Sec. to Govt., N.W.P.

The Victoria Cross.

Adjutant General's Office, Allahabad, Dec. 27.—The C. in C. is pleased to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross upon the undermentioned officer of H.M.'s Indian army, for distinguished gallantry displayed when serving under his lordship's immediate command, subject to H.M.'s most gracious approval:—

Lieut. T. A. Butler, 1st Bengal Fus., March 9, 1858. "Of which success the skirmishers on the other side of the river subsequently were apprised by Lieut. Butler, of the Bengal Fusiliers, who swam across the Goomtee, and climbing the parapet, remained in that position for a considerable time, under a heavy fire of musketry, until the work was occupied." (Vide Gen. Outram's Despatch in Gov. Gen.'s Gazette of April 5, 1858.)

JAPANESE REPORTERS.—At Simoda, as at Nangasacki, everyone seemed eternally to be taking notes of what everybody else was doing. Each Japanese had his breast-pockets full of note-paper, and a convenient writing apparatus stuck in his belt, and everything that was said, done, and even thought, was no doubt faithfully recorded. In Japan men do not seem to converse with one another except in formal set speeches; there is no interchange of thought by means of the tongue, but the pen is ever at work noting down their observations of one another. Sometimes we saw men comparing their notes and grunting assent or dissent from opinions or facts recorded. At first we rather felt this as a system of espionage, but we soon became accustomed to it; and provided every man wrote down what he saw and heard, it may be more satisfactory in the long-run to have to do with a nation of Captain Cutlers, who have "made a note" of everything, and so have more than their memories to trust to.—Blackwood's Magazine.

LORD STANLEY ON INDIAN FINANCE.

We cannot participate in the feeling of satisfaction generally expressed by our contemporaries on the subject of Indian Finance. Nothing, indeed, could be more lucid and in every way admirable than Lord Stanley's speech on Monday last. Every point touched by his lordship's masterly hand stood out for the moment in clear relief, and so simple and concise were his explanations that it seemed nothing was left to be desired. The smallness of the debt compared with the revenues of the country, the large income likely to accrue from the public works now in progress, and the savings to be effected by a more economical system of administration, were all placed in the most favourable light, and disposed of in the most artistic manner. The House, keenly sensible of the charms of the lucidus ordo in oratory, applauded warmly and sympathetically, and the best-informed papers on the morrow re-echoed the merited applause. And yet we are not satisfied, nor can we repel the misgivings that close in upon our mind like a dark cloud on a wintry afternoon.

In the financial year 1856-57 the expenditure and receipts may be said, in round numbers, to have nearly balanced one another. Then came the mutinies, and in the following year the outgoings were in excess of the income to the extent of £7,500,000, besides an additional million and a half deficit on stores. In the current year 1858-59 a further deficiency of £12,500 may be confidently looked for, making a total falling off in two years of more than twenty-one millions and a half. Nor is this all, for there is yet to be taken into account a future disbursement of probably a million sterling to compensate private individuals for the losses of property they have sustained. It is true that some heavy annual payments—such as the pension of the royal family at Delhi—have terminated, and that large confiscations of landed estates have also taken place. But, on the other hand, the Government, with a wise liberality, has showered rich rewards on those native princes and noblemen who remained faithful among the faithless. These two items will thus be found very nearly to cancel one another, so that no extraordinary resources need be anticipated from the forfeited estates of the rebels.

The land-tax, which yields one-half of the entire revenue of India, as Lord Stanley truly observed, is susceptible of increase in only two respects—by territorial conquests, and by cultivation of waste lands. The former mode of filling the Exchequer is not to be contemplated, and the latter is at least somewhat limited in extent, and of slow operation. Improved facilities of communication may, indeed, do much towards reclaiming large tracts of fertile land now abandoned to nature, but these very improvements will for some time to come necessitate a considerable expenditure of public money. In any case, the present exigency will receive no relief from any additional amount of land-tax. The next source of revenue is that derived from the cultivation of the poppy. By Lord Elgin's treaty the introduction of opium into the Chinese empire has become a legitimate branch of commerce, so that the charge of engaging in a contraband trade can no longer be alleged against a British Government. But the question arises, now that the Chinese have gone so far as to permit the importation of the drug subject to a fixed duty, may they not be tempted to go a little further, and sanction its cultivation within their own territories. Wherever the experiment has been made the poppy has thriven luxuriantly, but hitherto it was to the interest of the mandarins to discountenance the use of the home produce in favour of the foreign article, by the smuggling of which they realised large profits. At present the opium monopoly yields the Indian Government quite six millions a year, a sum that can no more be sacrificed to abstract considerations than the value of spirit licences, or other Excise duties, in this country.

Thus, of the two chief items of the Indian revenue, one is unelastic and the other precarious. Some other mode of taxation must, therefore, be devised to meet the growing exigencies of the times. The zemindars of Bengal Proper, under the perpetual settlement, contribute almost nominally to the coffers of the State. Why should these wealthy and insolent landowners be permitted to evade bearing their just portion of the public burdens? Let them enjoy their lands in perpetuity, but let them also pay their quota to the treasury in the shape of a property-tax, which might also be extended with advantage to the trading classes generally. The stamps might likewise be brought to yield a far larger sum than heretofore, by introducing a probate and succession duty.

At the same time, it must be acknowledged that no system of taxation with which we are acquainted will enable India to endure much longer the present strain upon her resources. The military expenses alone have risen from eleven millions and a half in 1856-57 to upwards of twenty-two millions and a half. It is therefore absolutely necessary that a reduction should be promptly effected in this respect. There are now more than 91,000 European troops in India, or double the number previous to the mutinies, besides nearly 244,000 native troops, being an excess of 12,000 men over the old army. Of this formidable force, Lord Stanley mentions only 20,000 men as being likely to be disbanded as soon as their services are no longer required. Has a judicial madness, then, fallen upon our rulers? Is their blind infatuation really destined to lose us that magnificent empire? To what purpose has all this treasure been expended, these thousands of lives lost, these terrible hardships endured, if the same danger is to continue to threaten us that has so recently dragged us to the brink of destruction? The native army had long been regarded as a standing menace to the State, but no one dared to bring the question to an issue by attempting its reduction. Circumstances, however, accomplished what the bravest and wisest scarce ventured to hope. The most formidable portion of the native army melted away, and by its own act spared the Government the necessity of taking the initiative. But, blind to the awful lessons of the past, and awake only to the fancied requirements of the moment, the local authorities have raised a force more numerous, and in its Sikh element more formidable than the one from whose clutches they had just escaped with such difficulty. And now Lord Stanley can hold out no more than the faint hope that probably 20,000 of the number will not be permanently added to the force. As to the European troops, it is vain to urge the recall of at least 40,000 men so long as my Lord Clyde is amusing himself in drawing military cordons. Until economy, however, is introduced in this radical manner into the military estimates, it is useless to talk of limiting the expenditure by the receipts. Lord Clyde and his strategic army are one of those mysteries that never cry—Enough!

The noble lord then went on to say that in one year only since the commencement of the present century has the debt ever exceeded two years' income. Compared with European States, such a proportion would, indeed, be trifling, if a comparison could be instituted on fair grounds. But there is no one point of analogy between the financial position of India and that of any of the Western Powers. We congratulate his lordship, however, on the moral courage he displayed in hinting at the moral responsibility of England for the debts of her great dependency. There can be no doubt of the fact, but statesmen have hitherto timorously shrunk from the avowal.

His next exposition was not equally candid. During the last twenty years, according to his lordship, the exports have nearly doubled, while the imports have more than doubled during the same period. But it must be borne in mind that the British India of 1857 was very different to the British India of 1837. The Punjab, Scinde, and Pegu have been annexed since then, and several minor states have been quietly absorbed. It is also worthy of note that the balance of trade has been against this country to the extent of ten to twelve millions sterling annually, so that we really have no great reason to exult over the balance-sheet of our commerce with India.

These hasty remarks, we trust, will suffice to justify the distrust with which we regard the financial prospects of our eastern empire. We certainly do not despair of them, but it must be clear to the dullest comprehension that it is not a question of a seven or a ten millions loan. So long as the present enormous scale of expenditure is maintained, India will be as a bottomless abyss. Pour in what money you please, more will still be wanted. Let the native army be at once reduced by 90,000 men, and the European by 40,000, and then there may be some hope of a final adjustment of outgoings and income. But, in any case, we protest solemnly and energetically against Lord Stanley's proposition to employ native officials instead of Europeans, on the score of economy. If the former are fit to hold office, they are entitled to be well paid; but the fact is notorious that they are morally unfit to exercise any sort of responsibility. For the sake of saving £100,000 a-year it is scarcely worth while to imperil the empire.

THE TINNEVELLY RIOT.

THE official account of the late riot at Tinnevely places all the circumstances of the case in such a clear light that it is no longer possible to misunderstand the true nature of the disturbance, or to under-rate its importance. We find an English magistrate withholding the protection of the laws from his Christian fellow-subjects in order to humour the fanaticism and insolence of a Hindoo rabble. We next observe the latter waxing still more contumacious and threatening, as the magistrate demonstrates his own timidity and absence of moral courage. That the Tehsildar and the head of the police should side with the mob is not to be wondered at, though the fact may well inspire doubts as to the advisability of employing native agency merely because it is cheaper than European. The Royal Proclamation, as might be expected, is made to justify the conduct of the Hindoo fanatics; and finally we arrive at a serious collision between the military and the populace, in which many lives are lost, owing to the irresolution of the English magistrate in the first instance.

On the 10th of last December an old man died, formerly belonging to the class of weavers called Kaikalars, but for nearly thirty years professing Christianity. An intimation was accordingly given by the Rev. Mr. Sargent to Mr. Ames, the Acting Joint Magistrate, that the body was about to be interred in consecrated ground, and it was requested that protection might be afforded to the Christians engaged in the discharge of the supreme offices to the dead. The funeral was not to be accompanied by music or any sort of display, but was to be conducted in a sober and decent manner. The application to the magistrate was necessitated by the well-known intention of the inhabitants to oppose the passage of the procession through the public streets. It might naturally be supposed that an English gentleman and a Christian magistrate would feel no hesitation in at once complying with Mr. Sargent's very reasonable request; but Mr. Ames, though a young man, is apparently a disciple of the "brahminised school." Accordingly, his first impulse is to inquire if there is no by-way by which the body of the Kafir might be smuggled away to its last resting-place, but finding this cannot be done, he eagerly listens to the remonstrances of the Tehsildar, who reminds him of an order issued five years before by the late magistrate "prohibiting the passage of the bodies of the Kaikalar caste through the Poodoo Teroo, or new street, or one of the streets on the direct road from the house of the deceased to the burial-ground." In vain did Mr. Sargent object that the deceased, being a Christian, did not belong to any caste, and that he had ceased to do so twenty-five years before Mr. Bird's order was passed. In vain, too, did he point to the fact that the bodies of natives of the lowest castes, who had died in the Dispensary, had more than once been carried through the street now interdicted to Christians. Mr. Sargent was only a missionary, and did not belong to "the services"—he might bury his dead as best he could, but the prejudices of the interesting Hindoo were entitled to more respect than the corpse of a missionary convert. So the Tehsildar was instructed to discover some hidden way to the burial-ground, since these common people had such absurd notions about preferring one place of interment to another. The native functionary was not long in executing his commission, and suggested, as the result of his explorations, that the procession should move along a path across certain paddy-fields. The fields, it is true, were under water, and the path happened to be no path at all, but simply a bank varying in breadth from four to two feet: persons walking on this bank were also liable to prosecution for trespass. However, Mr. Ames was delighted with this means of escape from the dilemma, and actually took the trouble to walk along the bank in question—though without a coffin on his shoulders—and duly reported that he had achieved the feat without wetting his shoes. Judging it unwise to protract the discussion with an obstinate blockhead, Mr. Sargent submitted to necessity, and buried the dead body in a piece of ground attached to the Mission School. The funeral accordingly took place on the evening of the 11th December, thirty-six hours after the death of the old man.

After sunset, the grave being ready, the coffin was brought down the street, and placed by the side of the grave. Then arose from the whole tumult a yell or shout of victory, which was continued for several minutes to the great annoyance and intimidation of the Christians. The catechist read only a portion of the appointed service, being fearful that the people would break out into some act of violence before the body could be disposed of. The coffin was next lowered into the grave, and that became the signal for another general shout; which was renewed again with clapping of hands along the whole line of the thousands of spectators, when at the last the earth was being put into the grave.

The Tehsildar and Moonsiff were present throughout these disgraceful proceedings, which they never attempted to repress, and Mr. Ames, we presume, was complacently smoking his cheroot, or enjoying his "forty winks" in his verandah, after a late dinner.

In the letter in which he apprised the magistrate of his final decision with regard to the interment of the deceased, Mr. Sargent remarked that it would be highly inconvenient at that late hour to appeal to the Sessions Court. It will scarcely be credited that Mr. Ames understood—if that word may be used in speaking of a man void of understanding—Mr. Sargent's expression to be equivalent to an appeal to the Sessions Judge, to whom he therefore forwarded all the papers relating to the case. The latter functionary carelessly sanctioned the irregularity, but ruled that the Poodoo Teroo was a public street, and, therefore, open to the passage of all men, alive or dead; and he further observed that if the Acting Joint Magistrate apprehended a disturbance, it was his duty to take efficient measures to prevent a breach of the peace. This decision was, unfortunately, given too late to meet the case in point, and a week afterwards Mr. Ames made the notable discovery that Mr. Sargent's letter did not contain a formal appeal to the higher authority, and, consequently, the ruling of the Sessions Judge became so much waste paper. The populace, it seems, regarded this reversal as the result of a timid deference to their wishes, and were thereby emboldened to commit a more serious riot on a similar occasion a few days later. It is said that they were further encouraged by the misconstruction they put on her Majesty's Proclamation. They believed, or affected to believe, that it contained a clause to the following effect: "that whatever the Hindoo community asserted was a custom would be absolutely upheld, and that no notice would be taken of any act of theirs in trying to uphold it." A Christian patient, in the Government Dispensary, happened to die of cholera on the evening of the 21st December. On the following day the corpse was carried out for interment in the public burial-ground, the road to which passes round two sides of the Tinnevely Pagoda. Encouraged by their former success, the mob determined to oppose the passage of the dead body, and collecting in crowds easily beat back the police. But this time they had to deal with a magistrate of a very different stamp to Mr. Ames. Mr. Levinge at once turned out his whole police force, and, when he found that insufficient, called in the military from Palamcottah. The latter, being well handled, behaved admirably, and fired upon the rioters without hesitation. Six were killed upon the spot, four died of their wounds the next day, and nineteen others are known to have been wounded. The rabble, however, fought fiercely to the last, and several men of the sepoy detachment were severely wounded. Mr. Levinge and his military coadjutors are entitled to the highest praise for their firmness and decision in the hour of need, but how different might have been the result had Mr. Ames still held office in Tinnevely. One such man is able to do more mischief in an hour than can be remedied by a dozen discreet magistrates in a year. It is impossible to estimate the evil that may result from a single act of weakness in dealing with a people of an impulsive and puerile temperament. Power is the only principle they respect. Unfit to rule themselves, they must be made to tremble and obey. All Benthamite theories are as much thrown away upon such a race as pearls upon swine; but if they cannot be taught to love, they may be brought to fear and respect, the uncompromising justice and impartiality of their Christian governors.

PRIZE MONEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—May I hope you will, in your next issue, give your readers some information regarding the intentions of the Indian Government with respect to the prize money so justly due to the Indian army? It is a subject of much interest to most of your readers, and your giving information will oblige, yours faithfully,

[The delay that has taken place is, undoubtedly, most discreditable to the Indian Government, though quite consistent with their dilatoriness in the compensation question.—ED. A. I. M.]

TROS TYRIUSVE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—As a subscriber to your Journal may I ask you, while you are drawing the attention of the authorities to the injustice experienced by the Indian Medical Service by the inferior position in which they are placed in comparison with their brethren of the Royal army, to notice also the certainly no less injustice experienced by the officers of the Engineers and Artillery of the Indian army, who, on the 24th of August last, were promoted to the rank of second captains to assimilate the two services; but yet to this moment (in England), although six months have elapsed, have received not the least advance of pay beyond their subaltern's 6s. 10d. per diem, while their brethren of the Royal Engineers and Artillery of the same rank are receiving 11s. 1d. per diem. There are now not less than twenty-three second captains in this country, enjoying the rank of captain, and receiving the pay of subalterns, and these officers some of them of fifteen years' service. To every inquiry made on the subject at the India House the reply is—"The subject is under consideration." Wherefore? A second captain in the Royal army ranks with and is paid the same (a fraction more or less either way) as a captain of the line—the "second" is only a regimental distinction. Why, then, is the Indian second captain to be otherwise viewed; indeed, to be esteemed no more than a subaltern?

The fact is, one is actually a loser by the rank. It has generally been usual, for instance, for a physician to give medical advice to a military subaltern free of charge, or at reduced fees, and I have known the same privilege extended to his family, if a married man; but being now a captain, if I call in or upon a medical man for advice he expects a full fee; and, indeed, in many other ways advanced rank calls for increased expenditure. But the question after all is—Is not (all being alike the Queen's army now) an Indian second captain positively entitled to the same pay as an English second captain? I make no doubt many, like myself, are finding themselves and their arrangements sadly compromised by hearing on their return to this country that, instead of getting increase of pay with their rank, they have still to subsist on 6s. 10d. per diem, including the payments to their numerous funds, and that, as in my own case, after being upwards of fourteen years in the service. The whole business is a gross injustice, and it would be something towards mending it if you would draw attention to the matter. If increase of pay is to be given, why not at once? Officers have come home expecting it.

I see it stated in the United Service Gazette of last week that the pay of subalterns in the Royal Army is to be raised to 10s. per diem immediately. Are subalterns in the Royal army to receive more pay than second captains in the Indian army? There are now in the Indian army several second captains who have been made brevet majors. Were either of these officers to return to England, we should behold the anomaly of a field officer drawing a subaltern's pay.

[The injustice complained of by our correspondent is transparent. It is equally clear that the palmy days of the Indian army have gone never to return. He who plants and he who gathers the fruit is no longer the same man. The Indian officer receives complimentary rank, but the Royal officer carries off the substantial prizes. There is to be no difference for the future between the two services, except in favour of the latter. Naturally, therefore, there is no intention of giving anything more than subaltern's pay to the second captains of Engineers and Artillery.—ED. A. I. M.]

A NATURAL QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Could you favour an old subscriber of seventeen years' standing with the information if under the new regime of Sandhurst the sons of retired officers of the late H. E. I. C. Service are eligible to admission on the same footing as those in the Royal army? To many similarly situated as myself, compelled to retire from ill-health, it would be indeed a great boon; as although the establishment of Addiscombe is open to them, yet it is out of the power of many to avail themselves of that privilege from want of means.—Your inserting this will much oblige

GHUREER ADMEE.

[The two services are placed on the same footing in this wise only—the former privileges of the Indian army are thrown open to the Royals, who preserve in addition their own, and among them the exclusive admission to Sandhurst.

ED. A. I. M.]

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 11.

THE NATIVE PRINCES OF INDIA.

Mr. V. SMITH asked whether any reward or mark of honour had been conferred upon those native princes or their ministers who had proved faithful to her Majesty during the late Indian mutiny.

LORD STANLEY replied, I fully concur in what the right honourable gentleman has said, that the whole course of recent events has confirmed the view of that school of Indian politicians who have always maintained the importance of keeping up the independence and dignity of these native States as against the modern theories of annexation, and have contended that we should find them the most faithful allies and supporters in case of war. The subject of rewards to our native allies has not escaped the attention of the Government in this country. Two despatches, one dated the 28th of July, from the late Court of Directors; and the other the 31st of December, addressed by me to Lord Canning, have been sent to the Government of India, naming certain native princes as specially deserving of reward, and calling for a report upon the claims of others. That general report we have not yet received, and I need not tell the right honourable gentleman, or the House, that in a matter of this kind it is impossible for us in this country to act without previous consultation with the local Government in India. Rewards, however, have been given to the Rajah of Puteala, by a cession of territory worth two lacs of rupees a-year, and something besides; to the Rajah of Jheend territory worth one lac; to the Rajah of Nubba territory worth one lac; and to the Rajah of Chirkaree some land of which the value is not known. The Guicowar has received a remission of the tribute or subsidy of three lacs of rupees annually which he was bound to pay for the support of a force of irregular cavalry. That subsidy has been remitted with the sanction of this country, by the advice and upon the representation of Lord Canning. The cases of Scindiah, Holkar, and the Nizam are specially mentioned in one—I think in both—of the despatches to which I have referred. That of the Rajah of Gwalior is at present under consideration. With regard to Nepaul, the House is aware that a distinguished mark of honour has been conferred upon the able minister of that State. It has also been in contemplation to show our sense of the assistance which we derived from the Government of Nepaul by restoring a portion of territory in Oude formerly separated from Nepaul. A correspondence has taken place upon that subject, but in a matter of that kind much discretion must be left to the authorities in India, and I have not yet heard whether any final arrangements have been made with regard to it. I can only remark, in conclusion, that I am as fully impressed, and I believe that the Government here and the Government in India are as fully impressed, as the right hon. gentleman can be with the importance of not destroying the grace and the value of these gifts by deferring them until a time when the memory of the services for which they are the rewards shall cease to be present to the minds of the natives.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 14.

INDIAN DECORATIONS.

Mr. BLAND inquired of the Secretary of State for War whether the troops who served under Sir Hugh Rose in the campaign in Central India would be included amongst those to whom the Indian medal was to be given; whether clasps would be given for Jhansi and Calpee; and whether the Maharajah Scindiah would be permitted to present the star he has promised to those of the British force who caused his restoration by the retaking of Gwalior.

General PEEL begged to inform the hon. member that the troops serving under Sir Hugh Rose would be entitled to the Indian medal which was to be given. As regarded those who had taken part in the actions of Jhansi and Calpee, he should avail himself of the earliest opportunity of representing their claims and taking the pleasure of her Majesty upon them. With respect to the third part of the hon. member's question, he could only say that no application had been made to him for the accordance of the Royal permission to wear the star of the Maharajah Scindiah.
